House Okays Senate Plan To Arbitrate

Strike Called Off After Work Rules Notices Removed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress Wednesday overwhelmingly but reluctantly approved emergency legislation eliminating the threat of a nationwide rail strike for at least another six months.

Ninety minutes after final action in the House, President Kennedy signed the bill into law at 6:14 p.m. EDT Wednesday, a little less than six hours before a crippling rail walkout was scheduled to begin.

Even before Kennedy received the bill at the White House, the major U.S. rail systems were pulling down notices of the work rules changes that had threatened to set off a strike. The five train-operating unions followed suit by canceling their orders for a strike at one minute past midnight.

The union leaders called Congress' action "regrettable and a backward step" that may change the course of labor-management relations.

Railroads Praise Congress

The railroads hailed Congress' "timely and constructive handling of this crucial legislation" and asked the unions to "join us in good-faith collective bargaining" to settle non-arbitrated issues.

Final congressional action came on House approval of a Senate bill to refer the two major issues in the long and bitter rail work rules dispute to binding arbitration.

It was the first time in memory that Congress had ordered arbitration of a peacetime labor dispute.

The House made its own bill conform to one passed Tuesday by the Senate and then approved it by a vote of 286 to 66. Then the House vacated this action and, by unanimous consent, approved the Senate bill.

Seven-Member Board

A seven - member arbitration board will rule within 90 days on the major issues of firemen's jobs and the size and makeup of train and yard crews. Strikes and lockouts would be prohibited for the two-year life of the panel's decisions.

Other secondary issues such as pay schedules and job jurisdiction would be left to unlimited collective bargaining, with a strike over them banned for 180 days.

Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz promptly announced that railroads had cancelled plans to impose the disputed work rules at 12:01 a.m. Thursday, a move that would have triggered the strike.

The American Association of Railroads expressed relief and "the nation's gratitude to the Congress for its timely and constructive handling of this crucial legislation."

Rocket Hits Earth As 'Destruct' Fails

WHITE SANDS, N.M. (UPI) — A Little Joe II booster rocket roared to an altitude of 24,000 feet over White Sands missile range Wednesday and impacted some nine miles away after an attempt to destroy it in flight failed.

It was the first test firing in the Project Apollo program of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). Officials had no immediate explanation for the failure of two explosive charges to blow open the casing of the rocket engines.

At Least Seven Miners Survive Blast In Utah Pit

Bodies Of 3 Men Found; 15 Missing

MOAB, Utah (AP)—Seven desperate men who built makeshift barricades against deadly gases were found alive Wednesday in a 2,712-foot-deep mine where 25 miners were trapped Tuesday.

Rescuers brought up two of the men 27 hours after an explosion struck the mine, and said there were five others alive and perhaps more. Three bodies were found.

The rescue effort, plagued by gas, water and mechanical trouble with a lift bucket, was painfully slow. Four rescuers were stuck for an hour when a bucket hung up. When they finally reached the surface, the men were still wearing their oxygen masks and had to be helped from the bucket, which was half filled with water.

Wives, Relatives Keep Vigil

Officials of the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. mine said the barricades probably saved the lives of miners Donald Hanna, Paul McKinney and their five companions in the farthest reaches of the mine, one of the deepest ever sunk on the North American continent.

The other five—and some new fears were being expressed for them—were not identified. Anxious wives and relatives kept an agonizing vigil.

Hanna said he headed a crew which included McKinney and the other five men. They built bulkheads to block off the smoke immediately after the explosion.

"We waited behind the bulkheads until 7:30 a.m. today," Hanna said. He and McKinney made their way through the debris, found a broken air vent and repaired it.

"I think we saved those five guys. I'm pretty sure they are getting air," Hanna said. He said the other five have water, also.

"I'm pretty sure they can hold out in there for at least 24 hours," he added.

Voice Contact Made

Rescuers said they made voice contact with nine men after an all-night effort. One trapped miner said there were eight others in his area but it later developed there were only six.

Hanna and McKinney were found in a tunnel about 30 feet from the bottom of the shaft, which was being drilled with help from dynamite toward a rich deposit of potash, used in commercial fertilizer.

"Let's get the hell out of here," Hanna told his rescuers.

He and McKinney were dazed, their eyes streamed tears from acid burns and physical ordeal. They said they thought some others—they weren't sure how many—had also put up frantic barricades to keep fresh air in, bad air out.

Sadistic Killer Of Two Young Women Sought

NEW YORK (UPI)—The niece of author Philip Wylie and another young woman were "sadistically stabbed" to death Wednesday, apparently by a burglar, in the bedroom of a fashionable East Side apartment they shared with another girl.

Slashed to death with three kitchen knives were Janice Wylie 21, who worked for Newsweek magazine, and Emily Hoffert, 23, who was to have begun teaching school in suburban Valley Stream next month.

Miss Wylie's uncle, who lives in Miami, Fla., is the author of such novels as "A Generation of Vipers" and "Night Unto Night."

Deputy Police Commissioner Walter Arm said the young women were "sadistically stabbed" by kitchen knives wielded by their assailant.

Their bloodstained bodies were found by Wylie's brother, Max, also an author, who lives in a nearby apartment. The victims were lying between a twin bed in a bedroom of the luxury four room apartment on 88th Street between Madison and Park avenues.

The victims' roommate, Patricia Tolles, 23, told police she last saw the two women about 9:30 A.M. EDT Wednesday. When she returned from work Wednesday night, she said, she found the apartment in disarray and emmediately went to the nearby apartment of Miss Wylie's father, who lives only two blocks away.

She and Wylie returned to the apartment, which the three had rented just four weeks ago, and discovered the bodies.

Police said the victims' hands had been bound together with sheeting and they had been repeatedly stabbed. Authorities were unable to determine how many times the killer struck because the bodies were "too bloodstained," Arm said.

Two Jet Tankers Reported Missing

MIAMI (UPI)—Two Air Force KC135 jet tankers were reported missing Wednesday night on a refueling mission over the Atlantic, and a searchers reported what appeared to be an oil slick and a floating life jacket.

The big tankers, military versions of commercial Boeing 707 jets, normally carry a crew of four.

Rally Closes With Praise By President

Vast Throng Hears Leaders Demand Equal Rights 'Now'

By STEVEN GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A highly emotional but orderly throng of moer than 200,000 demonstrators demanding "jobs and freedom" for Negroes Wednesday staged America's biggest civil rights rally beneath the brooding figure of Abraham Lincoln.

The Negro and white demonstrators converged on the capital from across the country, from tiny hamlets and big cities. They opened the huge rally with a festive picnic-like air and concluded it in an impassioned mood of almost religious fervor.

At the end of a long and weary day and with words of praise from President Kennedy, they streamed out of the capital by bus, train, plane and auto in the same disciplined manner that prevailed throughout the "March on Washington."

Kennedy Issues Statement

The President, after meeting for 75 minutes with the 10 leaders of the demonstration, issued a special statement declaring that "one cannot help but be impressed with the deep fervor and the quiet dignity" of the demonstrators.

Declaring that the march had advanced the cause of 20 million Negroes and all mankind, the President pledged the government to push for new civil rights laws, and to continue its efforts for more jobs "and to eliminate discrimination in employment practices."

Those were among the 10 civil rights demands laid down by the leaders of the demonstration before the throng that massed on the Lincoln Memorial grounds after they had marched from their gathering point at the Washington Monument.

Want Action Now

The theme was action "now." Speaker after speaker declared that the Negro had waited too long for equal rights—until finally came the most passion-filled speech of all by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

"The time is now," he shouted to the roars of the crowd. "The time is now."

Just before he spoke the mass of humanity that stretched nearly a mile along Washington's historic mall had been put in a revival mood with singer Mahalia Jackson's rendition of two songs, "I've Been Duped and I've Been Scorned," and "I'm Going to My Lord When I Get Home."

Khrush Spikes Speculation He Plans U.S. Trip

BRIONI, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev Wednesday squelched speculation that he plans a trip to the United States this year.

He said he will go to Cuba "whenever I feel like it."

Khrushchev lost his temper frequently with Western newsmen in a news conference and refused to answer some of their questions.

Western observers had said Khrushchev, who is holding talks with President Tito on this Adriatic island, had been considering a trip to New York to attend the United Nations General Assembly next month, and possibly a trip to Italy.

Khrushchev, in a joint news conference with Tito, did not mention Italy but said he has "no plans to go to the United Nations General Assembly this year." His last U.N. visit, which caused an uproar and an unprecedented security problem for New York police, was in 1960.

As to Cuba, which Khrushchev never has visited, he said: "I will go with pleasure whenever I feel like it."

Cuban Premier Fidel Castro spent several weeks in the Soviet Union last spring and re-extended an invitation to Khrushchev to come to the island.

Tito told the conference he may attend the General Assembly after a Latin American tour beginning next month. But his guest dominated the proceedings.

Asked by a British correspondent if he found Yugoslav workers lived better than Soviet workers, Khrushchev snapped back: "Who are you?" and used vulgar language in refusing to answer.

Volunteer May Look For Bova

'Mike' Picks Up No Sounds Of Life

SHEPPTON, Pa. (UPI)—Mining officials said Wednesday they may let a volunteer go down and look for Louis Bova in the compartment where he was trapped 16 days ago by a cave-in more than 300 feet underground. There was little hope he was still alive.

Dave Fellin, 58, and Henry Throne, 28, who were rescued Tuesday, both said they believed that Bova was alive but too weak from hunger to move or talk.

There were plenty of volunteers ready to make the dangerous trip down. At least 20 miners including Fellin and Bova's brother John, have said they wanted to go.

A 12½ inch hole was drilled early Wednesday into the compartment where Bova was believed to be. A super-sensitive microphone was lowered, but there were no sounds of life.

The hole will have to be reamed out wide enough for a man to be lowered. This, officials said, will take at least until Saturday.

Gordon Smith deputy secretary of mines, said the volunteer has not yet been chosen.

"If I have my way, no one will know he's down there until he comes up again," Smith said. "If it were announced in advance, his wife probably would go crazy. I wouldn't want my wife to know if I were going down there."

In the meantime, Smith said, a blinking light will be lowered down the shaft and food will be set beside it. This is so the light will attract Bova if he is presently unconscious and should wake up, or if he is crawling around in a shaft looking for another way out and returns.

The only sounds picked up by the mike was an occasional rock or pebble falling or shifting position in tht debris cluttering the shaft, slope and passageways of the mine some 300 feet below ground.

The amplification made the shifting earth sound like a gigantic earthquake over loudspeakers and earphone headsets monitored by rescue workers.

"The sound test was negative," Dr. H. Beecher Charmbury, state secretary of mines said. "We have no evidence of life as a result of the sound test."

Shortly after the microphones were pulled back to the surface, a specially designed camera was lowered into the hole to take pictures.

"We will show the pictures to Fellin and Throne," Charmbury said. "If there is any evidence that Bova is alive, and if the hole appears from the pictures to be safe, we will possibly call for volunteers and send a man down to investigate."

Boos For Barnett

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The droning voice over the public address system was reading off a list of persons lost in Wednesday's civil rights throng when one name aroused a chorus of deafening boos.

Someone had slipped "Gov. Ross Barnett of Mississippi" into the list of the missing.

One Cop-Killing Suspect Slain, Other Gives Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Falco, 23, died in a hail of bullets while trying to fight his way out of a police trap Wednesday. Hours later, Thomas (Rabbi Tom) Tarantino, sought with Falco in the slaying of two New Jersey policemen, surrendered to police.

Tarantino, 25-year-old ex - convict from Brooklyn, gave himself up at a police precinct.

Falco and Tarantino had been sought in the Lodi, N.J., executions last Monday when they forced two policemen to undress in a tavern and then shot them.

Falco died swinging a beer bottle and cursing detectives who cornered him in a hotel room.

Falco, a clear-cut, stocky, dark haired youth who looked more like a high school football hero than a killer, also was wanted in a third murder—that of a 19-year-old Robert Munos, an apprentice pressman of the New York Times.

He was surprised in his sleep on the 25th floor of the hotel Manhattan shortly after a police informer saw him check in. A detective woke him with a revolver at his throat, but Falco leaped up and fought like an enraged tiger, grappling for the weapon as the detective shot time and again into his body.

More detectives rushed into the room. Falco tossed one of them over his shoulder. He was shot three more times and collapsed in a corner o' the room.

Falco and Tarantino were accused of killing Det. Sgt. Peter Voto, 40, father of three children and rookie patrolman Gary Tedesco, 21.

Fleeing Man Shot By Reds

BERLIN (UPI) — Communist border guards shot a man who tried to escape to the West by ramming an East Germany army ambulance through border barriers on the Western German end of the Autobahn, police reported here Wednesday.

Authorities said Communist police fire brought the ambulance, bearing Red Cross markings, to a halt after it crashed through the first of three steel barriers late Tuesday night. The driver leaped out and tried to run the remaining 400 yards to the border. But West Berlin police said he was shot down and may have been killed.

It was considered possible that other fleeing East Germans were in the ambulance but none were observed. Nor could eyewitness determine whether the refugee in the ambulance was a soldier or a civilian. They reported to police they caught fleeting glimpses as they left the Communist checkpoint of Marienborn on the West German border for the drive to West Berlin.

Special "Weeks"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy issued proclamations Wednesday designating the week beginning Oct. 6 as National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, the week beginning Oct. 13 as National School Lunch Week, and Monday, Oct. 7, as Child Health Day.

Fellin Tells Of Strange Incidents While Entombed In Mine

EDITOR'S NOTE—For 14 days until they were rescued early Tuesday morning David Fellin and Henry Throne were entombed in a Pennsylvania mine. Throne said that during their ordeal they saw lights, figures of people and a door. Fellin also says the strange incidents happened; his mind was clear and "we saw what we saw." In an exclusive article for The Associated Press Fellin tells of a life underground few men have shared.

Copyright, 1963, by The Associated Press

By DAVID FELLIN

HAZLETON, Pa. (AP) — Now they're trying to tell me those things were hallucinations, that we imagined it all.

We didn't. Our minds weren't playing tricks on us. I've been a practical, hard-headed coal miner all my life. My mind was clear down there in the mine. It's still clear.

We saw what we saw. These things happened. I can't explain them. I'm almost afraid to think what might be the explanation.

For example, on the fourth or fifth day, we saw this door although we had no light from above or from our helmets. The door was covered in bright blue light. It was very clear, better than sunlight.

Two men, ordinary looking men, not miners, opened the door. We could see beautiful marble steps on the other side. We saw this for some time and then we didn't see it.

One thing I was always sure of. I knew in all those 14 days that we'd get out. After four or five days when there was no sign of anybody coming down from above I got mad. But I was convinced we'd get out even if I had to dig us out myself.

A funny thing occurred on that very first day, Aug. 13. We (Henry Throne and Louis Bova) hadn't been down in the mine five minutes that morning when my stomach started feeling a little out of whack.

I said, "Let's go out for an hour or so."

But the boys persuaded me to stay and get some work done first. If I hadn't listened to them, if we'd have gone up then, would that cave-in have happened anyway? Would we have been trapped another time?

So we stayed, down at the tunnel's bottom, more than 300 feet down. Louis was on one side and me and Hank on the other. I'd walk back and forth directing their work.

Louis reached up to press the buzzer for the buggy (a small wagon which carries coal on tracks up to the surface). I was watching him. He pressed the buzzer and stepped back. Then it happened.

Suddenly everything was coming down—timber, coal, rocks. We could see it because the power line was still working. The stuff was rushing down between us and Louis. Then it was quiet for maybe half a minute. Then the rush started again. It went on like this, starting and stopping for some time.

I was trying as hard as I could to concentrate, to listen, to judge how much of the shaft was being filled by the cave-in. I figured it filled up about 75 feet from the bottom.

In the first couple of minutes, the light from the power line went off. My heart jumped into my mouth. I kept thinking, did they shut the power off up top? Otherwise it could short and the wire might burn and fire would kill us in three minutes down there.

But it didn't burn. We stayed that way, sitting there, listening as hard as we could for more rushes in the dark. We sat there against the wall that way 14 to 16 hours in a place about 6 feet long, 5 feet wide and about 3 feet high.

We didn't talk much. Hank was a new man and I only knew him maybe two months. We didn't have much to talk about.

We got thirsty. We heard water in the drainage holes about 10 feet down in the floor of the tunnel. We tried to dig for it about three hours and got nowhere.

"Hank," I said, "let's sit down and talk this over and see what we can do."

Hank said, "Let's do SOMETHING! Let's get out of here."

We found a hatchet with a broken handle and a crowbar and a saw that wouldn't saw. We found an old rasp and I used it to file the saw and sharpen the hatchet. Now we were back in business. We had some tools to probe around looking for a way out, but we never found one.

We found a plastic jug with some good water in it. But I knew it wouldn't be enough. I knew it'd be a few days before we could get out. I took a four-foot pipe lying there, plugged up one end with electrical tape I had in my pocket and shoved a piece of cable through it tying it at the other end. Then I jammed some rags into that end. Then I dropped the pipe into the drainage hole and when I pulled it up we had a four-foot pipe of water.

Sure, it was sulphur water, but it was water that would keep us alive. The first time we tried it we spit it out. The second time it stayed down. I told Hank we'd drink only about a quarter swallow at a time. We had to ration it.

The worst physical thing those first days was the cold. It must have been around 38 above. I was wearing overalls and on to, two

Gordon Smith deputy secretary of mines, said the volunteer has not yet been chosen.

"If I have my way, no one will know he's down there until he comes up again," Smith said. "If it were announced in advance, his wife probably would go crazy. I wouldn't want my wife to know if I were going down there."

In the meantime, Smith said, a blinking light will be lowered down the shaft and food will be set beside it. This is so the light will attract Bova if he is presently unconscious and should wake up, or if he is crawling around in a shaft looking for another way out and returns.

The only sounds picked up by the mike was an occasional rock or pebble falling or shifting position in tht debris cluttering the shaft, slope and passageways of the mine some 300 feet below ground.

The amplification made the shifting earth sound like a gigantic earthquake over loudspeakers and earphone headsets monitored by rescue workers.

"The sound test was negative," Dr. H. Beecher Charmbury, state secretary of mines said. "We have no evidence of life as a result of the sound test."

Shortly after the microphones were pulled back to the surface, a specially designed camera was lowered into the hole to take pictures.

"We will show the pictures to Fellin and Throne," Charmbury said. "If there is any evidence that Bova is alive, and if the hole appears from the pictures to be safe, we will possibly call for volunteers and send a man down to investigate."

Boos For Barnett

Someone had slipped "Gov. Ross Barnett of Mississippi" into the list of the missing.

One Cop-Killing Suspect Slain, Other Gives Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Falco, 23, died in a hail of bullets while trying to fight his way out of a police trap Wednesday. Hours later, Thomas (Rabbi Tom) Tarantino, sought with Falco in the slaying of two New Jersey policemen, surrendered to police.

Tarantino, 25-year-old ex - convict from Brooklyn, gave himself up at a police precinct.

Falco and Tarantino had been sought in the Lodi, N.J., executions last Monday when they forced two policemen to undress in a tavern and then shot them.

Falco died swinging a beer bottle and cursing detectives who cornered him in a hotel room.

Falco, a clear-cut, stocky, dark haired youth who looked more like a high school football hero than a killer, also was wanted in a third murder—that of a 19-year-old Robert Munos, an apprentice pressman of the New York Times.

He was surprised in his sleep on the 25th floor of the hotel Manhattan shortly after a police informer saw him check in. A detective woke him with a revolver at his throat, but Falco leaped up and fought like an enraged tiger, grappling for the weapon as the detective shot time and again into his body.

More detectives rushed into the room. Falco tossed one of them over his shoulder. He was shot three more times and collapsed in a corner o the room.

Falco and Tarantino were accused of killing Det. Sgt. Peter Voto, 40, father of three children and rookie patrolman Gary Tedesco, 21.

Rocket Hits Earth As 'Destruct' Fails

WHITE SANDS, N.M. (UPI) — A Little Joe II booster rocket roared to an altitude of 24,000 feet over White Sands missile range Wednesday and impacted some nine miles away after an attempt to destroy it in flight failed.

It was the first test firing in the Project Apollo program of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). Officials had no immediate explanation for the failure of two explosive charges to blow open the casing of the rocket engines.

Fleeing Man Shot By Reds

BERLIN (UPI) — Communist border guards shot a man who tried to escape to the West by ramming an East Germany army ambulance through border barriers on the Western German end of the Autobahn, police reported here Wednesday.

Authorities said Communist police fire brought the ambulance, bearing Red Cross markings, to a halt after it crashed through the first of three steel barriers late Tuesday night. The driver leaped out and tried to run the remaining 400 yards to the border. But West Berlin police said he was shot down and may have been killed.

It was considered possible that other fleeing East Germans were in the ambulance but none were observed. Nor could eyewitness determine whether the refugee in the ambulance was a soldier or a civilian. They reported to police they caught fleeting glimpses as they left the Communist checkpoint of Marienborn on the West German border for the drive to West Berlin.

Fellin Tells Of Strange Incidents While Entombed In Mine

EDITOR'S NOTE—For 14 days until they were rescued early Tuesday morning David Fellin and Henry Throne were entombed in a Pennsylvania mine. Throne said that during their ordeal they saw lights, figures of people and a door. Fellin also says the strange incidents happened; his mind was clear and "we saw what we saw." In an exclusive article for The Associated Press Fellin tells of a life underground few men have shared.

By DAVID FELLIN

HAZLETON, Pa. (AP) — Now they're trying to tell me those things were hallucinations, that we imagined it all.

We didn't. Our minds weren't playing tricks on us. I've been a practical, hard-headed coal miner all my life. My mind was clear down there in the mine. It's still clear.

We saw what we saw. These things happened. I can't explain them. I'm almost afraid to think what might be the explanation.

For example, on the fourth or fifth day, we saw this door although we had no light from above or from our helmets. The door was covered in bright blue light. It was very clear, better than sunlight.

Two men, ordinary looking men, not miners, opened the door. We could see beautiful marble steps on the other side. We saw this for some time and then we didn't see it.

One thing I was always sure of. I knew in all those 14 days that we'd get out. After four or five days when there was no sign of anybody coming down from above I got mad. But I was convinced we'd get out even if I had to dig us out myself.

A funny thing occurred on that very first day, Aug. 13. We (Henry Throne and Louis Bova) hadn't been down in the mine five minutes that morning when my stomach started feeling a little out of whack.

I said, "Let's go out for an hour or so."

But the boys persuaded me to stay and get some work done first. If I hadn't listened to them, if we'd have gone up then, would that cave-in have happened anyway? Would we have been trapped another time?

So we stayed, down at the tunnel's bottom, more than 300 feet down. Louis was on one side and me and Hank on the other. I'd walk back and forth directing their work.

Louis reached up to press the buzzer for the buggy (a small wagon which carries coal on tracks up to the surface). I was watching him. He pressed the buzzer and stepped back. Then it happened.

Suddenly everything was coming down—timber, coal, rocks. We could see it because the power line was still working. The stuff was rushing down between us and Louis. Then it was quiet for maybe half a minute. Then the rush started again. It went on like this, starting and stopping for some time.

I was trying as hard as I could to concentrate, to listen, to judge how much of the shaft was being filled by the cave-in. I figured it filled up about 75 feet from the bottom.

In the first couple of minutes, the light from the power line went off. My heart jumped into my mouth. I kept thinking, did they shut the power off up top? Otherwise it could short and the wire might burn and fire would kill us in three minutes down there.

But it didn't burn. We stayed that way, sitting there, listening as hard as we could for more rushes in the dark. We sat there against the wall that way 14 to 16 hours in a place about 6 feet long, 5 feet wide and about 3 feet high.

We didn't talk much. Hank was a new man and I only knew him maybe two months. We didn't have much to talk about.

We got thirsty. We heard water in the drainage holes about 10 feet down in the floor of the tunnel. We tried to dig for it about three hours and got nowhere.

"Hank," I said, "let's sit down and talk this over and see what we can do."

Hank said, "Let's do SOMETHING! Let's get out of here."

We found a hatchet with a broken handle and a crowbar and a saw that wouldn't saw. We found an old rasp and I used it to file the saw and sharpen the hatchet. Now we were back in business. We had some tools to probe around looking for a way out, but we never found one.

We found a plastic jug with some good water in it. But I knew it wouldn't be enough. I knew it'd be a few days before we could get out. I took a four-foot pipe lying there, plugged up one end with electrical tape I had in my pocket and shoved a piece of cable through it tying it at the other end. Then I jammed some rags into that end. Then I dropped the pipe into the drainage hole and when I pulled it up we had a four-foot pipe of water.

Sure, it was sulphur water, but it was water that would keep us alive. The first time we tried it we spit it out. The second time it stayed down. I told Hank we'd drink only about a quarter swallow at a time. We had to ration it.

The worst physical thing those first days was the cold. It must have been around 38 above. I was wearing overalls and on to two

Leaders Of March Hear Assurances From Legislators

Talks Described As Friendly, Useful

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the march on Washington called on the top men in Congress and got some reassuring words Wednesday on prospects for passage of a strong civil rights bill this year.

The delegation spent two hours closeted with House and Senate leaders at three separate sessions. Lawmakers and marchers called their talks friendly and useful. But there was no sign that the demonstration had lessened Southern opposition to such bills.

The demonstration a mile away appeared to quiet some of the normal buzz of activity around the Capitol.

House attention focused on a resolution designed to avert a nationwide railroad walkout at midnight. Because of the deadline, the House went right to work on the measure and skipped the normal round of speechmaking.

A. Philip Randolph, the march director, led the delegation that met with congressional leaders.

The marchers conferred first with Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana. Mansfield said after that half-hour session no commitments were sought and none given.

Then they spent 40 minutes with Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and House GOP Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana.

Their final—and longest—congressional visit was a 50-minute meeting with House Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass., and House Democratic Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma.

McCormack told the delegation he thinks prospects are good for passage of a fair employment practices bill and a broadened provision authorizing government intervention in civil rights cases —if they are approved by the House Judiciary Committee.

The speaker said he told the marchers he would discuss those provisions with Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., of the Judiciary Committee and other congressional leaders.

Dirksen said he told the delegation he supports all President Kennedy's civil rights proposals except the measure which would ban discrimination in public accommodations.

Dirksen said he doesn't think the giant demonstration will either help or hinder backers of the civil rights bill.

Halleck said he hadn't offered any commitments.

School Budget Slash Apparent Law Violation

BALTIMORE (AP)—The attorney general's office said Wednesday the Montgomery County Council apparently violated Maryland school laws when it cut the Montgomery school board's budget.

Robert Murphy, assistant attorney general, said the $435 million cut appeared to be "a violation of school laws."

The Montgomery County Council of Parent-Teachers Associations filed a petition Aug. 8 with the Maryland State Board of Education.

"We have advised the State Board of Education to hold a hearing to determine whether the allegations (of the PTA) are true," Murphy said at the board's regular meeting Wednesday.

The board unanimously decided to hold a hearing on the controversy Oct. 9.

The petition stated that the county council stepped outside its legal bounds because it determined educational policy by making severe budget cuts.

In other action today, Prettyman asked the state board to reword its July 2 directive that no county education officials transfer "any employe personnel records containing fingerprint cards or other information to any local or state law enforcement agency. . ."

The state board issued its directive to prevent the wholesale transfer of private records to other agencies.

Senators Consider Treaty Testimony

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has wrapped up its public hearings on the limited nuclear test ban treaty and goes behind closed doors to begin its final study.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., closed the 2½ weeks of public testimony Tuesday and called members to discuss procedures for bringing the pact up on the floor for a vote on ratification.

Sens. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R-Iowa, and Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, proposed calling more witnesses before the committee acts on the treaty.

Hickenlooper said he would ask for a formal committee vote on his demand that the administration supply it with all correspondence between Moscow and Washington leading up to the signing of the treaty banning all nuclear tests except underground.

Color Barrier Quietly Lifted At Gwynn Oak

BALTIMORE (AP)—Gwynn Oak Amusement Park, scene of mass arrests during civil rights demonstrations last month, was quietly integrated Wednesday.

A 28-year-old Negro clerk for the Social Security Administration, his wife and 11-month-old daughter broke the color barrier at the Baltimore County park and picnic grounds.

Charles Langley, 28, placed his daughter, Sharon, on the center horse in a row of three on the merry-go-round and stood by to hold her. His wife, Marian, watched from nearby as reporters talked with her.

Beforethe merry - go - round started, a white boy and a white girl, about 5 or 6, climbed aboard the horses on either side of Sharon.

Langley said he came to Baltimore from Philadelphia about four years ago, and that he had never demonstrated at Gwynn Oak or attempted to visit the park before.

More than 380 persons, including 30 prominent clergymen, were arrested during demonstrations at the park on July 4 and 7. James, David and Arthur Price, brothers who own the park, withstood attempts to integrate for 11 years before finally agreeing on July 19 to desegregate.

The Price brothers had contended their business would suffer if Negroes were admitted. Since, however, they said they have been assured by religious groups and state government leaders that picnics and exhibits would be scheduled at the park.

Langley said he was pleased with his reception at Gwynn Oak, and planned to return Sept. 7 for a Veterans of Foreign Wars picnic.

We nearly died. It came right out of the darkness after five days when we heard nothing. But I didn't hear Louis again. Very soon after I heard another voice yelling, "Look for the light!"

I started digging like mad toward the sound. After about two hours, we found the light about six feet away. It was hanging on a cord from a six-inch hole along with a microphone. At last they reached us.

Europe Eyes Rights March With Restraint

LONDON (AP) — Europe surveyed the equal rights march Wednesday in Washington with anxious sympathy and on most sides a reluctance to sermonize on other people's problems. Even the official Soviet news agency Tass was restrained.

Television programs across the continent were hastily reshuffled so that the Telstar satellite could bring the march right into European homes.

Evening papers headlined President Kennedy's pledge that the civil rights gains of 1963 will never be reversed—and that progress to equal rights for all citizens must be accelerated.

Points most often stressed in editorials were that the United States stands on the threshold of immense social change—and that violence on the march would prove a gigantic setback for the Negro cause.

British comments on American racial troubles have been notably more restrained over the past five years since West Indian immigration and occasional race riots demonstrated that they have problems of their own.

Tass took a relatively moderate line, declaring that President Kennedy's civil rights bill would be "a definite step forward, even though the bill as a whole is limited and clearly insufficient."

In some capitals, African and Asian student groups went to American embassies to declare support for the marchers. West Germany's Organization of Pacifists and Conscientious Objectors began collecting funds to aid the marchers.

of the march called on the President at the White House to receive his congratulations and his pledge of federal action.

The leaders were jubilant over the huge turnout and over what Washington Police Chief Robert V. Murray called the "very orderly" assemblage.

"This will go down as one of the greatest if not the greatest demonstrations of human dignity in the United States," said Dr. King at the White House after many of the marchers already had left the capital.

The Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, a leader in the Birmingham, Ala., desegregation effort, saw the Washington demonstration as the forerunner of similar rallies across the country. He said it was certain to lead to "an outbreak of little Washingtons."

There was no violence. There were no incidents. The Red Cross reported it gave medical aid to perhaps 1,800 people, most of them victims of heat prostration, headaches and fainting spells in the closely-packed crowd. The temperature was in the 80's and the skies were blue.

The marchers streamed into the capital in the early morning hours on trains, more than 1,500 buses, nine chartered planes, and by car and by foot. One, Ledger Smith, rode 700 miles from Chicago on roller skates.

At close of the tightly organized ceremonies, weary from the strains of the day, they headed toward bus terminals and Washington's Union Station where they waited patiently for their transportation home. Some sang freedom songs to while away the time.

Four arrests were reported, none involving demonstrators. Carl Allen, deputy commander of George Lincoln Rockwell's Nazi party, was removed from the grounds by police after attempting to speak against the rally without a permit.

"This will go down as one of the greatest if not the greatest demonstrations of human dignity in the United States," said Dr. King at the White House after many of the marchers already had left the capital.

The Rev. Fred L. Shuttlewworth, a leader in the Birmingham, Ala., desegregation effort, saw the Washington demonstration as the forerunner of similar rallies across the country. He said it was certain to lead to "an outbreak of little Washingtons."

There was no violence. There were no incidents. The Red Cross reported it gave medical aid to perhaps 1,800 people, most of them victims of heat prostration, headaches and fainting spells in the closely-packed crowd. The temperature was in the 80's and the skies were blue.

The marchers streamed into the capital in the early morning hours on trains, more than 1,500 buses, nine chartered planes, and by car and by foot. One, Ledger Smith, rode 700 miles from Chicago on roller skates.

At close of the tightly organized ceremonies, weary from the strains of the day, they headed toward bus terminals and Washington's Union Station where they waited patiently for their transportation home. Some sang freedom songs to while away the time.

Four arrests were reported, none involving demonstrators. Carl Allen, deputy commander of George Lincoln Rockwell's Nazi party, was removed from the grounds by police after attempting to speak against the rally without a permit.

Many Churches Revamp Their Youth Programs

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

Fixed lines of organization among Christian youths are on the wane today, and new patterns of activity are coming to the fore.

"We're in a time of transition in which the old institutional structures are becoming obsolete so far as the young generation is concerned," says the Rev. Roderick French, executive secretary of the Youth Department of the World Council of Churches.

"Young people today don't care to hold membership in a half dozen organizations, with pins, cards and ceremonies. They're not susceptible to the old mass-membership technique."

The ferment for a broader, more flexible approach, not set within rigid, club-like systems, has caused many denominations to revamp their entire youth programs.

"Instead of trying to impose an organization on them, and build up an empire, the effort now is to perform a ministry among them," the Rev. Mr. French said. "It's quite a change in strategy."

Two years ago the United Christian Youth Movement, representing 10 million junior high and high-school-age youths in most major Protestant and Orthodox churches in this country, dismantled its national committee-laden machinery.

The focus has switched from large organizational apparatus of budgets, titles and officers to more fluid, locally varied avenues of interest and function, often with youths more closely associated with adult contemporaries.

"The approach now is more centered in issues and persons, rather than membership lists and organizations," said the Rev. Mr. French, a trim-bearded, pipe-smoking American of 32, with offices in Geneva, Switzerland.

"It requires much more openness, resourcefulness and flexibility," he said in an interview. "Young Christians today bring their problems for an answer, rather than come to hear a lecture. They want to penetrate their culture, and become knowledgeable about it, rather than withdraw from it."

The church tendency now is to place some adult, whom young people respect, at their disposal but without clamping a set routine on them. The Rev. Mr. French, an Episcopalian, from La Grande, Ore., said: "Clergy youth leaders have learned that our task is not to take young people out of the world, and keep them safe off the street in the parish hall, but to give them the resources to participate in the world as Christians."

In the reorientation of youth work, many old organizational names have long since gone by the board. The Epworth League has become Methodist Youth Fellowship; the Westminster Fellowship has become United Presbyterian Youth; the Pilgrim Fellowship has become simply United Church Youth, among other changes.

Building Contracts Show Sharp Jump

NEW YORK (UPI) — Construction contracts took a sharp 10 per cent jump in July over the same 1962 month thanks to a strong assist from residential building, F. W. Dodge Corp. reported Tuesday.

Dodge said residential contracts totaled $1.9 billion in July, up 19 per cent from $1.6 billion in July of last year, and also reflected a "modest but significant gain" over the June rate.

"The apparent cyclical decline in housing starts since May's record volume is likely to have been arrested when the August starts are made available," Dodge predicted.

Steel Outlook Brightens

NEW YORK (UPI) — Signs of an earlier than expected end to the draw-down in steel stocks, plus reports that Detroit will take its normal steel requirements in October, have caused some quick upward revisions in steel output and shipment estimates for the fourth quarter, Iron Age said.

The national metalworking weekly said some estimates have suddenly jumped to as high as 18.5 million tons for the fourth quarter from 16.5 million tons only a few weeks ago.

Orders are not yet on the books, and forecasts of a sharp jump in October output are not unanimous, but nevertheless "industry sentiment is shifting from relative pessimism to comparative optimism," Iron Age said.

A spot check of key steel districts showed production still sliding in Pittsburgh last week. Mills believed a bottom has been reached, however, and that the next significant move will be up, Iron Age said.

In Chicago, there was no strong pick up in orders at the mill level, but warehouse service centers saw sharp gains which, the magazine said, suggested that demand was building up.

In Detroit, sales offices said orders were higher and there were "isolated" predictions that the auto makers will come in for regular tonnages in October.

Zantzinger Sentenced To 6 Months, Fined $500

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — William D. Zantzinger was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $500 Wednesday immediately after a three-judge panel rejected his plea for a new trial on manslaughter charges.

Zantzinger, 24, a Charles County tobacco farmer, was convicted of manslaughter by the same judges last June in the death of a Negro barmaid, Mrs. Hattie Carroll, at a society charity dance in Baltimore. He was accused of causing Mrs. Carroll's death by striking her with a novelty cane.

Judges D. K. McLaughlin, Irvine Rutledge and Stewart Hamill gave Zantzinger until Sept. 15 to start serving his term so he can harvest his crops.

Frederick J. Green Jr., one of the defendant's three lawyers, made a last ditch effort to have the sentence suspended. He told the judges that Zantzinger was a hard worker, a family man and had no record of prior offenses.

Replying to this, Judge McLaughlin said he and the other jurists regarded the defendant as "immature." He then imposed the sentence.

Zantzinger also was fined on two other assault charges stemming from the disturbance at the Spinster's Ball in Baltimore last February. The fines were $100 for assaulting waitress Ethel Hill and $25 for assaulting bellhop George N. Gesell.

Judge McLaughlin, commenting on Green's contention that words alone might have caused Mrs. Carroll's fatal blood pressure rise, said:

"We said in our opinion that we would not consider old English law which does not hold words alone actionable."

The state had presented medical evidence that there was a link between Zantzinger's behavior and Mrs. Carroll's death.

The defense emphasized, however, medical evidence that the woman might have collapsed without being struck and questioned whether Zantzinger even had the cane at the time of the bar incident. It cited testimony from several prosecution witnesses that an irate guest had confiscated the cane from Zantzinger after he struck Mrs. Hill. The Hill incident occurred before the incident involving Mrs. Carroll, Green argued.

Moylan and State's Atty. William J. O'Donnell said during the trial there was some doubt about the exact sequence of events the night of the ball.

They had presented several fellow waitresses and barmaids who testified that they saw Zantzinger strike Mrs. Carroll with the cane, a light, wooden one he had picked up several weeks earlier at a farm fair.

Food Prices Show Rise In Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore housewife paid more money last month to fill up her grocery bag than she did in June.

The Department of Labor announced Wednesday that the retail food index for Baltimore increased 1.1 per cent from June to July.

Food prices were up 2.5 per cent from last year, the department said.

Cereals and bakery products led the price increase with a rise of 3.6 per cent during the month. Dairy products were up 2.1 per cent; fruits and vegetables, 1.8; meats, poultry and fish, .4 per cent.

The Northwest Territory, which constituted the present states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and part of Minnesota, was ceded to the United States in 1783.

Demonstrators Jam Baltimore Harbor Tunnel

BALTIMORE (AP) — Hundreds of buses and automobiles carrying an estimated 50,000 demonstrators moved through the Baltimore Harbor Tunnel Wednesday en route to Washington for the civil rights march.

Police said two incidents were reported — one involving an attack on a young Negro hitch-hiker and another involving the stoning of a bus — as the demonstrators passed through Maryland.

The hitch-hiker was identified as one of 19 bound to the nation's capital from New York. Police were told he was struck by a white man who stepped from his car and intercepted the hikers on U.S. 1 near Waterloo on Tuesday. Officers said the demonstrator declined to swear out a warrant.

U.S. Park police said the bus stoning occurred near Bladensburg, Md., on the Baltimore-Washington Expressway.

One window of the bus was broken but no one was injured, police were told. They arrested three juveniles living in the Bladensburg area.

The flow of traffic through the tunnel included more than 1,300 buses and hundreds of private automobiles and was nearly bumper-to-bumper from about 7 a.m. to noon.

More than 2,000 Baltimoreans left from Lafayette Square, on the city's west side, and thousands of others departed from other points.

A group of demonstrators from Boston paused in Baltimore and accepted an invitation to breakfast at a Negro church.

Maryland News In Brief

SALISBURY (AP) — Picketing in Salisbury would be regulated by an ordinance under consideration by the city council.

A preamble to the measure says there have been cases in other areas of disorderly picketing and demonstrating, trespassing and other acts tending to incite mob action, riot or civil commotion.

The ordinance would make disorderly picketing or demonstrating punishable by up to 30 days confinement and $50 fines.

WHITE HALL, Md. (AP) — The new post office here will be dedicated Saturday in ceremonies sponsored by the Parkton Rotary Club.

The building in Baltimore's north suburbs is being constructed under the lease-construction program of the Post Office Department. This requires construction on privately owned land by a private contractor to meet government specifications, then lease the completed building to the government.

SALISBURY (AP) — A $103,000 goal has been announced for the 1963 Wicomico United Fund.

Dr. Wilbur Devilbiss, president of Salisbury State College, is chairman of the drive.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Clarence D. Long, D-Md., has asked the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee to conduct a hearing soon on a bill to provide federal funds for improvement of fish resources.

The bill, already passed by the Senate, would give preference to states where the secretary of the interior determined there was a commercial fishery failure.

Long said enactment of the bill would benefit Maryland because of the recent deaths of many fish in Chesapeake Bay.

Resort Police Force "Ample"

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP) — Police Chief Jack Phillips says he has "ample manpower" to maintain order in Ocean City over the Labor Day weekend.

Phillips made the statement after a demonstration Tuesday night by several hundred teen-agers protesting a midnight curfew for minors beginning Friday.

Police dispersed the demonstrators after preparing to use six dogs and alerting State Police for possible assistance.

The crowds of youths, gathered at 7th Street and the boardwalk, had shouted and jeered at police.

Town Council President Harry W. Kelley, at a meeting being almost simultaneously with the demonstration that he had received an unprecedented number of complaints about the city's police force. Kelley said the complaints accused the force of being unable to cope with misbehaving teenagers.

Mayor Hugh Croppec attributed any inadequacy to the low pay used to attract part-time officers to augment the regular police force during the summer vacation season.

Standing On The Rim

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP)— The Grand Canyon had a record 1,446,453 visitors during 1962. Records show that 20,062,521 persons have visited the canyon since its establishment as a national park in 1919.

Teacher Fined, Held In Assault

BALTIMORE (AP) — An English instructor from American University was fined a total of $154 Wednesday on drunken and reckless driving charges and was ordered heldin $5,000 bond on charges of assault and battery with intent to murder a policeman.

Municipal Court Judge Basil A. Thomas was told the charges against the defendant, James Clees, 42, stemmed from a July 28 incident in the Police Departments impounding lot.

The court was told that Patrolman Robert T. Kirby saw Clees' car on the lot, noted the condition of the driver, tried to reach through the car window to remove the keys from the ignition, and suddenly found the window rolled up and his arm lodged between it and the frame.

The car began moving and Kirby was dragged 50 feet before freeing his arm, it was testified. He suffered lacerations, bruises and an injured back.

Clees was arrested after the car was driven off the lot and stopped about one block away.

NAACP Founder Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — W. E. B. DuBois, one of the founders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, died in Ghana Tuesday night, dispatches from Accra reported. He was 95.

The controversial Negro leader joined the Communist Party in 1961 when he was 93. In his letter of application he apologized for waiting so long.

DuBois, who helped found the NAACP in 1909, finally broke with it in 1948 and devoted time to extreme left-wing causes. In 1959 the Soviet Union awarded him the Lenin Peace Prize.

His first wife, Mrs. Nina Gomer DuBois, whom he married in 1896, died in 1950. A year later he married Shirley Graham, a writer, who survives.

He also is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Yolanda Williams, of Baltimore, Md.

It cited testimony from several prosecution witnesses that an irate guest had confiscated the cane from Zantzinger after he struck Mrs. Hill. The Hill incident occurred before the incident involving Mrs. Carroll, Green argued.

Moylan and State's Atty. William J. O'Donnell said during the trial there was some doubt about the exact sequence of events the night of the ball.

They had presented several fellow waitresses and barmaids who testified that they saw Zantzinger strike Mrs. Carroll with the cane, a light, wooden one he had picked up several weeks earlier at a farm fair.

Food Prices Show Rise In Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore housewife paid more money last month to fill up her grocery bag than she did in June.

The Department of Labor announced Wednesday that the retail food index for Baltimore increased 1.1 per cent from June to July.

Food prices were up 2.5 per cent from last year, the department said.

Cereals and bakery products led the price increase with a rise of 3.6 per cent during the month. Dairy products were up 2.1 per cent; fruits and vegetables, 1.8; meats, poultry and fish, .4 per cent.

The Northwest Territory, which constituted the present states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and part of Minnesota, was ceded to the United States in 1783.

Demonstrators Jam Baltimore Harbor Tunnel

BALTIMORE (AP) — Hundreds of buses and automobiles carrying an estimated 50,000 demonstrators moved through the Baltimore Harbor Tunnel Wednesday en route to Washington for the civil rights march.

Police said two incidents were reported — one involving an attack on a young Negro hitch-hiker and another involving the stoning of a bus — as the demonstrators passed through Maryland.

The hitch-hiker was identified as one of 19 bound to the nation's capital from New York. Police were told he was struck by a white man who stepped from his car and intercepted the hikers on U.S. 1 near Waterloo on Tuesday. Officers said the demonstrator declined to swear out a warrant.

U.S. Park police said the bus stoning occurred near Bladensburg, Md., on the Baltimore-Washington Expressway.

One window of the bus was broken but no one was injured, police were told. They arrested three juveniles living in the Bladensburg area.

The flow of traffic through the tunnel included more than 1,300 buses and hundreds of private automobiles and was nearly bumper-to-bumper from about 7 a.m. to noon.

More than 2,000 Baltimoreans left from Lafayette Square, on the city's west side, and thousands of others departed from other points.

A group of demonstrators from Boston paused in Baltimore and accepted an invitation to breakfast at a Negro church.

Push-button cattle auctions have been arranged in California. Under this system, buyers in touch with ranchers by Teletype can bid for cattle still on the range.

Maryland News In Brief

SALISBURY (AP) — Picketing in Salisbury would be regulated by an ordinance under consideration by the city council.

A preamble to the measure says there have been cases in other areas of disorderly picketing and demonstrating, trespassing and other acts tending to incite mob action, riot or civil commotion.

The ordinance would make disorderly picketing or demonstrating punishable by up to 30 days confinement and $50 fines.

WHITE HALL, Md. (AP) — The new post office here will be dedicated Saturday in ceremonies sponsored by the Parkton Rotary Club.

The building in Baltimore's north suburbs is being constructed under the lease-construction program of the Post Office Department. This requires construction on privately owned land by a private contractor to meet government specifications, then lease the completed building to the government.

SALISBURY (AP) — A $103,000 goal has been announced for the 1963 Wicomico United Fund.

Dr. Wilbur Devilbiss, president of Salisbury State College, is chairman of the drive.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Clarence D. Long, D-Md., has asked the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee to conduct a hearing soon on a bill to provide federal funds for improvement of fish resources.

The bill, already passed by the Senate, would give preference to states where the secretary of the interior determined there was a commercial fishery failure.

Long said enactment of the bill would benefit Maryland because of the recent deaths of many fish in Chesapeake Bay.

Resort Police Force "Ample"

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP) — Police Chief Jack Phillips says he has "ample manpower" to maintain order in Ocean City over the Labor Day weekend.

Phillips made the statement after a demonstration Tuesday night by several hundred teen-agers protesting a midnight curfew for minors beginning Friday.

Police dispersed the demonstrators after preparing to use six dogs and alerting State Police for possible assistance.

The crowds of youths, gathered at 7th Street and the boardwalk, had shouted and jeered at police.

Town Council President Harry W. Kelley, at a meeting being almost simultaneously with the demonstration that he had received an unprecedented number of complaints about the city's police force. Kelley said the complaints accused the force of being unable to cope with misbehaving teenagers.

Mayor Hugh Croppec attributed any inadequacy to the low pay used to attract part-time officers to augment the regular police force during the summer vacation season.

Standing On The Rim

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP)— The Grand Canyon had a record 1,446,453 visitors during 1962. Records show that 20,062,521 persons have visited the canyon since its establishment as a national park in 1919.

Teacher Fined, Held In Assault

BALTIMORE (AP) — An English instructor from American University was fined a total of $154 Wednesday on drunken and reckless driving charges and was ordered heldin $5,000 bond on charges of assault and battery with intent to murder a policeman.

Municipal Court Judge Basil A. Thomas was told the charges against the defendant, James Clees, 42, stemmed from a July 28 incident in the Police Departments impounding lot.

The court was told that Patrolman Robert T. Kirby saw Clees' car on the lot, noted the condition of the driver, tried to reach through the car window to remove the keys from the ignition, and suddenly found the window rolled up and his arm lodged between it and the frame.

The car began moving and Kirby was dragged 50 feet before freeing his arm, it was testified. He suffered lacerations, bruises and an injured back.

Clees was arrested after the car was driven off the lot and stopped about one block away.

NAACP Founder Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — W. E. B. DuBois, one of the founders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, died in Ghana Tuesday night, dispatches from Accra reported. He was 95.

The controversial Negro leader joined the Communist Party in 1961 when he was 93. In his letter of application he apologized for waiting so long.

DuBois, who helped found the NAACP in 1909, finally broke with it in 1948 and devoted time to extreme left-wing causes. In 1959 the Soviet Union awarded him the Lenin Peace Prize.

His first wife, Mrs. Nina Gomer DuBois, whom he married in 1896, died in 1950. A year later he married Shirley Graham, a writer, who survives.

He also is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Yolanda Williams, of Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States plans to continue the military aid program it "reluctantly" started in Tunisia.

The Kennedy administration's proposed $24,511,000 military aid program for 1963-1964 in Africa includes a small amount for arms and training for Tunisia's 20,000-man armed forces.

Tunisia sought U. S. arms aid in 1963 because it was concerned about the security of its border with Algeria and was unable to get arms from France, according to testimony taken by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

At that time, concern was voiced in Congress about the United States furnishing arms to both sides in the Bizerte fighting between Tunisia and the United States' NATO ally, France.

"We have been just as reluctant as you to go along with arms aid generally, but we were compelled to do so," G. Mennen Williams, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, told a congressman.

Tunisia's differences with France have prevented her from getting military aid of a "considerable nature," except for some naval training, Williams said this year when questioned about the matter.

"As a consequence," Williams said, "It was important for them (the Tunisians) to find some source. So they turned to the United States."

Asked whether the request was "predicated on the fact of the Algerian situation," Williams replied:

"Yes; they were concerned about their border with Algeria."

Williams was asked whether he thought the Tunisians had any reason to be concerned about a Communist threat.

"They would reasonably have a concern because there are elements in all of these countries that have a radical tendency toward the Communists," Williams said.

The amount of the proposed aid for Tunisia was censored from the transcript of the committee's hearing, as it was for all African nations.

Although previous U.S. military aid figures were available for 13 other African countries, the totals for both Tunisia and Morocco were not, presumably to keep each from knowing what the other got.

The United States has trained several Tunisian officers and will be training more. Tunisians were among the first to enroll in an African leadership course at the Army's Armored School at Ft. Knox, Ky. They are also to be among the first in a U.S. program for Africans involving four years of ROTC training and one year at a military academy.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

East was not on his toes in defending against today's three no trump contract, and he muffed a golden opportunity that a somewhat careless declarer had given him.

West opened the jack of spades, and, altho declarer had two sure stoppers in the suit with the opening lead, he permitted West's jack to hold the first trick. The reason for this rather unusual play was to sever his opponents' line of communications. West suspected that South had both missing spade honors but he persisted with the development of the suit as the only legitimate hope to defeat the contract.

Declarer won the ten of spades continuation with his queen and led a small diamond from his hand. West was obliged to play low and, when the king was put up from dummy, East contributed the three of diamonds. This was a play he could ill afford to make for, when the diamond was continued, East's jack was permitted to hold. West was unable to overtake with the ace for fear of establishing the entire suit for declarer. East had no spades left and his heart return presented his partner with a Hobson's choice. If West ducked the trick to North's king, South would have time to complete his establishment of the diamonds. If West put up the ace of hearts, however, declarer could claim nine tricks at once — two spades, two hearts, one diamond, and four clubs.

When the diamond is led to dummy's king, East must drop the jack in order to get out of his partner's way. This play will permit West to win the next diamond lead with the ten so that he can knock out the last spade stopper while he still has his entries.

South had it in his power, however, to place the contract out of harm's reach from the outset, had he adopted a different tack. West is marked with all the missing high cards for his opening bid, and he can be subjected to an unbearable pressure if the dummy's suit is run against him early in the play. Suppose that South wins the opening lead with the queen of spades and plays a small diamond at trick two to the dummy's king which West, of course, will duck. Now four rounds of clubs are taken as declarer sheds the deuce of spades and a small diamond. West has to make two discards. He must save the diamonds. But, if he throws even one heart, it will enable South to develop two tricks in that suit —enough to bring his total to nine. If West discards his spades on the other hand, development of the diamond suit becomes a routine matter.

Prepare Emergency Directions

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Night emergencies on the homefront don't always happen to the other families in the block.

If you haven't in the past, sometime you'll summon a doctor in the middle of the night. Or maybe a policeman. Or even an ambulance driver or fireman.

For your own protection, you ought to be prepared to give the clearest directions for the shortest, quickest route to your doorstep.

As frequently happens, the night emergency often comes with its stupor-mate, panic. This tongue-ties you when it comes time to give such simple information as name and address when calling for help by telephone.

That help that comes, as a result, can be delayed if your house cannot be located quickly and easily. This can happen even in daytime hours if you live in a new development or unincorporated area where streets are unfamiliar to most people and street signs may be missing.

To prepare for any possible emergency, you need to be able to give directions to your house by phone just as much as you need the household first aid kit or fire extinguisher.

Here are some ideas that you can use to be sure that emergency help—when needed—comes as swiftly as possible.

—Locate the closest major intersections of street or highways that are well known. With a local map, plot the quickest, most direct route to your house from this intersection.

—Mark the directions of turns, whether right or left or by compass direction. If there are any confusing curves, forks or twists in the road that might confuse a driver, note these.

—Check the street and road signs in your area to see if the signs are all in place and legible, and to see whether the signs are of the reflective type that can be read most easily at night.

—Develop a short, simple but accurate description of your house. If there are look-alike houses in your neighborhood, do a careful count from the corner to yours or find another means of identifying the homestead.

Once you settle on simple, easily followed directions, type them on a card or print them on note paper. Paste same in your telephone book near the emergency phone numbers.

Then, if a night-time emergency strikes, you can have the script in hand—a script prepared before the emergency.

There won't be any risk of confusing or even wrong directions. The 15 minutes— or even seconds—saved via efficient directions can quite literally save a life.

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A friend of mine gave a get-acquainted luncheon last week for a newcomer in town. This newcomer apparently has fooled a great many people. She was described to me as a high-grade person with an impressive family background—wealth, social position and like that. You can imagine my surprise when I met her and she turned out to be Mazie Klutz (manufactured name, but you get the idea) from Philly High.

Mazie did not remember me, naturally, since it was 20 years ago — and Philly High was a big school and I was a freshman when Mazie was a senior. I happen to know that her father was a butcher who did time for rubber checks and that her sister ran off with a siding salesman.

I hate phonies and nothing would give me greater pleasure than to blow the whistle on this one. My husband says to keep my mouth shut. What do you say? —IN THE KNOW

DEAR IN: And who is she posing as? Queen Fredericka? Your letter indicates that the big build-up came from your friend — not Mazie — so keep quiet. If Mazie has been able to rise above her environment, I say hooray for her.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter was 21 in June and now tells us she is no longer a minor and will do as she pleases. To make matters worse, on her 21st birthday she inherited $5,000 from her grandmother. Unfortunately she received all the money at once, and she's spending it as if there was no tomorrow. Yesterday she bought a pair of lounging pajamas for $85 and a black lace negligee with a matching gown. No decent girl would be caught dead in those get-ups.

Perhaps I should tell you she quit college in her freshman year because "there was nothing to learn there." She's been spending all her time with an amateur drama group, never earning a dime, but living on the allowance we give her.

Yesterday she went downtown to look at a secondhand Lincoln which she will probably buy. What can we do about this girl? —DISTRAUGHT

DEAR SIS: Someone ought to point out to the "heiress" that she inherited five grand — not five million.

Let her know that the privilege of "doing as she pleases" entails full responsibility for herself. Insist that she get a paying job and kick in for room and board.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When we moved out here to this so-called toney suburb I was enthusiastic about becoming friendly with the neighbors. In fact, I confess I was concerned that they might not take me in.

Well, I've been taken in all right — so thoroughly and completely that I am trying to figure a way out. There are coffee klatches twice a day — and some of the girls get together for a cocktail at 4:30. This is in addition to a weekly bridge club, and a sewing circle and garden club and a literary club. I am clubbed to death and I can't take it.

Now, how do I unwind from the rat race? Being the newest one in the bunch makes it very difficult. I don't want to appear ungracious but I simply must get out. Please help.—CHARLOTTE'S WEBB

DEAR CHARLOTTE: Unwind one thing at a time. Cut the coffee klatches to one instead of two. And skip the martinis. Get too busy for the bridge game, then drop the other jazz. Before you know it you'll be able to call your soul your own — just like it used to be.

If alcohol is robbing you or someone you love of health and dignity, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Prepare Emergency Directions

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Night emergencies on the homefront don't always happen to the other families in the block.

If you haven't in the past, sometime you'll summon a doctor in the middle of the night. Or maybe a policeman. Or even an ambulance driver or fireman.

For your own protection, you ought to be prepared to give the clearest directions for the shortest, quickest route to your doorstep.

As frequently happens, the night emergency often comes with its stupor-mate, panic. This tongue-ties you when it comes time to give such simple information as name and address when calling for help by telephone.

That help that comes, as a result, can be delayed if your house cannot be located quickly and easily. This can happen even in daytime hours if you live in a new development or unincorporated area where streets are unfamiliar to most people and street signs may be missing.

To prepare for any possible emergency, you need to be able to give directions to your house by phone just as much as you need the household first aid kit or fire extinguisher.

Here are some ideas that you can use to be sure that emergency help—when needed—comes as swiftly as possible.

—Locate the closest major intersections of street or highways that are well known. With a local map, plot the quickest, most direct route to your house from this intersection.

—Mark the directions of turns, whether right or left or by compass direction. If there are any confusing curves, forks or twists in the road that might confuse a driver, note these.

—Check the street and road signs in your area to see if the signs are all in place and legible, and to see whether the signs are of the reflective type that can be read most easily at night.

—Develop a short, simple but accurate description of your house. If there are look-alike houses in your neighborhood, do a careful count from the corner to yours or find another means of identifying the homestead.

Once you settle on simple, easily followed directions, type them on a card or print them on note paper. Paste same in your telephone book near the emergency phone numbers.

Then, if a night-time emergency strikes, you can have the script in hand—a script prepared before the emergency.

There won't be any risk of confusing or even wrong directions.

The 15 minutes— or even seconds—saved via efficient directions can quite literally save a life.

Living Accessories Discussed

"Plants, Living Accessories," was the topic of a training meeting conducted by Miss Mary Wise for club presidents and home and yard beautification chairmen yesterday at the extension office.

She demonstrated her talk with a planter with large leaf foliage of green and white, terrariums and containers, and used a piece of driftwood, in which she arranged potted violets. Philodendron, geraniums, babytears, moss and an avocado plant were included in her "accessories."

Miss Wise pointed out that plants add a splash of color, bit of life and their green leaves give restfulness. She said a plant will soften a stark architectural line and add zest to neutral settings. She suggested dressing the plants in handsome containers, hiding the clay pots in gay baskets and large ceramic pots.

She stressed that the plant's size and shape must be in proportion to its surroundings. Big-leafed foliage is most effective with contemporary surroundings. Graceful vines and flowering plants are best suited to period furniture. A group of plants will be much handsomer than a plant alone.

"Keeping your house plants happy and thriving is simple," she said. "Never forget that they are living things. Choose those that grow easily in the conditions you can provide. You must consider light, air, water and food. Large and showy upright foliage vines have grace; low compact plants, ferns have a fresh lacy look."

Miss Wise reminded her audience that houses are not built for plants but for people. They are too dark, too dry and frequently too hot to provide a comfortable home for plants. The wonder is not that so many house plants fail, but that so many manage to survive. As a group the foliage plants need less light than flowering plants. Most foliage plants do best when they get 500 foot-candles of illumination or when one can see a shadow outline cast by fingers when the hand is placed between the light source and the plant.

Lamps also supplement natural light, she reminded her group, and suggested using lamps to supplement natural light to increase both the foot-candles and the length of the day. If incandescent lamps are chosen at least 75 watt bulbs should be used, no more than four feet from the foliage and no closer than two feet. Fluorescent tubes, because they burn cooler, can be placed closer to the plants. Plants should be placed as close to the lamps as practical. Spotlights have been particularly successful with plants. They not only provide the needed extra light, but also accent the decorative effect of interior plantings.

As house humidity usually is too low for plants, Miss Wise suggested careful attention to watering. "Double potting" is another solution to grow plants so they produce tougher, more durable foliage. This procedure keeps the soil moderately dry longer, without danger of wilting. The moist filler between the pots also insures the humidity around the plant.

Iota Epsilon Chapter To Elect September 5

A report of the nominating committee and election of officers of Iota Epsilon Chapter, Tau Phi Lambda of the Supreme Forest Woodman Circle will feature the first fall meeting, to be held September 5. It will be conducted by Mrs. Dorothy Silber at the Girl Scout House.

Rushee names will be taken and Miss Jacqua Day, chairman, will announce her committee for the party, which will be held September 19.

The nominating committee met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Jane Frederick, Brown Avenue. It consists of Mrs. Margaret Hartman, Mrs. Juanita Leese, Mrs. Betty Bean and Mrs. Frederick.

Installation of officers will be held at the Founders Day dinner, which is to be held in Keyser at the end of October.

At the meeting Thursday evening Miss Juanita Prine, who was delegate to the national Tau Phi Lambda convention in Chicago August 16-19, will give her report. Mrs. Hartman will tell about the "Miss Future" contest, in which she was first runner-up.

At the convention Miss Prine was chairman of decorations for the penthouse luncheon for delegates and national officers. She was assisted by the West Virginia-Maryland delegates. Miss Prine chose the sorority colors and marked its 25th anniversary, with a footed bud vase with pink roses and silver ivy centering the tables. Each later was presented to a national officer. The favors were floral handkerchiefs in small plastic boxes topped with pink rosebud pins.

Miss Prine, who chose a Wave uniform to represent 1945, when she competed in the "Through the Years" pageant, was chosen to carry the flag and lead the parade opening the convention of the Supreme Forest Woodman Circle August 20.

Other members of the local chapter who attended were Mrs. Betty Dean, Mrs. Hartman, Mrs. Juanita Leese, Mrs. Dorothy Silber, Miss Jacqua Day and Mrs. Mary White.

Besides attending convention meetings and activities, the local group took a tour of a bicycle factory, a boat ride on Lake Michigan, and on Monday afternoon the entire TPL group had a sightseeing tour of Chicago, compliments of the Supreme Forest Woodman Circle.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

A Special Look

If you've a special look in your eyes these days, let it be a devastating and unforgettable one.

This is another way of reminding you that the right makeup is vital to a woman's expression. It gives the eyes that needed importance to go with fall's vibrant and beautiful clothes.

You'll not only be in fashion, but you'll lend your loveliest features as well. And who knows, it might even alter the course of your life! All it takes is a little practice. In everything, practice makes perfect . . . and practice in the application of eye cosmetics makes a perfect beauty. Particularly as we grow older, eye makeup is important. For it is then, in maturity, that the brows and lashes start to fade and the eye itself seems to have less sparkle.

Since finesse is deirable, be satisfied that your other cosmetics are faultlessly in place before you add your eye makeup. With a clean eyebrow brush (thick-bristled and long-handled types are more efficient), groom your brows to get them ready for any cosmetics. First, brush them toward your nose, then coax them straight up in the direction of the hairline. Last, brush them with an outward stroke. Now to give them proper definition, apply eyebrow pencil in tiny, feather-like strokes to the hairs (not to the skin), in the opposite direction of the way they grow, then brush back. Taper off at the temples with a diffused outward flick. Delicacy is the keynote in this application.

Choose a mascara that won't smudge, run or flake (use a waterproof one). Apply with a dry brush to your upper lashes, using light upward strokes. Let dry. Then for a dramatic look, apply another coat (some like blue for a dazzling evening look). Experiment with different tones of eye shadow for evening wear.

BORED OF DIRECTORS—Flower girl, Pamela Benzschawel, having been through several wedding rehearsals, found waiting for the real thing to begin was pretty dull, despite the gentlemanly distraction offered by ring-bearer Daniel Brooks during final preliminaries to the Nekoosa, Wis., marriage of two relatives. 1958 Class Reunion Saturday

Memorial Hospital School of Nursing Class of 1958 will hold a reunion Saturday. It will be at the Ali Ghan Shrine Club, in the form of a dinner and dance, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Mrs. Rebecca White Harvey will preside. The program will be informal, without a speaker.

Classmates will be brought up to date on changes at the hospital since graduation by Mrs. Sandra Twaites Adams. Mrs. Barbara Blose Long will reminisce on "Remember When?", listing amusing things that happened during training.

Gifts will be presented to the member traveling the greatest distance, the one married the longest time, the one most recently married, the one with the most children, the one with the youngest child, the one most changed and the one least changed.

Reservations have been made for 35.

Mrs. Long is chairman of the committee of arrangements, with Mrs. Sandra Brown Jacobs as cochairman. Others serving with them are Mrs. Carol Andrews Walker, Mrs. Mary Border Simpson, Mrs. Patricia Brinkman Twigg, Mrs. Juanita Deniker Bland, Mrs. Constance Herring Spates and Mrs. Adams.

Living Accessories Discussed

"Plants, Living Accessories," was the topic of a training meeting conducted by Miss Mary Wise for club presidents and home and yard beautification chairmen yesterday at the extension office.

She demonstrated her talk with a planter with large leaf foliage of green and white, terrariums and containers, and used a piece of driftwood, in which she arranged potted violets. Philodendron, geraniums, babytears, moss and an avocado plant were included in her "accessories."

Miss Wise pointed out that plants add a splash of color, bit of life and their green leaves give restfulness. She said a plant will soften a stark architectural line and add zest to neutral settings. She suggested dressing the plants in handsome containers, hiding the clay pots in gay baskets and large ceramic pots.

She stressed that the plant's size and shape must be in proportion to its surroundings. Big-leafed foliage is most effective with contemporary surroundings. Graceful vines and flowering plants are best suited to period furniture. A group of plants will be much handsomer than a plant alone.

"Keeping your house plants happy and thriving is simple," she said. "Never forget that they are living things. Choose those that grow easily in the conditions you can provide. You must consider light, air, water and food. Large and showy upright foliage vines have grace; low compact plants, ferns have a fresh lacy look."

Miss Wise reminded her audience that houses are not built for plants but for people. They are too dark, too dry and frequently too hot to provide a comfortable home for plants. The wonder is not that so many house plants fail, but that so many manage to survive. As a group the foliage plants need less light than flowering plants. Most foliage plants do best when they get 500 foot-candles of illumination or when one can see a shadow outline cast by fingers when the hand is placed between the light source and the plant.

Lamps also supplement natural light, she reminded her group, and suggested using lamps to supplement natural light to increase both the foot-candles and the length of the day. If incandescent lamps are chosen at least 75 watt bulbs should be used, no more than four feet from the foliage and no closer than two feet. Fluorescent tubes, because they burn cooler, can be placed closer to the plants. Plants should be placed as close to the lamps as practical. Spotlights have been particularly successful with plants. They not only provide the needed extra light, but also accent the decorative effect of interior plantings.

As house humidity usually is too low for plants, Miss Wise suggested careful attention to watering. "Double potting" is another solution to grow plants so they produce tougher, more durable foliage. This procedure keeps the soil moderately dry longer, without danger of wilting. The moist filler between the pots also insures the humidity around the plant.

Iota Epsilon Chapter To Elect September 5

A report of the nominating committee and election of officers of Iota Epsilon Chapter, Tau Phi Lambda of the Supreme Forest Woodman Circle will feature the first fall meeting, to be held September 5. It will be conducted by Mrs. Dorothy Silber at the Girl Scout House.

Rushee names will be taken and Miss Jacqua Day, chairman, will announce her committee for the party, which will be held September 19.

The nominating committee met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Jane Frederick, Brown Avenue. It consists of Mrs. Margaret Hartman, Mrs. Juanita Leese, Mrs. Betty Bean and Mrs. Frederick.

Installation of officers will be held at the Founders Day dinner, which is to be held in Keyser at the end of October.

At the meeting Thursday evening Miss Juanita Prine, who was delegate to the national Tau Phi Lambda convention in Chicago August 16-19, will give her report. Mrs. Hartman will tell about the "Miss Future" contest, in which she was first runner-up.

At the convention Miss Prine was chairman of decorations for the penthouse luncheon for delegates and national officers. She was assisted by the West Virginia-Maryland delegates. Miss Prine chose the sorority colors and marked its 25th anniversary, with a footed bud vase with pink roses and silver ivy centering the tables. Each later was presented to a national officer. The favors were floral handkerchiefs in small plastic boxes topped with pink rosebud pins.

Miss Prine, who chose a Wave uniform to represent 1945, when she competed in the "Through the Years" pageant, was chosen to carry the flag and lead the parade opening the convention of the Supreme Forest Woodman Circle August 20.

Other members of the local chapter who attended were Mrs. Betty Dean, Mrs. Hartman, Mrs. Juanita Leese, Mrs. Dorothy Silber, Miss Jacqua Day and Mrs. Mary White.

Besides attending convention meetings and activities, the local group took a tour of a bicycle factory, a boat ride on Lake Michigan, and on Monday afternoon the entire TPL group had a sightseeing tour of Chicago, compliments of the Supreme Forest Woodman Circle.

Smouse Reunion Saturday

The 65th annual Smouse reunion will be held Saturday. It will be at Egolf Park, Bedford, Pa., beginning with a covered dish dinner at noon.

A business session will be held at 2 p.m., followed by a talent program and contests.

Prizes will be awarded to the one traveling the greatest distance, the oldest and youngest, among others.

Paul R. Smouse, Bedford, is resident of the clan; Miss Helen I. Manspeaker, Harrisburg, Pa., secretary.

Members are asked to bring a covered dish and their own table settings.

Secrets Of Charm

A Special Look

If you've a special look in your eyes these days, let it be a devastating and unforgettable one.

This is another way of reminding you that the right makeup is vital to a woman's expression. It gives the eyes that needed importance to go with fall's vibrant and beautiful clothes.

You'll not only be in fashion, but you'll lend your loveliest features as well. And who knows, it might even alter the course of your life! All it takes is a little practice. In everything, practice makes perfect . . . and practice in the application of eye cosmetics makes a perfect beauty. Particularly as we grow older, eye makeup is important. For it is then, in maturity, that the brows and lashes start to fade and the eye itself seems to have less sparkle.

Since finesse is deirable, be satisfied that your other cosmetics are faultlessly in place before you add your eye makeup. With a clean eyebrow brush (thick-bristled and long-handled types are more efficient), groom your brows to get them ready for any cosmetics. First, brush them toward your nose, then coax them straight up in the direction of the hairline. Last, brush them with an outward stroke. Now to give them proper definition, apply eyebrow pencil in tiny, feather-like strokes to the hairs (not to the skin), in the opposite direction of the way they grow, then brush back. Taper off at the temples with a diffused outward flick. Delicacy is the keynote in this application.

Choose a mascara that won't smudge, run or flake (use a waterproof one). Apply with a dry brush to your upper lashes, using light upward strokes. Let dry. Then for a dramatic look, apply another coat (some like blue for a dazzling evening look). Experiment with different tones of eye shadow for evening wear.

The word "turtle" was applied to doves long before it was applied to reptiles. In England, it was used in this manner as early as A.D. 1000.

Woman To Woman

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — The contemporary female, a prunella penny pincher who wears the proverbial pants in the family, buys most of the sports shirts.

But beaten males, take heart. Most of the sports shirts milady buys—it says here—are for the men.

A look into the spending ways of copper-clutching women, at any rate, shows that 90 to 95 per cent of men's sport shirt sales in department stores are made by the distaff side—for the men in their life.

But that's not all. The women also are responsible for 60 per cent of the purchases of such masculine items as wallets, key cases, card cases, cuff links, tie clasps and tie pins.

This indicates some of the spending ways of females once they control the purse strings. The latter's a fact that's beyond debate.

The women also have a slight edge on savings—51 per cent. They control, too, more life insurance as outright owners and beneficiaries than do their masculine counterparts.

The purchasing power of the distaff side is larger—even when the family funds are in a joint account. Speed at writing checks apparently is just one notch behind woman's intuition.

At any rate, the females pay for 79 per cent of all food purchases, 66 per cent of all drugs and toiletries.

But it's still not generally known what makes women buy what they do when they do.

According to one survey, a woman puts all five senses to work much more than men when buying. Her senses are believed more acute. She has touches, tastes and even smells when possible, before deciding to buy.

The survey, conducted by the Bulova Watch Co., found further that the woman-on-the-buy also has an unusually keen sense of sight. She is apt to be influenced especially by her color perception.

That's one reason cosmetic companies, for example, put up their perfumes and such in pretty packages and bring out lipsticks in 30 or more different colors. Women—and only women—can note the split-hair shade of difference between fire-engine and fire-plug red!

Her concepts of romantic love and maternal love, her desires for security in a social sense and her own self-esteem are dynamics in the market place.

Marketing experts note that the female's an intuitive shopper. The male, meanwhile, tends to put to work analytical and clinical judgments when buying.

"Even though the husband may initiate a purchase such as an automobile and decide on the make," the report noted, "the wife has a sizable voice in the model and she overpowers her husband in the choice of color."

Theater Screen Hole Puncher Strikes Again

EVERGREEN, Ala. (UPI) — The phantom of the theater struck again Monday night.

He broke into the Pix Theater after the feature was over, punched a hole in the screen and made off with a small display card advertising the movie.

And, to the frustration of police and the anguish of the theater manager, he has done it nine times in two weeks. The mad moviegoer has struck just about every time the feature changed.

They almost trapped him Monday night, but he escaped, fittingly enough, by leaping off a roof.

"I'm just getting sick of this," groaned theater manager Ferrell Johnson. "Repairing the screen is getting expensive. We've got to catch him."

Monday night he holed the screen after "Hud" had played. Saturday night there was a double feature — "Beauty and the Beast" and "The Tartars," starring Orson Welles.

"Maybe he likes Welles," Johnson grumbled. "The screen was punched only once."

Johnson said he and seven policemen surrounded the building Monday night and nearly caught the phantom. But he fled to the top of the building, leaped 30 feet into a grocery store parking lot, and slipped away in the darkness. Johnson said "it looked like maybe he was sleeping under the stage."

Irish Potato Famine Almost Avoided

By FRANK CAREY

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — The great 19th century potato famine in Ireland could have been avoided or greatly mitigated if several plant experts had not missed the scientific boat, an American scientist said this week.

He was referring to the potato blight in 1844, caused by a fungus. He said the blight caused a quarter of a million people to starve to death in Ireland and forced another 1.5 million to emigrate — "many of whom became Irish policemen in the United States."

"Effective control of the potato blight came many years later," said Dr. James G. Horsfall of the Connecticut Agriculture Experiment Station, New Haven.

In a report to the annual meeting of the American Institute of Biological Sciences at the University of Massachusetts, Horsfall said that one plant expert at the time had unintentionally given a misconception of the potato disease. Two others were on the right track toward a control method—but their techniques had loopholes.

Horsfall told about it in declaring that fungi—now largely controllable — altered the course of history a number of times over the centuries.

He said that during the last 15 years or so, more has been learned than in the whole course of previous history concerning fungi—the organisms that caused "the rusts and rots that rob us, the blasts and lights that beset us."

Concerning the potato blight in Ireland: the unintentional mistakes that were made by plant experts:

When the blight was well under way in 1844, one Dr. Lindley reported that he had detected a fungus on the leaves of potato plants —but he erroneously attributed it to be the result of the disease rather than the cause.

That same year, one Judge Cheever, a New York jurist and amateur plant pathologist, recalled that a French scientist, years before, had discovered that wheat smut could be controlled by treating the wheat seed with copper sulfate.

The judge suggested that copper sulfate be applied to potato leaves. If it had been, it would have failed because copper sulfate, used alone, would have burned the foliage.

Also in 1844, a Belgian amateur plant pathologist put together a safe mixture of copper sulfate—by adding lime and table salt to it. But he incorrectly advocated applying it to the ground around the potato plants rather than to the foliage.

It wasn't until almost 40 years after the Irish famine that the Belgian's mixture—this time minus the salt—was rediscovered, and applied correctly against potato blight and other fungus diseases. This was "Bordeaux mixture, the most famous fungicide of all time," said Horsfall.

Broncos Broken On Main Street

BANDERA, Tex. (AP)—Isaac Thetford breaks wild horses on Main Street of this hill country city known as the "Cowboy Capital of the World." Thetford claims to have broken more than 2,000 wild horses and says "Main Street is a good place to break a horse because it gets them over being scared and nervous about loud noises."

The Vancouver entry in the Canadian pro football loop is the first team in the pro football ranks to start pay TV. The games will be piped into a theater with tickets at $3, $2.50 and $2. The first try for an exhibition game had 1,400 paying patrons.

Opera House Ready For Battle

MILAN, Italy (AP)—In the attic of the La Scala Opera House three huge rooms and a wide corridor serve as the famous theater's armory.

The areas are packed with enough armor, weapons and battle gear to outfit a small army. It is there for use in the battles, duels and assassination scenes that fill so many classical operas. And the stuff is almost all made out of plastic.

City Bans Shave Lotion As Alcoholic Beverage

KINGSPORT, Tenn. (UPI) —A lilac-scented aftershave lotion that had become the champagne of the city's "problem drinkers" was banned from the market this week on grounds it constituted an alcoholic beverage.

This virtually dry city has been waging an all-out war to keep its vagrant population from consuming such unconventional beverages as medicinal alcohol, shoe polish, certain paint and varnish removers and other types of aftershave lotion.

But, by far, Lilac—a sweet-smelling potion ostensibly for use on the face—has been the favorite of Kingsport's unconventional "wet" forces. It's 50 per cent alcohol. Police say users get thoroughly intoxicated on one bottle.

There was once a time, the city fathers recall, when anyone could buy Lilac over the counter at almost any dime store, drug store or newspaper stand for 35 cents.

According to R. L. Eisenbise, Kingsport director of public safety, Lilac now is at a premium on the black market. The scarcity on the open market has pushed the price to at least 50 cents for an eight-ounce bottle.

As a result, Eisenbise said, the city's "regulars" as he calls them, have been turning increasingly to other concoctions.

"The big thing now is Solax—a kind of paint thinner that the regulars mix with orange or grape soda," said Eisenbise. "And man, when they drink some of that stuff, they're out—I mean really out."

But banning of Solax, shoe polish and the other potions will come later, he said. "We're still cracking down on smuggled Lilac."

Kingsport got its first conviction for possession of the aftershave lotion Tuesday when Bob Fritz was found guilty and fined $50. Nearly 400 bottles of lilac were found in a truck owned by Fritz and uncovered by a police raid.

Lilac is manufactured by Cheatham Chemical Co. of Atlanta. A spokesman for the company said the product is "strictly regulated by the government and made under government-approved formula."

There are about 103 species of starlings.

Theater Screen Hole Puncher Strikes Again

EVERGREEN, Ala. (UPI) — The phantom of the theater struck again Monday night.

He broke into the Pix Theater after the feature was over, punched a hole in the screen and made off with a small display card advertising the movie.

And, to the frustration of police and the anguish of the theater manager, he has done it nine times in two weeks. The mad moviegoer has struck just about every time the feature changed.

They almost trapped him Monday night, but he escaped, fittingly enough, by leaping off a roof.

"I'm just getting sick of this," groaned theater manager Ferrell Johnson. "Repairing the screen is getting expensive. We've got to catch him."

Monday night he holed the screen after "Hud" had played. Saturday night there was a double feature — "Beauty and the Beast" and "The Tartars," starring Orson Welles.

"Maybe he likes Welles," Johnson grumbled. "The screen was punched only once."

Johnson said he and seven policemen surrounded the building Monday night and nearly caught the phantom. But he fled to the top of the building, leaped 30 feet into a grocery store parking lot, and slipped away in the darkness. Johnson said "it looked like maybe he was sleeping under the stage."

Irish Potato Famine Almost Avoided

By FRANK CAREY

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — The great 19th century potato famine in Ireland could have been avoided or greatly mitigated if several plant experts had not missed the scientific boat, an American scientist said this week.

He was referring to the potato blight in 1844, caused by a fungus. He said the blight caused a quarter of a million people to starve to death in Ireland and forced another 1.5 million to emigrate — "many of whom became Irish policemen in the United States."

"Effective control of the potato blight came many years later," said Dr. James G. Horsfall of the Connecticut Agriculture Experiment Station, New Haven.

In a report to the annual meeting of the American Institute of Biological Sciences at the University of Massachusetts, Horsfall said that one plant expert at the time had unintentionally given a misconception of the potato disease. Two others were on the right track toward a control method—but their techniques had loopholes.

Horsfall told about it in declaring that fungi—now largely controllable — altered the course of history a number of times over the centuries.

He said that during the last 15 years or so, more has been learned than in the whole course of previous history concerning fungi—the organisms that caused "the rusts and rots that rob us, the blasts and lights that beset us."

Concerning the potato blight in Ireland: the unintentional mistakes that were made by plant experts:

When the blight was well under way in 1844, one Dr. Lindley reported that he had detected a fungus on the leaves of potato plants —but he erroneously attributed it to be the result of the disease rather than the cause.

That same year, one Judge Cheever, a New York jurist and amateur plant pathologist, recalled that a French scientist, years before, had discovered that wheat smut could be controlled by treating the wheat seed with copper sulfate.

The judge suggested that copper sulfate be applied to potato leaves. If it had been, it would have failed because copper sulfate, used alone, would have burned the foliage.

Also in 1844, a Belgian amateur plant pathologist put together a safe mixture of copper sulfate—by adding lime and table salt to it. But he incorrectly advocated applying it to the ground around the potato plants rather than to the foliage.

It wasn't until almost 40 years after the Irish famine that the Belgian's mixture—this time minus the salt—was rediscovered, and applied correctly against potato blight and other fungus diseases. This was "Bordeaux mixture, the most famous fungicide of all time," said Horsfall.

Broncos Broken On Main Street

BANDERA, Tex. (AP)—Isaac Thetford breaks wild horses on Main Street of this hill country city known as the "Cowboy Capital of the World." Thetford claims to have broken more than 2,000 wild horses and says "Main Street is a good place to break a horse because it gets them over being scared and nervous about loud noises."

The Vancouver entry in the Canadian pro football loop is the first team in the pro football ranks to start pay TV. The games will be piped into a theater with tickets at $3, $2.50 and $2. The first try for an exhibition game had 1,400 paying patrons.

Opera House Ready For Battle

MILAN, Italy (AP)—In the attic of the La Scala Opera House three huge rooms and a wide corridor serve as the famous theater's armory.

The areas are packed with enough armor, weapons and battle gear to outfit a small army. It is there for use in the battles, duels and assassination scenes that fill so many classical operas. And the stuff is almost all made out of plastic.

City Bans Shave Lotion As Alcoholic Beverage

KINGSPORT, Tenn. (UPI) —A lilac-scented aftershave lotion that had become the champagne of the city's "problem drinkers" was banned from the market this week on grounds it constituted an alcoholic beverage.

This virtually dry city has been waging an all-out war to keep its vagrant population from consuming such unconventional beverages as medicinal alcohol, shoe polish, certain paint and varnish removers and other types of aftershave lotion.

But, by far, Lilac—a sweet-smelling potion ostensibly for use on the face—has been the favorite of Kingsport's unconventional "wet" forces. It's 50 per cent alcohol. Police say users get thoroughly intoxicated on one bottle.

There was once a time, the city fathers recall, when anyone could buy Lilac over the counter at almost any dime store, drug store or newspaper stand for 35 cents.

Many New Products Offer Solutions To Problems

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI) —You may have wished:

—That winter did not mean heavy bedding to buy and launder and sleep under. It doesn't any more with Morgan-Jones new Insulaire blanket, 100 per cent cotton in a cellular weave based on the thermal principle that a layer of air around the body will act as an efficient insulator.

Insulaire is meant to be used the year-around. In winter, with a lightweight covering over it, the blanket traps air to preserve body heat. In summer, used alone, the tiny cells of the weave will dissipate body heat. Preshrunk, it is easily laundered, dries quickly. Available in solid colors, prints and plaids.

—That you could enjoy draft beer at home. You can now, with Reynolds Aluminum's Tapper, a newly designed container which dispenses 2¼ gallons of beer from the home refrigerator. The container, which holds the same amount as contained in a case of 12-ounch bottles or cans, is fully pressurized and beer is dispensed simply by pulling a spigot on the front end of the container.

—That you were a mathematical whiz so you could determine easily the best buy among the myriad products in the supermarket. You can be, with a new E-Z Bargain Finder, product of H&R Enterprises, Cleveland. The slide rule devide reduces the prices of foods and other items in varying package sizest o a common unit price.

—You could eliminate the strange "wiggles" and "dust bugs" that intrude on the screen during home movie programs. You can now, with a new electrostatic film cleaner which attaches directly to almost any projector. Made by Lindau Film Cleaner Inc., Lake Forest, Ill., the cleaner consists of a frame holding a pair of specially designed brushes either side of the film as it passes from reel to projector. Because camel hair has even greater attraction than film for dust, the particles are attracted into the brushes and held well away from the film.

—You could actually read the barometer which hangs so attractively on the wall. You can now, with Taylor Instrument's new Stormoscope. The instrument dial has enlarged by two and one-half times the most common pressure area, the range between 29 and 31 inches. As a result, the untrained observer can notice the smallest changes in weather. In the usual barometer, this common pressure area is so small that movement of the dial indicator is almost imperceptible. Taylor Instrument Companies, Rochester, N.Y.

—You could thread a needle unfailingly. You can — with a new automatic threader by Foreigh Trade Unlimited, Pontiach, Mich. Needle is dropped in threader and a press of a button pulls thread through the eye.

—You had a vibrator chair. You can, even if you don't have an inch of space for additional furniture. General Machinery Co., Towaco, N.J., makes a vibrator motor kit which it says can be attached to the base of any heavy chair, plugged into nearby socket.

Cigarettes Being Made With Vegetable Leaves

BUFFALO, N. Y. (UPI) — Cigarettes made from blended vegetable leaves instead of tobacco are being produced at Roswell Park Memorial (cancer) Institute by a research team in its hunt for a desire-quenching harmless tobacco substitute.

Dr. George E. Moore, director of the institute's cigarette cancer committee, who has flatly stated "cigarette smoking causes lung cancer," said the project hopes to develop a satisfying smoke without tobacco.

The committee feels many persons enjoy lighting, holding, and flicking the cigarette as much as smoking it.

The vegetable-blends called "gems" after Dr. Moore's initials, are manufactured in an institue laboratory where a researcher shreds the leaves after they have been cut, dried, and sprayed. The smokes are then rolled by hand.

Upon production of a "palatable" cigarette, researchers will collect tars from the smoke and test their harmfulness on flesh of mice.

Leaves used in the project include those from cabbages, dandelions, beets, and petunias. Of some 24 different existing blends, the most successful mixture is reportedly a preparation containing all but the petunia leaves.

The clinic also is working on another project aimed at helping people give up cigarettes.

Facility Where Miners Trapped Not In Operation

MOAB, Utah (UPI) — Texas Gulf Sulphur Company's $30 million potash mine, located in the colorful Utah Badlands, covers 80 acres and includes several large structures.

Focal point is the 18 story shaft building where rescuers are attempting to reach 25 men trapped by Tuesday's fiery blast 3,000 feet below the earth's surface.

The giant facility, which was scheduled to go into limited production next month, is about a half mile from the greenish-blue Colorado River. Downstream about three miles is Deadhorse Point where many tourists have looked down at the breathtaking view of the river and canyon.

The mining facility is situated in a small valley surrounded by steep, red sandstone mounds. On the opposite side of the river, the bluffs are sheer, rising about 500 feet.

In addition to the concrete shaft building, the plant includes a 300 ton crude ore storage silo which is painted bright red. A conveyor belt for hauling potash used in making commercial fertilizer runs through a slated roof shed from the shaft building to the silo.

East of the silo is a large green building which ranges in levels from three to five stories. It is a product storage area.

To the north, there is a three-story, sand colored processing plant building.

The mine offices are located in a modern one story building some distance to the west of the other building. It is fronted by a large green lawn.

The entire facility is surrounded by a barbed wire fence.

Soldier Has Unusual Civilian Interest

Sergeant Wileman, who has recently reenlisted for four more years, began raising worms seven years ago while stationed at Fort Lewis Washington. He became interested in this line of work when he had to pay $1.50 for a small box of worms in order to go fishing. In his travels across the country, he noticed numerous stands selling worms, and he would stop at each one and ask the going price of the little animals. Convinced that the raising of worms was a potentially challenging and rewarding prospect, Sergeant Wileman cajoled his brother into leaving his work at the local hospital, and to join him in the raising of worms.

The sergeant and his brother began a systematic inquiry into the methods of raising worms with queries to various universities. The University of Oklahoma responded promptly, and the brothers' careers were launched.

Success favored the enterprise, and today, Sergeant Wileman and his brother have one of the largest worm businesses in the nation. The worm farm's average yearly income is $30,000 after expenses.

While Sergeant Wileman finishes his hitch in the Army, his brother will be supervising the operation. The farm is located at 1213 East Church St., Booneville, Mississippi. Worm fanciers who would like to stop by and see this operation for themselves will certainly be made welcome.

Fewer than 5 million people were at work on the nation's farms in February — the smallest number in more than 50 years.

Some European Countries Fear U.S.-Russian Pact

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

PARIS (UPI) — The United States is receiving some sour looks again from some of its European Allies.

What bothers them is the old fear that Washington and Moscow might get together and make a cold war deal over their heads.

The man most worried by this prospect is French President Charles de Gaulle. But it is a fear that also has constantly haunted every West German politician for years.

It is troubling them again today.

The new attack of cold war "peace jitters" in Europe was touched off by conclusion of the Moscow nuclear test ban pact and the sudden warm glow in U.S. - Soviet relations that followed it.

Then came the disclosure that the United States was prepared at least to discuss with the Russians Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's plan for a non-aggression treaty between NATO and the Communist Warsaw Pact nations.

Finally, the United States and Russia showed signs recently at Geneva of being ready for serious discussions on a plan to set up control posts for observers along the Iron Curtain frontier as a check against surprise attacks.

Outbreak Of Nerves

The result was a new outbreak of nerves among America's Allies on this side of the Atlantic. It resulted in the meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) Permanent Council, which was summoned to reassure European members of the alliance that they are not being bypassed in the current Washington-Moscow peace drive.

De Gaulle's objections stem mainly from his determination that Europe should break away from Washington's leading strings.

His whole foreign policy is dominated by a deeply rooted conviction that Europe must make itself strong enough to defend itself and to settle its own future without interference from the United States.

Germans Concerned

The West Germans are more concerned that any U.S.-Russian deal would mean permanent East - West division of Germany and recognition of the Communist East German state.

Some of the smaller NATO Allies also are nervous about the possibility of direct cold war settlement between Washington and Moscow in which they would have little voice.

The French, meanwile, are pretty confident that with West German backing they can block any U.S.-Soviet agreement on setting up control posts.

De Gaulle's argument against these—like his argument against the recent Moscow nuclear test ban agreement—is that they do not go far enough.

He has no objection to setting up such control posts. But he wants such a pact to be part of a broader agreement covering the whole field of nuclear disarmament.

Teacher Files $50,000 Suit

BALTIMORE (AP)—A former Prince Georges County school teacher filed a $50,000 slander suit in U.S. District Court Wednesday against the father of a former pupil.

The suit was filed by Ray Parker of Alexandria, Va., against Martin E. Whipps of Brentwood, Md.

Parker said that as a teacher at Northwestern High School he recommended that students read "Brave New World," a novel by Aldous Huxley which looks at morals, or lack of them, in the world of the future.

The former teacher said he later was summoned to the principal's office to confront Whipps, whose daughter was a student in the class. The suit contended Whipps made certain allegations about Parker's qualifications to be a teacher which were slanderous per se.

Parker said he has since lost his job in the county school system, and that his future has been prejudiced by the alleged slander.

Army Welcomes Guerrilla Fighter From East Indies

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (ANF) — The Army recently welcomed a seasoned guerilla fighter into its midst when Pvt. Jan Wierenga joined the ranks of the 82d Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C.

In 1942, when the Japanese invaded the Dutch East Indies, Private Wierenga's life changed dramatically. He found himself a prisoner for the next six years, first as a captive of the Japanese, and then, following their withdrawal, as a captive of the Indonesian insurgents. He was finally freed in 1946 by Dutch troops.

The soldier is a former member of the Royal Dutch Army where he was a survival and paratrooper expert. He also spent a year fighting elusive guerrillas in the jungles of Indonesia.

Sky-diving became a hobby with Private Wierenga when he came to this country to live with his sister in 1960. So it was only natural that he should volunteer for airborne duty when he enlisted in the Army in 1962.

Private Wierenga speaks five languages, English, Dutch, German, French and Malayan, and would like to become an interpreter or translator in the Army — providing the assignment won't take him away from his first love —parachuting.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—How can a "mechanic" repair a spacecraft in flight under weightless conditions? This question was studied recently by the NASA-Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, and the AF Aerospace Medical Research Laboratory, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. In the experiments, technicians performed mechanical tasks on an engine during brief periods of zero gravity aboard a jet aircraft. An accumulated weightless time of about an hour was experienced in five flights. Note that the feet of man on left leave the floor during weightlessness although he is tethered to the engine.

Facility Where Miners Trapped Not In Operation

MOAB, Utah (UPI) — Texas Gulf Sulphur Company's $30 million potash mine, located in the colorful Utah Badlands, covers 80 acres and includes several large structures.

Focal point is the 18 story shaft building where rescuers are attempting to reach 25 men trapped by Tuesday's fiery blast 3,000 feet below the earth's surface.

The giant facility, which was scheduled to go into limited production next month, is about a half mile from the greenish - blue Colorado River. Downstream about three miles is Deadhorse Point where many tourists have looked down at the breathtaking view of the river and canyon.

The mining facility is situated in a small valley surrounded by steep, red sandstone mounds. On the opposite side of the river, the bluffs are sheer, rising about 500 feet.

In addition to the concrete shaft building, the plant includes a 300 ton crude ore storage silo which is painted bright red. A conveyor belt for hauling potash used in making commercial fertilizer runs through a slated roof shed from the shaft building to the silo.

East of the silo is a large green building which ranges in levels from three to five stories. It is a product storage area.

To the north, there is a three-story, sand colored processing plant building.

The mine offices are located in a modern one story building some distance to the west of the other building. It is fronted by a large green lawn.

The entire facility is surrounded by a barbed wire fence.

A towel dries your flesh because the water on your skin tends to fill up the spaces between the fibers of the towel, like ink in blotting paper.

Soldier Has Unusual Civilian Interest

Sergeant Wileman, who has recently reenlisted for four more years, began raising worms seven years ago while stationed at Fort Lewis Washington. He became interested in this line of work when he had to pay $1.50 for a small box of worms in order to go fishing. In his travels across the country, he noticed numerous stands selling worms, and he would stop at each one and ask the going price of the little animals. Convinced that the raising of worms was a potentially challenging and rewarding prospect, Sergeant Wileman cajoled his brother into leaving his work at the local hospital, and to join him in the raising of worms.

The sergeant and his brother began a systematic inquiry into the methods of raising worms with queries to various universities. The University of Oklahoma responded promptly, and the brothers' careers were launched.

Success favored the enterprise, and today, Sergeant Wileman and his brother have one of the largest worm businesses in the nation. The worm farm's average yearly income is $30,000 after expenses.

While Sergeant Wileman finishes his hitch in the Army, his brother will be supervising the operation. The farm is located at 1213 East Church St., Booneville, Mississippi. Worm fanciers who would like to stop by and see this operation for themselves will certainly be made welcome.

Fewer than 5 million people were at work on the nation's farms in February — the smallest number in more than 50 years.

Star Of TV Series 'Combat' Looking For A Bigger Home

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Vic Morrow, the tough and grimy sergeant of the "Combat!" television series, is shopping for a new house.

Two years ago the actor and his wife, Barbara, moved into a three-bedroom, ranch-style home in the San Fernando Valley. With only one daughter, Carrie Ann, there was plenty of room for everyone. Now, however, there is another little Morrow, Jennifer Lee, and Vic needs a roomier establishment.

When he does find a new home it will be another step up the status ladder for Vic who started near the bottom. Less than 10 years ago he drove a taxicab in New York City to pay the expense of attending Paul Mann's Actors Workshop. Barbara sold orange juice to help out.

Slowly, steadily his career has provided security for his family. And as the star of "Combat!" (ABC-TV) Morrow has built an identity with American moviegoers and televiewers, an achievement he believes is of paramount importance to an actor.

In addition to acting, Morrow works at screen writing and producing. When time permits he locks himself in a small studio behind his home to edit film and pound a typewriter.

He has purchased the screen rights to "Deathwatch," in which he played a leading role on the New York stage. He hopes to produce it next spring when he completes this season's episodes of "Combat!"

His first effort as a producer resulted in "Last Year At Malibu," a 12-minute short subject which he made for fun.

Surprisingly, it was shown in a Sunset Strip night club for several weeks, and then ran for an additional six weeks in a Los Angeles art house.

Eventually Morrow hopes to become a director. To prepare for the job he took a course in film editing at the University of Southern California. For practical experience he brought reels of film home, splicing and experimenting with the business of putting a movie together.

Morrow's drive to fulfill his ambition does not leave a great deal of time for Hollywood's social swim, the bright lights and parties. While the glamour crowd lives it up Vic is hard at work.

"When I'm working in the series I'm off to the studio at 5:30 in the morning," he says. "And I'm so tired after a day's work of climbing hills and firing weapons that I stop for a drink somewhere on the way home. By the time I eat dinner it's 8 o'clock and I don't get to see much of the children."

Vic was a motorcycle buff until two years ago when he suffered a bad spill at 65-miles-per-hour on the Hollywood Freeway. Now he is content with being a spectator at sports events.

When the grind of work presses too heavily on Morrow, he and Barbara (her professional name is Barbara Turner) pack their daughters into the family car and go for a long drive.

Because Barbara also works they have a housekeeper who stays with the children during the day.

"We spend our weekends looking for that new house," Morrow says. "But the prices around Los Angeles are out of this world. We'll keep searching until we find the right place — one with plenty of room for film-cutting."

1919 Black Sox Scandal Topic Of New Book

By JOSEPH BREU
United Press International

"Say it ain't so, Joe."

But it was so, and "Shoeless Joe" Jackson, illiterate except with a bat, was ready to admit it: he and seven other members of the Chicago White Sox had agreed to dump the 1919 World Series to the Cincinnati Reds. What Jackson told a grand jury shocked America.

The story of that scandal is told by Eliot Asinof in his new book, "Eight Men Out (The Black Sox and the 1919 World Series)" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc. $4.95).

It revolves around baseball of course, but it is far more than a baseball story. It is a look at social history, at government and, most of all, at human nature.

Asinof says the great sellout in the 1919 World Series was initiated by the players themselves and not by gamblers.

How guilty were the eight Chicago stars, members of one of baseball's all-time great teams? It varied from man to man. The ringleader, first baseman Chick Gandil, engineered the coup and cheated his own teammates on the distribution of the payoff money.

Another, third baseman Buck Weaver, was in on the conspiracy at the start but when the call of "Play Ball" sounded, his consuming passion for the game was supreme and he played it honestly all the way. He spent the rest of his life in a vain attempt to clear his name.

In the end, cleared by a court of law, the "Black Sox" were more victims than villains. They paid a full price while others, equally guilty, escaped unscathed.

Who else was guilty? Asinof leaves no doubt about that. There was the White Sox owner, Charles Comiskey, "The Old Roman" who, says Asinof had information about the crime but chose to sit on it for reasons of pride and greed.

There was Arnold Rothstein, the King of the Gamblers, and his lawyer, William J. Fallon, The Great Mouthpiece, whose greatest talent was getting things fixed.

Most of all, according to Asinof, there was former boxing Champion Abe Attell, who double-crossed everybody but escaped unpunished because Fallon, to protect Rothstein, bought off the man who could put the finger on "the Little Champ."

Asinof traces the whole incredibly mis-managed conspiracy. He discloses the plays and pitches that were made to throw the games. Why did the players do it? Most of them said at the time that it was for "the wife and kids." Asinof doesn't exonerate them but he makes no attempt to hid his sympathy for them as he looks deeper for the reasons.

These were some of the top stars in the game but Comiskey grossly underpaid them, even by the standards of that time. Then, too, fixed ball games were not uncommon in that time and no one had ever been punished for it. Baseball officials, with their myopic eyes on the gate receipts, didn't want any scandals.

Finally, this was America on the eve of the 1920's and that, as Asinof reminds us, was "a decade of unprecedented crime, corruption and immorality." The "Eight Men Out" simply were in step with their time.

Surprisingly, it was shown in a Sunset Strip night club for several weeks, and then ran for an additional six weeks in a Los Angeles art house.

Eventually Morrow hopes to become a director. To prepare for the job he took a course in film editing at the University of Southern California. For practical experience he brought reels of film home, splicing and experimenting with the business of putting a movie together.

Morrow's drive to fulfill his ambition does not leave a great deal of time for Hollywood's social swim, the bright lights and parties. While the glamour crowd lives it up Vic is hard at work.

"When I'm working in the series I'm off to the studio at 5:30 in the morning," he says. "And I'm so tired after a day's work of climbing hills and firing weapons that I stop for a drink somewhere on the way home. By the time I eat dinner it's 8 o'clock and I don't get to see much of the children."

Vic was a motorcycle buff until two years ago when he suffered a bad spill at 65-miles-per-hour on the Hollywood Freeway. Now he is content with being a spectator at sports events.

When the grind of work presses too heavily on Morrow, he and Barbara (her professional name is Barbara Turner) pack their daughters into the family car and go for a long drive.

Because Barbara also works they have a housekeeper who stays with the children during the day.

"We spend our weekends looking for that new house," Morrow says. "But the prices around Los Angeles are out of this world. We'll keep searching until we find the right place — one with plenty of room for film-cutting."

1919 Black Sox Scandal Topic Of New Book

By JOSEPH BREU
United Press International

"Say it ain't so, Joe."

But it was so, and "Shoeless Joe" Jackson, illiterate except with a bat, was ready to admit it: he and seven other members of the Chicago White Sox had agreed to dump the 1919 World Series to the Cincinnati Reds. What Jackson told a grand jury shocked America.

The story of that scandal is told by Eliot Asinof in his new book, "Eight Men Out (The Black Sox and the 1919 World Series)" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc. $4.95).

It revolves around baseball of course, but it is far more than a baseball story. It is a look at social history, at government and, most of all, at human nature.

Asinof says the great sellout in the 1919 World Series was initiated by the players themselves and not by gamblers.

How guilty were the eight Chicago stars, members of one of baseball's all-time great teams? It varied from man to man. The ringleader, first baseman Chick Gandil, engineered the coup and cheated his own teammates on the distribution of the payoff money.

Another, third baseman Buck Weaver, was in on the conspiracy at the start but when the call of "Play Ball" sounded, his consuming passion for the game was supreme and he played it honestly all the way. He spent the rest of his life in a vain attempt to clear his name.

In the end, cleared by a court of law, the "Black Sox" were more victims than villains. They paid a full price while others, equally guilty, escaped unscathed.

Who else was guilty? Asinof leaves no doubt about that. There was the White Sox owner, Charles Comiskey, "The Old Roman" who, says Asinof had information about the crime but chose to sit on it for reasons of pride and greed.

There was Arnold Rothstein, the King of the Gamblers, and his lawyer, William J. Fallon, The Great Mouthpiece, whose greatest talent was getting things fixed.

Most of all, according to Asinof, there was former boxing Champion Abe Attell, who double-crossed everybody but escaped unpunished because Fallon, to protect Rothstein, bought off the man who could put the finger on "the Little Champ."

Asinof traces the whole incredibly mis-managed conspiracy. He discloses the plays and pitches that were made to throw the games. Why did the players do it? Most of them said at the time that it was for "the wife and kids." Asinof doesn't exonerate them but he makes no attempt to hid his sympathy for them as he looks deeper for the reasons.

These were some of the top stars in the game but Comiskey grossly underpaid them, even by the standards of that time. Then, too, fixed ball games were not uncommon in that time and no one had ever been punished for it. Baseball officials, with their myopic eyes on the gate receipts, didn't want any scandals.

Finally, this was America on the eve of the 1920's and that, as Asinof reminds us, was "a decade of unprecedented crime, corruption and immorality." The "Eight Men Out" simply were in step with their time.

Woman Said 'Rare Genius' In Theoretical Physics

By CHARLES B. ENGELKE

BLUE BELL, Pa. (UPI)—Ruth Schwartz has been called "a rare genius" in the field of theoretical physics.

Her thesis for her doctorate from Radliffe College was entitled "Rotational Magnetic Moments in Polyantomic Molecules."

She has written or co-authored 11 scientific papers and she is a member of the American Physical Society.

She is a consulting scientist in physics for the Philco Corporation's scientific laboratory here.

She's also a wife, housekeeper and mother of two—Scott, 8, and Lynda, 6.

An attractive brunette, Dr. Schwartz, 38, a native of Louisville, Ky., doesn't feel that there is any conflict in her roles.

"For me, my home life and this work have brought a far fuller life than either one alone would have," she said.

Born Ruth Fitzmayer, she is married to John Schwartz who works for Remington-Rand.

The daughter of a retired violinist with the Louisville Philharmonic Orchestra, Dr. Schwartz graduated in 1943 from Atherton High School with first honors. She played the violin in the school orchestra, took interest in intramural sports, worked on the school paper, and was president of the student council.

She enrolled at the University of Louisville intending to major in political science. But in her freshman year she elected a course in trigonometry, and it led her on into physics.

In 1948 she enrolled in the graduate school at Radcliffe College, receiving her master's degree in 1949 and her doctorate in 1953.

When Dr. Schwartz joined Philco in 1952, transistors were just beginning a breakthrough and studies in solid state electronics were just beginning to develop. It was for her work in this field that her immediate superior, Dr. Carlo Bocciarelli has termed her "a rare genius."

"Her knowledge of theoretical physics is vast and she has the mind to bring out the facts she needs almost the moment she needs them," he said.

Dr. Schwartz works two days a week at Philco, developing the theoretical physics and turning her computations over to scientists to work out by actual experiment.

She doesn't use computers or other mechanical devices in her analysis of a problem. About the only writing is jotting down of the theory on which she is working. The rest is done in her brain.

Are her two roles entirely separate? Not exactly.

"Many times I have stopped what I was doing at home to jot down a solution to a problem that we had been discussing in the laboratory," she said. "Other times, I know that I'll remember and I just keep at the housework."

There is no blackboard for figuring formula in the Schwartz home—only one at her office.

"If there were one at the house," she said, "I don't think equations or curves would stand the desire of the two children to draw with chalk."

Cold Facts

DOWS, Iowa (AP) — A 72-year-old Dows woman likes basketball so much that when she listens to a game on the radio she keeps a running score.

Recently she tried to remember the score of a game. After searching the house for the paper on which she had written it, she found it on a package of meat in the refrigerator.

Eat Fast, Travelers

BALTIMORE (AP) — Chocolate candy with liquor filling is one of the items most often confiscated from airplane passengers by U.S. Customs officers at Friendship International Airport.

Alcoholic sweets apparently are for sale at many tourist stands in Europe, but they cannot be brought into the United States.

The family wage earner is a woman in 4½ million families in America, or one family in 10, according to the Labor Department.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first of author John O'Hara's works to be used for filmed television is "It's Mental Work." It is to be found in O'Hara's book of short stories entitled "Assembly." The story was sold for use on "Bob Hope Presents the Chrysler Theater," new one-hour series for NBC this fall.

Singer Mike Allen, who was sponsored on the summer's first "Talent Scouts" program by Lauren Bacall, got immediate employment response. He was booked into a Las Vegas night club and opens here Sept. 2 at the Living Room.

Rosemary Clooney has a date on Jimmy Dean's new ABC variety hour on Sept. 26, Dean's second show.

The first "Hallmark Hall of Fame" show of the season on NBC will be a repeat of Shakespear's "The Tempest," starring Maurice Evans, Richard Burton, Lee Remick, Roddy McDowall and Tom Poston. The original taped telecast was Feb. 3, 1960. The repeat will be 6-7:30 p.m. Oct. 20.

Comedienne Nancy Walker has been signed for four appearances on Garry Moore's CBS hour for 1963-64.

"Sing Along With Mitch" will make another time switch on NBC this fall and be seen 10-11 p.m. Mondays. It was telecast on Thursday nights during his first season, shifting to Fridays for 1962-63.

Soviet "Spy Fleet" Threat To Allies

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has a spy fleet of about 100 "fishing trawlers" operating around the world and posing a potential threat to Allied naval operations and communications, British experts said Tuesday.

The Soviet spying activities appear to be on the increase with the Russians apparently using bases and other facilities in Cuba and other "friendly" nations like the United Arab Republic and Yemen to facilitate operations from the Caribbean to the Indian Ocean.

According to the sources, the Russians also are using better and more-up-to-date radar and electronic equipment. They said the devices apparently are designed to intercept Allied naval messages and intelligence.

The sources said, moreover, that the Soviet equipment is considered capable of interfering with Allied communications which could cause havoc in the event of an emergency or during a war.

By 1980 an estimated 120 million vehicles will be using the nation's roads.

Member Of Wedding

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — From now on weddings just won't seem legal to some local families, without Mabel Garwood Williams on hand to report them.

Miss Williams, retiring society editor of the Oakland Tribune, has been covering marriage ceremonies for the paper for 46 years —in many cases those of mother, daughter and granddaughter.

The United States imported more than 10 million pounds of canned mushrooms last year — five times as much as five years ago. Nearly two thirds of the total came from Taiwan.

Professions Still Active

DENVER (AP)—Colorado's 36 horseshoers and blacksmiths have formed a statewide association. Their president, Al Pinson, estimated the number of horses in Colarado has doubled in the last 10 years, with at least 30,000 in the Denver area alone.

MODELS WITH AN AIR OF STARDUST—Three young fashion models show their choices for fall and have three sets of famous parents to applaud. Francesca Hilton (left), 16, daughter of Zsa Zsa Gabor and Conrad Hilton, wears a snuggly blue cardigan with a raised diamond pattern in gold. Shelley Wanger (center), 15, whose parents are actress Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger, teams a long skirt with a brief sweater top, both in shades of mauve. At right, Candy Bergen, 17, daughter of Edgar Bergen and model Frances Wescott, prefers a lacy-knit lavender pullover. The girls selected the fashions and posed for Seventeen Magazine's parade of new fall styles.

Brazil's Communists Are Attacked From The Pulpit

By JOSEPH SIMS

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Brazil's Roman Catholic clergy, led by Dom Jaime Cardinal Camara of Rio, have started attacking Brazilian communists from the pulpit.

The movement comes amid increasing conservative charges of Communist infiltration here.

Cardinal Camara used his weekly radio program "The Voice of the Pastor" recently to warn listeners "the Brazilian Government is delaying so much in curbing Communism that the Government eventually will be swallowed up."

The Cardinal was echoing charges by such conservatives as Guanabara Governor Carlos Lacerda and Sao Paulo Governor Ademar de Barros that President Joao Goulart has permitted massive Communist infiltration in his government.

Late in July priests in Rio began warning churchgoers against the dangers of Communism. Now the sermons are being repeated all over Brazil.

"Communists are gaining in strength," one priest said. "They have important positions that they use unscrupulously to consolidate their power.

"We Brazilians are free to make the choice — democracy or Communism. I'm sure all intelligent men will think carefully of Soviet totalitarianism and all that it implies, then will choose wisely."

Dom Jaime Camara, one of Brazil's three Cardinals, has long carried on an anti-Communist crusade through radio speeches and sermons. He frequently hits the Federal Government and President Goulart for the increasing leftist-nationlist tendency in Brasilia.

The anti-communist movement comes as the Brazilian clergy seems to diverge on the need for reforms to lift the peasant masses out of misery.

A national bishops conference recently supported President Goulart's call for radical land reform.

Dom Jaime Camara's name was not among those who signed the document of support.

Bishop Dom Jorge Marcos de Oliveira, of Santo Andre, an industrial suburb of Sac Paulo, appeared recently at a workers political rally with several radical leftists who attacked Brazilian landholders.

Conservative congressmen accused the bishop of "playing with Communists."

The bishop replied: "I not only give sermons in church — I go where the workers are to talk to them."

He and other liberal clergymen call for immediate reforms.

Conservative clergy feeling is best illustrated in a sermon delivered recently by a priest in one of Rio's largest churches.

"After we rid Brazil of Communists, reforms will come naturally," he said.

Don't Go Exploring

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Stay out of abandoned mines, warns the University of Nevada's bureau of mines.

"Most of the populated areas of Nevada are located near past or present mining activity," said Dr. Stanley E. Jerome, the bureau's associate director.

"And in between are thousands of square miles riddled with prospectors' diggings. For the uninitiated they are booby traps."

Italian Moviegoers Prefer Spectaculars Rather Than 'Art' Pictures Or Comedies

ROME (UPI) — Italian moviegoers these days seem to prefer spectacular films and care little for "art" pictures or comedies.

A box office survey for the 1962-63 season showed Luchion Visconti's "The Leopard" well in the lead, with an intake of 765,816,000 lire ($1,225,305). Runner-up was Hollywood's "The Longest Day," with 643,421,000 lire ($1,029,743) and third was "The Bounty Mutiny" with 509,389,000 lire ($815,022).

Among Italian films, "Il Sorpasso," the story of a road accident starring Vittorio Gassman, netted 349,072,000 lire (558,515) and "Il Mafioso" (The Mafia Man), starring comedian Alberto Sordi, had an earning of 310,963,000 lire ($497,540).

A host of films about sex did rather well for their low cost.

In contrast, comedies drew fewer spectators. The apparent explanation is that while Italian television is very sparing with sex, it is lavish with comedies and the average Italian feels he can get enough of them without leaving his favorite armchair.

Among the box office disappointments were a number of Italian films considered of artistic value.

"The Four Days Of Naples," a story of the World War II revolt against the German Army, had an intake of only .173,853,000 lire ($278,261.) Italian officials had liked the film well enough to make it this country's candidate for the last Academy Award.

More Meat

Gains were recorded in almost every category except poultry. World trade in beef rose above one million tons for the first time.

Brazil's Communists Are Attacked From The Pulpit

By JOSEPH SIMS

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Brazil's Roman Catholic clergy, led by Dom Jaime Cardinal Camara of Rio, have started attacking Brazilian communists from the pulpit.

The movement comes amid increasing conservative charges of Communist infiltration here.

Cardinal Camara used his weekly radio program "The Voice of the Pastor" recently to warn listeners "the Brazilian Government is delaying so much in curbing Communism that the Government eventually will be swallowed up."

The Cardinal was echoing charges by such conservatives as Guanabara Governor Carlos Lacerda and Sao Paulo Governor Ademar de Barros that President Joao Goulart has permitted massive Communist infiltration in his government.

Late in July priests in Rio began warning churchgoers against the dangers of Communism. Now the sermons are being repeated all over Brazil.

"Communists are gaining in strength," one priest said. "They have important positions that they use unscrupulously to consolidate their power.

"We Brazilians are free to make the choice — democracy or Communism. I'm sure all intelligent men will think carefully of Soviet totalitarianism and all that it implies, then will choose wisely."

Dom Jaime Camara, one of Brazil's three Cardinals, has long carried on an anti-Communist crusade through radio speeches and sermons. He frequently hits the Federal Government and President Goulart for the increasing leftist-nationlist tendency in Brasilia.

The anti-communist movement comes as the Brazilian clergy seems to diverge on the need for reforms to lift the peasant masses out of misery.

A national bishops conference recently supported President Goulart's call for radical land reform.

Dom Jaime Camara's name was not among those who signed the document of support.

Bishop Dom Jorge Marcos de Oliveira, of Santo Andre, an industrial suburb of Sac Paulo, appeared recently at a workers political rally with several radical leftists who attacked Brazilian landholders.

Conservative congressmen accused the bishop of "playing with Communists."

The bishop replied: "I not only give sermons in church — I go where the workers are to talk to them."

He and other liberal clergymen call for immediate reforms.

Conservative clergy feeling is best illustrated in a sermon delivered recently by a priest in one of Rio's largest churches.

"After we rid Brazil of Communists, reforms will come naturally," he said.

Don't Go Exploring

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Stay out of abandoned mines, warns the University of Nevada's bureau of mines.

"Most of the populated areas of Nevada are located near past or present mining activity," said Dr. Stanley E. Jerome, the bureau's associate director.

"And in between are thousands of square miles riddled with prospectors' diggings. For the uninitiated they are booby traps."

Wineow Street Closed To Auto Traffic Today

The Wineow Street subway will be closed today for a period of two or three hours beginning at 10 a. m. during application of a coat of blacktop, Street Commissioner Lucile W. Roeder announced.

The Police and Fire Departments have been alerted to the closing, she said, and traffic will be diverted during the period the subway is closed.

Those wishing to get to Wineow Street business places located north of the subway are to travel by way of streets in downtown Cumberland.

Mrs. Roeder said she has been concerned about the condition of the street because of the water continually accumulating there. It means that water causes holes and the Street Department is constantly called on to make repairs.

With winter approaching and only coldpatch to work with during that period, Mrs. Roeder consulted with City Engineer Charles R. Nuzum concerning the possibility of a new wearing course in the subway and whether it would interfere with clearance.

Nuzum advised Mrs. Roeder that a one-inch course could be installed, making conditions safer during the remaining time the subway is in use and will, in her opinion, be less costly than continually making repairs.

Approximately 60 tons of blacktop will be involved. A study resulted and after taking into consideration all costs and methods, it was decided to accept a "reasonable price" from the Cumberland Contracting Company since the firm is working in that area.

Work involved includes a tack coat, sweeping, drying, then laying of the wearing course.

A bridge in connection with the Cumberland Thruway project eventually will replace the subway. The State Roads Commission Tuesday opened bids on this phase of the Thruway project.

Special Job Centers

ROME (AP) — The Italiant government maintains public works centers to provide employment for laborers who are too old, untrained or physically unsuited for normal jobs. The centers provide employment for about a quarter of a million men, who work on roads, public buildings, land reclamation and forestry projects.

Group Of 28 Catholic Women Attend Retreat

A group of 28 Catholic women, all but one from this area, spent the weekend at St. Emma's Retreat House, located near Greensburg, Pa.

The retreat group has grown in size each year since 1960 when four local women were admitted for the weekend spiritual exercise. Spokesmen for the retreatants said it is hoped that 50 will register for next year's registration, that number being the capacity for a weekend at St. Emma's.

Making the retreat this year were Misses Frances Ellsworth, Alice Stakem and Rose Uhl, all of Cumberland; Mary Frances Mosser, Baltimore, and Olive Wilderman, Frostburg.

Mesdames Margaret Aemmer, Martha Blaul, Loretta Carney, Jane Chirdon, Terese Coleman, Angela Collins, Esther Duvall, Catherine Glick, Alvera Grabenstein, Mary Harrison, Margarite Keller, Alberta Lindner, Josephine Mackey, Sylvia Mattingly, Catherine McMullen, Virginia Rosenbaum, Ann Russell, Virginia Shireman, Julia Werner, Regina White, Evalyn Wolfhope, Lenore Young, all of Cumberland, and Agnes Bowers, Frostburg.

Women interested in making the 1964 retreat may contact any of the retreatants. St. Emma's is run by the Benedictine Sisters, who do the cooking at St. Vincent's College, Latrobe, Pa., as well as tend to the retreat house.

Retreat master for the weekend exercise was Father Francis Ginocchi.

Friday Deadline For Joint Reunion

Deadline for reservations for the joint reunion being held by the 1953 graduates of Cumberland's four Catholic High Schools is Friday night.

The reunion, scheduled Saturday at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, will be for members of the 1953 graduating classes of LaSalle, Catholic Girls Central, Ursuline Academy and St. Mary's High.

Reservations should be made by Friday with Mrs. Nancy Wakefoose, PA 4-7699.

The affair will open with a cocktail hour at 6 p. m., followed by a dinner and dance.

MRS. JUNE CLEM

New Teacher At Allegany

A Cumberland woman who graduated from high school in 1940 and resumed her education in college in 1959, has been named as an instructor at Allegany High School.

She is Mrs. June (Kirk) Clem, wife of Milo Clem, chief clerk to the superintendent of the Cumberland Division of the B&O Railroad.

She graduated from Fort Hill High School in 1940 and entered Frostburg State College in 1959. She graduated last June from the college where she took social studies with a major in history. She will teach American and world history at Allegany High.

During the past two years her son, David Clem, was also a student at the college and next month he will start his junior year at the school.

The Clem family resides at 520 East Prince Georges Street.

Richard T. Rizer, assistant superintendent of schools, said Mrs. Clem will replace Miss Josephine Roe, who has resigned to further her studies.

Garbage Dumping Cited By Officials

Dumping of garbage into Wills Creek is on the increase and city officials yesterday demanded that the practice be stopped.

Roy F. Maphis, foreman of the flood control maintenance crew, reported to City Engineer Charles R. Nuzum, superintendent of the crew, that garbage is evident from city junction to where the channel reaches rock bottom.

Present low water mark intensifies the problem, it was said.

Power Firm May Sell Deep Creek Lake

A state agency has expressed interest in the purchase of Deep Creek Lake, popular 4,800-acre recreation site in Garrett County, from the Pennsylvania Electric Company.

The Department of Forests and Parks plans to inquire about the purchase, according to Del. Richard Grumbacher (D.-Wash.), chairman of the Legislative Council's committee on state parks.

He said the hydro-power operation at the lake was no longer economical and that no other electric utilities are interested in the facility.

The lake was man-made in 1925 for power production. Pennsylvania Electric is interested in selling all its holdings there in a single package—the land, lake dam, buildings and equipment, Grumbacher said.

The purchase price would presumably be set by the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission and the Maryland Public Sevice Commission, the regulatory agencies that watch over utility financial matters as well as establishing rates.

The two commissions would be interested in setting a minimum figure, and the company would be free to sell at any higher price it could obtain.

The lake has a 65-mile waterfront, much of it ringed by private homes and commercial developments. All of the beach and shore area is owned by the electric company.

The availability of the lake was discussed Tuesday at a meeting of the committee on state parks.

Senator Spencer W. Graham (R., Garrett) said owners of property around the lake were concerned that they might be denied access to the shore by any new owners.

S. Lawrence Hammerman, head of the commission on forests and parks, said he planned to look into the possibilities of state ownership.

"We shouldn't let this get away from us," he said.

Hammerman was meeting for the first time with the newly constituted committee.

He told them that, at present, he had no suggestions for new legislation concerning the department, but that he would report back to them in a few months, "when I get my house in order."

Hammerman told the committee earlier that the department was engaged in too many projects at the same time. He said that token work had been started on a number of park projects in order to secure the total appropriations for the improvements. After that, he said, the projects stalled indefinitely.

Wineow Street Closed To Auto Traffic Today

The Wineow Street subway will be closed today for a period of two or three hours beginning at 10 a. m. during application of a coat of blacktop, Street Commissioner Lucile W. Roeder announced.

The Police and Fire Departments have been alerted to the closing, she said, and traffic will be diverted during the period the subway is closed.

Those wishing to get to Wineow Street business places located north of the subway are to travel by way of streets in downtown Cumberland.

Mrs. Roeder said she has been concerned about the condition of the street because of the water continually accumulating there. It means that water causes holes and the Street Department is constantly called on to make repairs.

With winter approaching and only coldpatch to work with during that period, Mrs. Roeder consulted with City Engineer Charles R. Nuzum concerning the possibility of a new wearing course in the subway and whether it would interfere with clearance.

Nuzum advised Mrs. Roeder that a one-inch course could be installed, making conditions safer during the remaining time the subway is in use and will, in her opinion, be less costly than continually making repairs.

Approximately 60 tons of blacktop will be involved. A study resulted and after taking into consideration all costs and methods, it was decided to accept a "reasonable price" from the Cumberland Contracting Company since the firm is working in that area.

Work involved includes a tack coat, sweeping, drying, then laying of the wearing course.

A bridge in connection with the Cumberland Thruway project eventually will replace the subway. The State Roads Commission Tuesday opened bids on this phase of the Thruway project.

Special Job Centers

ROME (AP) — The Italian government maintains public works centers to provide employment for laborers who are too old, untrained or physically unsuited for normal jobs. The centers provide employment for about a quarter of a million men, who work on roads, public buildings, land reclamation and forestry projects.

Group Of 28 Catholic Women Attend Retreat

A group of 28 Catholic women, all but one from this area, spent the weekend at St. Emma's Retreat House, located near Greensburg, Pa.

The retreat group has grown in size each year since 1960 when four local women were admitted for the weekend spiritual exercise. Spokesmen for the retreatants said it is hoped that 50 will register for next year's registration, that number being the capacity for a weekend at St. Emma's.

Making the retreat this year were Misses Frances Ellsworth, Alice Stakem and Rose Uhl, all of Cumberland; Mary Frances Mosser, Baltimore, and Olive Wilderman, Frostburg.

Mesdames Margaret Aemmer, Martha Blaul, Loretta Carney, Jane Chirdon, Terese Coleman, Angela Collins, Esther Duvall, Catherine Glick, Alvera Grabenstein, Mary Harrison, Margarite Keller, Alberta Lindner, Josephine Mackey, Sylvia Mattingly, Catherine McMullen, Virginia Rosenbaum, Ann Russell, Virginia Shireman, Julia Werner, Regina White, Evalyn Wolfhope, Lenore Young, all of Cumberland, and Agnes Bowers, Frostburg.

Women interested in making the 1964 retreat may contact any of the retreatants. St. Emma's is run by the Benedictine Sisters, who do the cooking at St. Vincent's College, Latrobe, Pa., as well as tend to the retreat house.

Retreat master for the weekend exercise was Father Francis Ginocchi.

Garbage Dumping Cited By Officials

Dumping of garbage into Wills Creek is on the increase and city officials yesterday demanded that the practice be stopped.

Roy F. Maphis, foreman of the flood control maintenance crew, reported to City Engineer Charles R. Nuzum, superintendent of the crew, that garbage is evident from city junction to where the channel reaches rock bottom.

Present low water mark intensifies the problem, it was said.

Power Firm May Sell Deep Creek Lake

A state agency has expressed interest in the purchase of Deep Creek Lake, popular 4,800-acre recreation site in Garrett County, from the Pennsylvania Electric Company.

The Department of Forests and Parks plans to inquire about the purchase, according to Del. Richard Grumbacher (D.-Wash.), chairman of the Legislative Council's committee on state parks.

He said the hydro-power operation at the lake was no longer economical and that no other electric utilities are interested in the facility.

The lake was man-made in 1925 for power production. Pennsylvania Electric is interested in selling all its holdings there in a single package—the land, lake dam, buildings and equipment, Grumbacher said.

The purchase price would presumably be set by the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission and the Maryland Public Sevice Commission, the regulatory agencies that watch over utility financial matters as well as establishing rates.

The two commissions would be interested in setting a minimum figure, and the company would be free to sell at any higher price it could obtain.

The lake has a 65-mile waterfront, much of it ringed by private homes and commercial developments. All of the beach and shore area is owned by the electric company.

The availability of the lake was discussed Tuesday at a meeting of the committee on state parks.

Senator Spencer W. Graham (R., Garrett) said owners of property around the lake were concerned that they might be denied access to the shore by any new owners.

S. Lawrence Hammerman, head of the commission on forests and parks, said he planned to look into the possibilities of state ownership.

"We shouldn't let this get away from us," he said.

Hammerman was meeting for the first time with the newly constituted committee.

He told them that, at present, he had no suggestions for new legislation concerning the department, but that he would report back to them in a few months, "when I get my house in order."

Hammerman told the committee earlier that the department was engaged in too many projects at the same time. He said that token work had been started on a number of park projects in order to secure the total appropriations for the improvements. After that, he said, the projects stalled indefinitely.

Concerts Scheduled At Park Over Holiday

Two concerts and a supervised nature walk will highlight weekend activities in Constitution Park which will officially close for the season Labor Day.

Street Commissioner Lucile Roeder announced general plans for the season's final weekend yesterday.

In addition, the Labor Day weekend is expected to find hundreds using the swimming pool and picnic facilities and hundreds more making casual visits to the spacious park's play and wooded areas.

Sunday at 7 p. m. the "Gentlemen of Note," local award-winning dance orchestra will present a concert in the amphitheatre and Monday (Labor Day) at 7 p. m., a concert by the Cumberland Concert Band is scheduled, Mrs. Roeder said. Further details of both these events will be announced later in the week.

The "nature walk" through a selected portion of the park will be conducted at 10 a. m. Monday and is for adults and children.

Plans for the nature walk are the outgrowth of talks the Street Department had with Harry M. Hartman, assistant district forestor of the State Department of Forests and Parks, concerning the care of present growth and the reforestation of the park on a long-range basis. It was suggested that the public be given an opportunity to see the natural beauty of the park area and to hear it explained by an expert in the field.

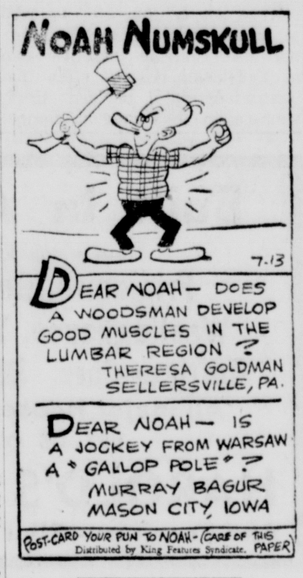
As a result of this conversation, Don A. Emerson, 507 Braddock Road, an instructor at Frostburg State College, agreed to conduct the walk, Mrs. Roeder said.

It will be open to the public, both children and adults, and those planning to attend should contact the department, if possible. However, anyone appearing at the starting site near the swimming pool Monday can take part in the walk.

Mrs. Roeder said the walk is being offered because of the belief that in order to appreciate the park, one must see what is in it. The experience will help those attending to value the park more and emphasize the necessity of taking care of it.

These activities, she added, are in line with past policy of increasing and improving programs for family participation. The park, Mrs. Roeder continued, is one of the city's greatest assets and while budgets are limited, it is the intent to promote as many public activities as possible.

Brochures picturing scenes in the park and containing descriptive material also will be available for distribution during the weekend.



Another of the baseball Boyers is coming up. He's Len Boyer, 6-foot-2 third sacker in the Yankee farm system.

Junior Rifle Club Members To Get Awards

Ladies Night plus the awarding of prizes to the Cumberland Junior Optimist Club will feature the meeting of the Cumberland Optimist Club today at 6:15 p.m. in Central YMCA.

The team was chartered in April 1959. In competition in National Junior Club Postal Matches, Division C, non-scholastic, the team in 1959-60 placed first among Optimist teams, fourth among other Maryland and 75th nationally.

In 1960-61, with 150 clubs competing, the group placed second among Optimist clubs, first in Maryland, and 62nd nationally.

The following year, vieing against 185 teams, the local group placed first among Optimist clubs, first among all other state entries, and 17th nationally.

In 1962-63, with 179 clubs competing, the local team placed first among Optimist clubs, first in Maryland, and 16th nationally.

Warren Brehm, who supervises the club, said 250 boys have gone through the hunting safety course, and ten are taking it now.

In marksmanship, 225 have qualified and three boys have attained the rating of "distinguished expert" under the National Rifle Association rules. They are William Lewis, William Weigelt and William VanHorn.

CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 300 One Union survivor of bloody Chancellorsville was remembered particularly by her fellow soldiers long after the war. This volunteer in Michigan militia rode a horse along the shallow front line trenches, daring the Rebel fire, to distribute hot coffee and fresh bread to riflemen and cannoneers who had not been fed for hours, and tell wavering men, "Boys, now you've got the range. Keep it up and you'll soon silence their guns."

Distributed by King Features Syndicate

It was recorded that men were heartened or shamed to return to guns they had abandoned. Although she was wounded the second day at Chancellorsville, she did not leave the ranks of the fighting men. An admiring Pennsylvanian wrote, "She never flinched or betrayed the slightest emotion or fear." This inspiring soldier was Anna Etheridge, who went away to war in 1861 as laundress for a company of the 2nd Michigan, and transferred to the 3rd Michigan as cook. Eventually, she succeeded in enlisting in the 5th Michigan as a regular soldier.

Brig. Gen. Phil Kearny, moved by Anna's fortitude and inspiring influence, recommended her for a sergeant's rank, pay and rations just before he was killed in action at Chantilly. His successor, David Bell Birney, fulfilled the promise. On May 13, 1863, in the presence of his entire command, Birney made Anna the recipient of a new bronze medal he had devised for enlisted men who showed extraordinary valor, the Kearny Cross.

Sgt. Etheridge continued in the Army of the Potomac until the war was over, and was a veteran of a dozen battles when the Rebels surrendered at Appomattox. She was enabled to obtain a clerkship in Washington to support her aged father, and never exploited herself as a heroine.

Pay Questions Discussed At Civil Service Meeting

Representatives of the Police and Firemen's Welfare Association met with the Civil Service Commission Tuesday night at City Hall to discuss several pay questions.

Attorney William Walsh represented the association which asked clarification of certain matters.

One of these involved the pay status of a member of the Fire Department who during his probationary period was called to active duty with a military reserve unit. It was requested that his time in service be credited to him so he could receive pay of the position as if his service had not been interrupted. The commission said such a request is under consideration and a decision is forthcoming.

Another question involved the pay of employes under the classification plan who were promoted in the first half of the calendar year and received an increase in pay as a result. The law had stated that if an employe was hired or promoted in the first half of the year, he would not receive a pay increment until July of the following year (a period of about 18 months).

Promotion of the employes in the first half created a problem. If they had not been promoted, on July 1 of the same year they would have received a regular increment under the pay plan for their old position and actually would be getting the same amount of money or more than that which the promoted position gave them.

This inequity was corrected by a subsequent ruling and ordinance in April, 1962.

The question raised at present is whether the 1962 ruling affects men promoted prior to that time under the classification plan and whether a retroactive wage adjustment is forthcoming. The commission took the matter under study.

In another action, the commission acknowledged the permanent status of Comptroller Paul E. Rodecap and his inclusion under Civil Service.

Present at the meeting were W. C. Wilson, chairman; Francis A. Kenney and Ralph R. Webster, members, and City Clerk Wallace G. Ullery, secretary.

Dr. Shockley plans visitations in order to become acquainted with leadership at the various schools and to observe the materials in use. He also wants to discuss with school officials what subjects will be rebuilt in elementary and high schools, he added.

His successor, David Bell Birney, fulfilled the promise. On May 13, 1863, in the presence of his entire command, Birney made Anna the recipient of a new bronze medal he had devised for enlisted men who showed extraordinary valor, the Kearny Cross.

Sgt. Etheridge continued in the Army of the Potomac until the war was over, and was a veteran of a dozen battles when the Rebels surrendered at Appomattox. She was enabled to obtain a clerkship in Washington to support her aged father, and never exploited herself as a heroine.

Pay Questions Discussed At Civil Service Meeting

Representatives of the Police and Firemen's Welfare Association met with the Civil Service Commission Tuesday night at City Hall to discuss several pay questions.

Attorney William Walsh represented the association which asked clarification of certain matters.

One of these involved the pay status of a member of the Fire Department who during his probationary period was called to active duty with a military reserve unit. It was requested that his time in service be credited to him so he could receive pay of the position as if his service had not been interrupted. The commission said such a request is under consideration and a decision is forthcoming.

Another question involved the pay of employes under the classification plan who were promoted in the first half of the calendar year and received an increase in pay as a result. The law had stated that if an employe was hired or promoted in the first half of the year, he would not receive a pay increment until July of the following year (a period of about 18 months).

Promotion of the employes in the first half created a problem. If they had not been promoted, on July 1 of the same year they would have received a regular increment under the pay plan for their old position and actually would be getting the same amount of money or more than that which the promoted position gave them.

This inequity was corrected by a subsequent ruling and ordinance in April, 1962.

The question raised at present is whether the 1962 ruling affects men promoted prior to that time under the classification plan and whether a retroactive wage adjustment is forthcoming. The commission took the matter under study.

In another action, the commission acknowledged the permanent status of Comptroller Paul E. Rodecap and his inclusion under Civil Service.

Present at the meeting were W. C. Wilson, chairman; Francis A. Kenney and Ralph R. Webster, members, and City Clerk Wallace G. Ullery, secretary.

FEATHERS FLY IN 'CHICKEN WAR' — The United States counterattack in "the chicken war" is taken quite seriously both here and in Europe. A head-on collision between the United States and the European Economics Community (usually referred to as the Common Market) over the poultry tariff seems inevitable. It now seems certain that unless we take drastic action the Europeans intend to continue their punishing tariff on frozen fowl, raised a year ago from 4.9 cents a pound to 13.4 cents a pound, a tariff which is, in the words of one French official, "enough to discourage even the boldest American hen." You will recall my taking this matter up with Christian A. Herter, President Kennedy's special representative for trade negotiations, and Mr. Herter's recent letter to me, which I quoted in the "Senate Cloakroom", in which he said the United States would insist on a reduction of the tariff on U. S. chickens even if this should mean a showdown. The showdown is here. Mr. Herter has announced that the United States is moving ahead to retaliate, that we plan to withdraw tariff concessions on Common Market export trade worth $46,000,000 annually, an amount equal to poultry exports we have lost through the tariff increase. Mr. Herter has announced that we will increase tariffs on selected European imports, and that hearings to determine the extent of the increases will begin on September 4. He issued a list of 19 items from the United States, after hearings, will select a final list. Our tariff increases could go into effect by mid-October if the issue of the Common Market tariff against American poultry is not resolved in the meantime. Chief among the European items listed for possible tariff increases by us are wine, trucks, buses, photographic papers, film, gelatin, brandy ,and electric shavers.

Behind this move is deep concern among our people, particularly our farmers, that the Common Market's exclusion of $46,000,000 worth of chicken a year is "only the beginning". If we should be defeated on chickens, we could expect defeat also on cereals and on all other farm exports to Western Europe, amounting to some $1,200,000,000 annually. Thus, while our poultry exports are but a small part of our total farm exports, the poultry tariff increase is significant. Officials here recognize that they are up against the desire of Common Market countries to protect their own agricultural products, but they view the Common Market adamant stand on chickens as a precedent which cannot be left unchallenged. For one thing, new burdens would be placed on the balance - of - payment problem if the Common Market should continue placing high duties on U. S. agricultural products and cause serious shrinkage of these exports. The decision to increase duties on selected European imports is an American warning to the Europeans that any further Common Market discrimination against farm products would force a wide reassessment of American trade policy. By retaliating against the chicken tariff with counter-tariffs, it is hoped that the threatened Common Market action against our farm products may be stopped.

Reaction of American business in general to our retaliating move is one of relief. The United States, our negotiators seem to say, is at last serving notice that all concessions cannot be made on this side of the ocean. We can only hope that the Administration has realistically sized up all facets of the problem and is prepared to hold firm.

TO SAVE OUR ECONOMY — Congress has no alternative other than to strengthen international confidence in the dollar. To accomplish this, foreign aid, foreign military assistance, and domestic spending must all be drastically reduced. We cannot save our economy if we continue to send our dollars abroad on a grand scale and permit a continuation of unbalanced budgets.

DOMESTIC 'PEACE CORPS' — MAYBE — By a hairline margin of 47 to 44, the Senate passed the President's bill to establish a domestic "peace corps" after writing in some strong restrictions. The members of the Corps, the official name of which would be "National Service Corps", would "help local communities with public - service programs", working in slums and depressed areas, with the elderly, the disabled, the mentally ill, with school drop - outs, with migratory farm families and with Indians. They would be paid $75 a month salary plus a "minimal" living allowance. One wonders about the caliber of workers you can hire at that figure. The Minority opposed the establishment of the Corps on the grounds of its being unnecessary and an inexcusable waste of the taxpayers' money. Some saw in it a similarity to Hitler's Youth Corps and Stalin's Farm Worker Brigade. We, of the Minority, succeeded in the Senate in limiting the Corps' life to two years and in preventing it from going into any State without a written request from its Governor. The Corps may have trouble getting off the ground; a tough fight on its approval is expected in the House of Representatives.

AN UNFAIR COMPETITOR— Today the Federal government runs some 19,000 commercial and industrial businesses which are in direct competition with private concerns. The U. S. Government manufactures surgical, medical and dental equipment, rope, chain, watches, clocks, fertilizers and paints. It runs coffee-roasting plants, rum distilleries, printing and power plants, and nurseries. It is in the plastic - laminating business, the cement, railroad and wood-preservation business. It operates movie theaters and runs ice -cream plants. Your taxes help keep up these businesses for Uncle Sam; being under Government control, they rarely make ends meet. Businessmen who run the same kind of businesses that the Government runs must meet the competition of the Government and still make a profit after paying taxes to the Government. The Government takes businessmen's taxes, and goes into business against them. These Government-owned businesses got started in a big way during the 1930s and 1940s. During President Eisenhower's term in office, Government - owned businesses were closed down by the hundreds every month — as rapidly as possible — for President Eisenhower felt that they offered unfair competition and represented atrocious waste of tax money, and furthermore, the Government has no business in competitive business.

MOROCCO BASES—The United States has negotiated an agreement with Morocco which gives to that country the air and sea bases built by the United States in Morocco and used by us as advance bases against the Soviet Union. These bases have cost the American taxpayers many millions of dollars to build and maintain. Already, one of these former U. S. bases is occupied by Russian personnel, flying Russian-built MIG planes. Meanwhile, the U. S. State Department is substituting an economic aid program for Morocco.

BERLIN WALL 2 YEARS OLD —The Berlin Wall, built by the Reds to prevent their people from deserting, was 2 years old last week. The West Germany government reports that a total of 16,456 East Germans have escaped through the wall to freedom since the barbed - wire and -concrete barrier was erected. At least 65 persons have been killed trying to escape. Before the Wall was erected, about 3,000,000 East Germans fled from the Communist rule to freedom in the West.

BOUNTY FOR SOVIET DEFECTORS IN CUBA?—One of my colleagues, U. S. Senator Wallace F. Bennett of Utah, has made an interesting proposal designed to weaken the Soviet threat in Cuba. He proposes that the United States government offer a bounty, asylum, and a job to any Russian in Cuba who would defect to this country.

NEWS MANAGEMENT—Someone has said that news management under the Kennedy Administration creates for us a situation somewhat like that of a blind man in a burlesque show: he knows what's going on, but he wonders what's being pulled off!

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1963: During the past week the House of Representatives has been occupied by debate on the Foreign Assistance Act of 1963. The bill authorized approximately $3.5 billion to finance the foreign assistance program for fiscal year 1964. This is a reduction of about $1 billion below the Executive request. The Foreign Affairs Committee's reduction limited the authorization for fiscal year 1964 to a little over $4 million. The House action reduced it by a further $600 million. The bill also amends the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and other acts in order to improve the effectiveness of the program by revising certain of its procedures, imposing new limitations on the furnishing of assistance and by making a number of modifications in policy directives.

The four days of debate provided a significant review of our foreign aid program. Its failures were subjected to the same examination given its successes. Final passage of the authorization reflected general agreement with the conclusion of General Lucius Clay in his report on the work of the foreign aid study committee: "Foreign Aid has created already a number of strong, independent nations who want to preserve their freedom and who are willing to fight for it, not because of friendship for us but because they have their own pride and strength restored to them."

I voted for the bill though it was a matter of regret that amendments I had supported on the Floor were not incorporated. Such changes were the Morse Amendment reducing the development loan funds from $1.5 billion to $1.2 billion over 3 years and the Battin substitute designed to curb trade with Communist Cuba. I could not support the motion to recommit because the items it sought to reduce had not been discussed either in Committee or in debate in the full House. It was my feeling that the cuts in the authorization proposed by the motion to recommit were more properly reserved for discussion and action when the foreign aid program returns to the House for consideration of the appropriation. This position was confirmed by the support of the ranking Republican and Democratic Members of the Committee.

D. C. PREDICTED POPULATION YEAR 2000: Researchers into Metropolitan Washington's economic and population future seem to agree in what they foresee:

A metropolis of about 5 million persons within a possible range of 3 million and 6.3 million, compared with the 1960 census total of 2 million.

A doubling to tripling of today's number of dwelling units with house and apartments, with these filling up open space out toward Gaithersburg, Laurel, Upper Marlboro, Lorton, and possibly beyond Fairfax.

An average yearly personal income of $13,000 and household income of $18,705 measured in 1960 values, compared with today's personal average of $6000 and household average of $10,507 and a quintupling of the aggregate income of $25 billion.

In order to improve formulation of development plans for land in the metropolitan area as well as in other sections of the country, I proposed the Land Use Study, which is incorporated into my 1963 Wheat and Feed Grains Bill. It is increasingly urgent to make this study which would do much to facilitate constructive land development.

MARYLAND'S INTERNATIONAL AIR TERMINAL: This week I testified before the Transportation and Aerontutics Subcommittee of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee to urge the maximum potential use of Friendship International Airport. In my comments I noted that the Federal Government through the Federal Aviation Agency and the Civil Aeronautics Board often finds itself in a dual role as airport operator as well as regulator of airlines and airport use. Private facilities such as Friendship Airport often find themselves at a decided disadvantage in this unequal competition. This dual role may also deprive the travelling public of convenient service. For these reasons I strongly urged the Transportation and Aeronautics Subcommittee to use its influence to persuade the CAB to comply with the reasonable requests of the Friendship authorities for assistance.

MARYLAND'S INTERNATIONAL AIR TERMINAL: This week I testified before the Transportation and Aerontutics Subcommittee of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee to urge the maximum potential use of Friendship International Airport. In my comments I noted that the Federal Government through the Federal Aviation Agency and the Civil Aeronautics Board often finds itself in a dual role as airport operator as well as regulator of airlines and airport use. Private facilities such as Friendship Airport often find themselves at a decided disadvantage in this unequal competition. This dual role may also deprive the travelling public of convenient service. For these reasons I strongly urged the Transportation and Aeronautics Subcommittee to use its influence to persuade the CAB to comply with the reasonable requests of the Friendship authorities for assistance.

Machine Is Being Readied For Heart Attack Victim

By KATHRYN JOHNSON

ATLANTA (AP) — The heart-lung machine, so vital to open heart surgery, will soon be ready for tests on heart attack victims.

A research team, under Dr. Gerhard A. Brecher, has been experimenting on dogs at the Emory University School of Medicine, to determine how effective the machine is in partially supporting circulation.

Doctors hope to find that a human being, successfully attached to the machine after a heart attack, will be greatly aided in recovery by giving his heart a rest.

If animal studies bear out the theoretical promise of machine assistance, the Emory team will shortly begin trials in ailing human patients, Brecher said.

The heart-lung machine, as now used, completely takes over the job of delivering oxygenated blood through the body and enables the surgeon to operate on a relatively "dry" and blood-free heart.

"There are no longer any major technical problems in its use during surgery," Brecher said. "Assisted circulation, however, is a different story."

Although the patient thus far is a dog, progress is being made toward utilizing the machine for partial assistance.

Here's how it works:

A patient lies asleep on a weighing scale, his leg and neck blood vessels connected to a heart-lung machine.

A medical man cranks a dial, upping the speed at which the machine is pumping blood through the patient.

A cold salt-water solution surges into the bloodstream. Within seconds an arching line streaks across the television-like screen of an oscilloscope. This line of light enables a record to be made of how much blood is being pumped through the heart with each beat — even as the heart-lung machine does some of the work needed to deliver blood to all parts of the body.

"If mechanical assistance is to become as routine as use of the machine in surgery, many technical problems must first be solved," Brecher said.

One of these problems — the attachment of the machine — is already under control. Instead of tying off the big vessels that lead directly into and away from the heart and routing the blood through the machine, as can be done readily for surgery, the "used" (venous) blood is drawn out through a neck vein and returned, after oxygenation, through a leg artery.

These vessels are easy to reach and make it unnecessary to cut into the chest — hardly practical for one who has suffered a heart attack.

The chief problem which concerns the Emory researchers is the dilemma of time.

To tide over a patient with an acute heart attack may require many hours on the machine, compared with perhaps one to three hours for surgery.

And if he survives the long machine ordeal, there's the problem of potential damage to the blood after it has been bounced around in the machine for a prolonged period.

Another unknown is what Brecher describes as the competition between the heart-lung machine and the heart, since both are doing part of the work of pumping blood to the body.

Will this collaboration between the heart-lung machine and the heart have adverse effects upon the heart function and blood chemistry?

Brecher and his associates, Dr. Pierre M. Galletti and Dr. Ernese Luethy, are continuing their research, to try and find out.

By ART LINKLETTER

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Now that summer is here and graduation is past, some youngsters may be wondering about their future.

So, let's talk about success and how to win it.

I firmly believe that two necessary ingredients are a college education, and obstacles.

Yes, obstacles!

Shocking as this may sound, obstacles can provide the go-power, the drive, the determination and the resourcefulness to do the job. I call it the obstacle course to success.

How often have you read of the frail youngster who became a star athlete, the poor boy who achieved great wealth, the disgraced scientist who was proven right in time?

But let's not talk in generalities.

Jayne Meadows and Carl Reiner, who are regular panelists on NBC-TV's "Art Linkletter Show," are good examples of what I mean. For that matter, so are the facts of my own life.

We all had one thing in common—poverty.

Jayne recalls her days as a struggling actress in New York when she was signed for "I've Got A Secret." She couldn't afford the usual fancy wardrobe, yet she wanted to make an attractive impression as a regular panelist.

She couldn't buy clothes, but she could afford earrings. The rest is history. Jayne's zany costume jewelry became the talk of the country. People started sending her earrings, until she had 10,000 pairs. In time, the finer jewelry companies in the country were begging her to wear their products. Resourcefulness paid off in every respect.

If things had gone "right" for Carl Reiner, he might have been a baseball player—or a machinist—today. But things went "wrong" for him. Consequently he became an Emmy-winning actor-writer-director-producer who has skyrocketed to fame and fortune.

Carl, who was born in the Bronx, New York, wanted to be a baseball player more than anything in the world. He graduated from high school when he was 16 years old—but there was little demand for a 16-year-old in professional baseball. To earn a living, Carl took a job as a machinists' helper in a millinery factory. He was a flop, so he was fired.

With the resourcefulness born of desperation and failure, Carl took up drama study for eight months. This opened up a more successful future than either of the other two paths might have done.

There's no such thing as one and only one possible career for a person. You never know but that there's something better and more satisfying in store for you. As for getting fired, sometimes it's the best thing that can happen.

I had an even more personal obstacle to overcome. I learned during the formative years of my life that I was an adopted child. It was a shock to discover that I had been discarded by my real parents in Canada and been adopted by Fulton John and Mary Linkletter. From that moment on, I wanted to "be somebody." It was my way of striking back at having been rejected. But it also gave me the impetus to do many things which I hope have been constructive and worthwhile in business and in the entertainment field.

Finally, the need for a college education these days should be self-evident. Self-made, self-educated men are the exception rather than the rule.

So, go after your college education and face your obstacles. One's as important as the other.

World's Biggest Motor Inn To Open Early Next Month In New York City

Midtown Manhattan, long the taxi-terrorized scourge of the unwary out-of-town motorist, becomes a veritable Mecca for the highway traveler on September 9, with the opening of the 724-room City Squire Motor Inn—largest of its type in the world—in the block bounded by Broadway, Seventh Avenue, 51st and 52d Streets.

With a five-level garage accommodating 500 cars, the City Squire will guarantee free parking for all guests, including free in-and-out service if the guest wishes to drive to the World's Fair grounds or other nearby tourist attractions during his visit.

Combining the best features of a modern city hotel, and its variety of services, with the informality of the suburban motel, the City Squire Motor Inn has a special garage entrance for motorists, wheeled racks that can handle an entire family's luggage, and the fastest bellmen in New York to speed the racks into high-speed elevators and deposit the luggage in one or more of the 22-story City Squire's oversized rooms.

For families staying at the City Squire, free cribs are provided. If the parents want to do a little sightseeing in Times Square, Rockefeller Center or along Fifth Avenue—all within short walking distance—trained babysitters are available and room service is prepared to heat up a batch of baby formula.

Reserved for guests only is a health club located in a special fifth-floor wing. Here the guest may enjoy the beneficial dry heat of the Finnish-style saunas, receive an expert massage and then cool off in the all-weather pool. In warm weather, the glass wall of the pool housing slides open for easy access to a large sundeck, where cocktails and light refreshments are available.

In an unusual reversal of hotel decorating trends, the City Squire's decor is handsome and traditional Early American, even to the now-familiar rocking chair that is provided with every suite. The same theme also applies to the Squire's Corner coffee shop and Red Coach Grill.

One of a series of restaurants extending from New England to Florida, the Red Coach Grill features such American specialties as charcoal-broiled steaks and Maine lobsters in a Colonial setting.

A series of meeting rooms and executive suites has been provided to meet the demand of small groups for such facilities and groups of from ten to 300 persons can be accommodated.

Frank W. Berkman, formerly president of North American Hotels, is general manager of the City Squire.

Josephine's Silver Swan Mechanism Is Perfected

By MILTON MARMOR

LONDON (AP)—A silver swan which Napoleon presented to Josephine will soon be back in a tiny pool of rippling water where it can pick up silver fish and preen its graceful feathers.

Its journey home to the Bowes Museum in the market town of Barnard's Castle in the north is approaching.

When the life-size swan, more than 200 years old, was brought here for repairs, it was found that much of the oil that once smoothed its clocklike mechanism had solidified. The oil was so hard that it had to be chipped out from between cogs in the wheels.

Its mechanism now perfected, the swan will be be remounted on the pedestal at Bowes Museum where it stood once before.

It has been several decades since the swan has been able to go through its lively clockwork motions.

The swan was made in London about 1750 by Richard Weekes, clockmaker. It sits on a boat-shape case and appears to float on rippling water — an illusion created by some 180 revolving rods of fluted glass.

Silver fish swim about in front of the swan. When wound up, the swan can move its neck and pick a fish from the water. After a few motions with its beak, the swan appears to swallow the fish.

The swan can turn its head and neck and preen its wing feathers. And during all these movements a carillon, hidden from view, plays a set of tunes.

About 30 pounds of silver were used in the making of Napoleon's swan. There are 116 pieces of laminated silver in the neck alone. Fifty-five graceful silver leaves form a surrounding for the pool on which the swan rests.

The ad was placed in the Courier in 1862. Results were not recorded.

Transistors From Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — The United States was the chief buyer of Hong Kong transistor radio receiving sets in 1962, importing more than 595,000 sets worth $3,130,000.

This British colony exported t total of 1,040,952 sets valued at $6,370,000,000 last year compared with 263,423 sets of $2,220,000 in 1961.

In 1878 the first all-steel bridge was erected to cross the Missouri River at Glasgow, S.D.

Hornets Are Seen As Both Friend And Enemy To Man

WASHINGTON — Few insects get as mad as a hornet.

The quick-tempered member of the wasp family, apart from terrorizing summer picnickers and divebombing unsuspecting gardeners, can sting its human victim to death.

A New York surgeon died recently from multiple stings when he unwittingly disturbed a hornet's nest near a window of his home.

A bald 59-year-old Florida man was stung on the top of his head in 1960 and died within an hour.

The American Medical Association reports that 86 persons — most of whom were extrasensitive to insect venom—died from the stings of wasps, hornets, and ants in a five-year period.

Mixed Blessing To Farmer

Hornets can literally eat a tree to death, the National Geographic Society says. The giant Vespa crabro, widespread throughout the eastern United States, gnaws off inch-wide strips of bark which can girdle and kill such plants as azaleas, lilac, birch, and willow.

Israel's oriental wasps and hornets can be friend as well as foe to the farmer. Californians bred thousands of wasps to gobble up the spotted alfalfa aphid, a serious pest. Parasitic wasps kill many destructive insects — gypsy moths, spruce budworms, tobacco hornworms, and copra bugs.

Hornets belong to the superfamily Vespoidea, a division of the order Hymenoptera (membrane wings) which includes 125,000 species of ants, bees, and wasps. Socially minded for the most part, hornets live in colonies and build a single nest to house the community. Some wasp species prefer a solitary life.

Hornets can be distinguished by the types of nests they build. The white-faced or bald hornet is a large, black-bodied wasp that builds a paper nest, often in a fruit tree or lilac bush. The young queen starts her colony in the spring and depends on her offspring to build the football-size home. The entire colony, except for a number of young mated queens which will hibernate in old logs or other shelters, dies at the first severe frost.

First Paper Maker

The genus Vespula, which includes the giant hornet and familiar yellow jacket, construct their nests in hollow logs, mouse burrows, or occasionally in buildings.

One yellow jacket's nest in Florida measured 10 feet high and 3½ feet in diameter. The structure's 70 levels of combs probably housed a quarter of a million insects.

Long before man invented paper, hornets and other wasps were shaving off bits of wood and chewing it into pulp to make paper nests. The idea of using wood pulp for paper was first suggested by Rene de Reaumur, a French naturalist in 1719, after watching the insects at work.

Hornets and wasps are surprisingly intelligent. A physiology professor at Stanford University trained a captive wasp to eat honey from one of his fingers while he stroked it. Three weeks after the professor released the wasp, it flew back and lighted on the same finger, asking for honey.

Quorum Was Present

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) — This eastern Oklahoma town, once the capital of the Cherokee Nation, has a name which means "two are enough."

According to legend, the Cherokees sent three commissioners out to find a site for a new capital after the "Trail of Tears" journey from Georgia to Indian Territory. Two of the three commissioners met on the Illinois River here. After a wait for the third commissioner, one of the two finally said, "Tah-le-quah" or "two are enough" — and the town site was settled.

Cash receipts from farm marketing were up almost 1.5 per cent in 1962 to a record level of nearly $35 billion.

By ART LINKLETTER

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Now that summer is here and graduation is past, some youngsters may be wondering about their future.

So, let's talk about success and how to win it.

I firmly believe that two necessary ingredients are a college education, and obstacles.

Yes, obstacles!

Shocking as this may sound, obstacles can provide the go-power, the drive, the determination and the resourcefulness to do the job. I call it the obstacle course to success.

How often have you read of the frail youngster who became a star athlete, the poor boy who achieved great wealth, the disgraced scientist who was proven right in time?

But let's not talk in generalities.

Jayne Meadows and Carl Reiner, who are regular panelists on NBC-TV's "Art Linkletter Show," are good examples of what I mean. For that matter, so are the facts of my own life.

We all had one thing in common—poverty.

Jayne recalls her days as a struggling actress in New York when she was signed for "I've Got A Secret." She couldn't afford the usual fancy wardrobe, yet she wanted to make an attractive impression as a regular panelist.

She couldn't buy clothes, but she could afford earrings. The rest is history. Jayne's zany costume jewelry became the talk of the country. People started sending her earrings, until she had 10,000 pairs. In time, the finer jewelry companies in the country were begging her to wear their products. Resourcefulness paid off in every respect.

If things had gone "right" for Carl Reiner, he might have been a baseball player—or a machinist—today. But things went "wrong" for him. Consequently he became an Emmy-winning actor-writer-director-producer who has skyrocketed to fame and fortune.

Carl, who was born in the Bronx, New York, wanted to be a baseball player more than anything in the world. He graduated from high school when he was 16 years old—but there was little demand for a 16-year-old in professional baseball. To earn a living, Carl took a job as a machinists' helper in a millinery factory. He was a flop, so he was fired.

With the resourcefulness born of desperation and failure, Carl took up drama study for eight months. This opened up a more successful future than either of the other two paths might have done.

There's no such thing as one and only one possible career for a person. You never know but that there's something better and more satisfying in store for you. As for getting fired, sometimes it's the best thing that can happen.

I had an even more personal obstacle to overcome. I learned during the formative years of my life that I was an adopted child. It was a shock to discover that I had been discarded by my real parents in Canada and been adopted by Fulton John and Mary Linkletter. From that moment on, I wanted to "be somebody." It was my way of striking back at having been rejected. But it also gave me the impetus to do many things which I hope have been constructive and worthwhile in business and in the entertainment field.

Finally, the need for a college education these days should be self-evident. Self-made, self-educated men are the exception rather than the rule.

So, go after your college education and face your obstacles. One's as important as the other.

Pendleton Co. 4-H Team Wins Poultry Judging

Will Represent W.Va. On Oct. 8

LEWISBURG — Only seven points separated the two top poultry judging teams participating in the annual State 4-H Poultry Judging Contest held at the West Virginia State Fair, Ted R. Hash, State Extension Poultry Specialist, West Virginia University, announced.

Top honors went to the Pendleton county team, which scored 936 out of a possible 1,200 points. Runner-up was Hardy county, with 929 points.

The Pendleton team was represented by Charles Calhoun, Steve Rexroade, and Dennis Mowery. The team was coached by John W. Hammer, Sr., Pendleton County Extension Agricultural Agent.

The winning team will represent the Mountain State 4-H'ers in the 17th annual Northeastern 4-H Poultry Judging Contest to be held at Harrisburg, Pa., during the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council (NEPPCO) Exposition on Oct. 8.

The highest-scoring individual in the state competition was Charles Calhoun, with 360 out of a possible 400 points. Gary Barr, Wendell Cochran, and Ervin Wilkins, all of Hardy county, and Dennis Mowery, Pendleton, tied for second place with 309 points each. Third place went to Steve Rexroade of Pendleton with 266 points.

Graduates Who Cannot Write

"We hire 20 outstanding graduates each year at Ford," said William Bourke of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada, addressing a secondary school educators' convention at McMaster University, "and find they cannot write a simple report in basic English."

Comments of this type have become disturbingly familiar in the U.S. in recent years. University professors have frequently complained of first-year students being unable to write a sentence or express a thought coherently. The question is frequently asked whether the costly education system is bringing results proportionate to the sacrifices made to provide it.

If "educated" illiterates are being produced, then obviously something is wrong. Can it be that the curriculum has been cluttered with too many "projects" and "visual aids" at the expense of hard core teaching of the English language? Are children allowed to give full expression to imagination and to develop original thought? There are good reasons to doubt both.

Essay-writing has declined in importance and the time that was once spent upon it is now devoted to new methods of testing. Reading of "great" books seems almost to have gone out of fashion. Compared with their counterparts a generation ago, many students seem to have but a smattering of knowledge of the great literature of the past.

Writing "paragraphs" and taking notes is not conducive to development of skill in the use of English. In such circumstances it is not surprising that students often lack fluency in their mother tongue. Like students, teachers have a curriculum to follow.

It is true that there is more to learn today, that the field of knowledge changes more rapidly than would have been dreamed 20 years ago. But the key to learning is still the same as it always has been — good understanding of language.

These Days

By John Chamberlain

To Ease The Gold Drain

Creative ideas come few and far between. Maybe Bernard L. Lamb, a non-professional student of international monetary affairs from Ho-Ho-Kus, New Jersey, has one.

Like other Americans, Mr. Lamb is concerned about the behavior of Kennedy's advisers—the "Rover Boys from Cambridge," as he calls them — when it comes to prescribing a policy for halting the drain of U.S. gold into foreign lands. In the first quarter of 1963 the deficit in our balance of payments was running at the annual rate of $3.2 billion as compared with the deficit of $2.2 billion for the whole of 1962. The second quarter of the year threatened, when the figures were in, to push the deficit to a rate of $3.5 billion. The fault was not due to our exporters, who took in a surplus of $4.5 billion over the cost of imports for 1962, and who are not doing badly this year. What produces the adverse balance of payments is a combination of spending for military defense abroad and for foreign aid, plus investment in wholly or partially U.S.-owned foreign plants.

To Mr. Lamb, it seems crazy that an adverse balance of international payments should bother a rich nation like the United States. After all, this country has lots of long-term debts that are owed to it. To begin, there is upwards of $19 billion carried on the U.S. Treasury's books as World War I indebtedness. Finland has paid us on the World War I debt, but other countries seem to have forgotten all about the financing of the first Armageddon. The U.S. will probably never see the money that our World War I Allies "hired."

There are, however, long-term debts of some $13 billion that are owed to us because of foreign-assistance programs since World War II. A Morgan-Guaranty survey breaks the outstanding "live" debt down into $3.7 billion lent by the Export-Import Bank, $3.3 billion remaining from a special loan to the United Kingdom in 1946; $3 billion in other aid loans; $1.8 billion for surplus-property and lend-lease settlements; $1.5 billion for sales of farm products, plus interest and commissions that are still due.

What Mr. Lamb proposes is that we offer France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, and the United Kingdom a ten percent discount for accelerated payment of these loans in their own currencies—francs, pounds, lire, marks, yen, and so on. Then, quoting Mr. Lamb, "we should organize an American Bankers consortium to draw on these currencies for travelers' checks and travelers' letters of credit." American citizens would pay at home in dollars for their travelers' checks, but when the checks were cashed in Europe they would be balanced off against the accelerated payment offerings in francs, pounds, etc., of the nations that owe us long-term money.

Foreign travel might be restricted in certain countries to the use of the foreign currencies. The tourist might be allowed, in Mr. Lamb's plan, a discount on the understanding that the "blocked" funds would be used for travel expense and for gifts purchased in foreign countries.

Maybe Mr. Lamb's idea is not practicable. After all, nobody can be compelled legally to pay off on a long-term debt unless it is so stipulated in the bond. And there might be internal difficulties in kicking up the pounds and lire. But I remember the time I was traveling on a magazine expense account in Europe in 1946. My home office told me to use all the francs I needed—after all, it was only "blocked" money. So I spent freely, building up good will—and sources—for my boss. Maybe Mr. Lamb has an idea that would impel lots of Americans to travel. And maybe he has an idea that would be welcomed by Germany, France, etc., as a way of reducing their long-term debt at favorable discount rates without putting up any gold.

Mr. Lamb is an amateur—and this columnist is an amateur in passing the suggestion along. But something has to be done about that drain of gold. Assisted tourism, paid for in foreign currencies carved out of debts that are due us in the future, might possibly be the complement to economist Eliot Janeway's suggestion for tax rebates to exporters. If all this is impracticable, so be it. But all avenues to international solvency seem to this columnist to be worth exploring.

The Guy In The Middle

Bulgarian Prime Minister's Retreat Resembles Tito's, Khrushchev's

By Drew Pearson

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Continuing his survey of the Cold War and its thaw, Drew Pearson today interviews the Prime Minister of Bulgaria.)

VARNA, Bulgaria—Communist leaders do not object to living in capitalistic surroundings, and Todor Zhivkov, secretary of the Communist Party of Bulgaria and Premier of that country, has a summer place on the Black Sea which compares with Tito's private island in the Adriatic and Khrushchev's summer resting spot on the Black Sea.

All three, however, share these private estates with other Communist leaders. Anyone high up in the party is welcome.

Tito's island is the resort of over a hundred wives, children, and top echelon of Yugoslavia, has an attractive swimming beach wired for sharks, and a series of beautiful macadam roads winding through lanes of olive trees and fields full of deer and pheasants.

Khrushchev's Black Sea resort has two guest houses for friends and is surrounded by pine trees. If anything, it is more rugged than Tito's island. Zhivkov of Bulgaria has taken over a palace, once occupied by the kings of Bulgaria which stretches in beautiful lawns and well-kept terraces down to the Black Sea. Its sweep to the sea is reminiscent of the home with gold bathroom fixtures once occupied by Joseph P. Kennedy, father of the President, which swept down to the Potomac just outside Washington.

At the bottom of the rolling lawn are two bathing beaches, used by both the servants and party leaders who vacation at the one-time royal palace.

Zhivkov does not live in the palace himself, but in an apartment house to one side, apparently the one-time servants' quarters for the Bulgarian royal family. Other vacationing officials live there too.

Another Khrushchev

The Bulgarian Prime Minister is a man of 52, with twinkling eyes and a contagious smile that reminds you somewhat of Nikita Khrushchev. He speaks with the same frankness as Khrushchev and has been his firm supporter in the policy of co-existence.

This policy was not fixed without considerable debate inside the ranks of the Bulgarian Communist Party, and for some time—up until 1957—Bulgaria clung to the No. 1 disciple of Stalin, Vulko Chervenkov made a personal visit to Bulgaria in May 1962, to give his personal endorsement to Zhivkov, the latter emerged as the undisputed leader of Bulgaria.

He has followed a thorough de-Stalinization program, elevated new and younger party leaders, and lined up 100 per cent with Khrushchev against Red China. Even recently, the Communist Party was shown not to be the monolithic organization the West considers it to be. When Russia and Yugoslavia patched up their relations in December 1962, Premier Zhivkov followed with a trip to see Tito in January. This was supposed to mark a friendly rapprochement between these two Communist neighbors, long bitter enemies.

But no Bulgarian statement of friendship followed. The Bulgarian Communists were bitterly divided. Finally the Yugoslav ambassador called at the foreign office to ask why the delay. Only then was the statement of friendship issued.

Revolutionary By Profession

When I asked Premier Zhivkov what he had done before he got into politics, he replied: "For twelve years I was a printer. Then in 1938 I took up revolution as a profession. I was most unreliable and dangerous.

"I was imprisoned by the then Prime Minister, Georgiev, and severely tortured. Later, however, we became good friends and he came around to our way of thinking. In 1945 he even signed the order expropriating private property, including his own private property.

This and other questions, especially the problem of peace or war with Red China, the United States, and Russia were discussed quite frankly by the head of this energetic Communist country, as will be set forth in a subsequent column.

Forthcoming Report On Smoking And Disease

By Stuart H. Loory

WASHINGTON

In a suite of borrowed offices at the National Library of Medicine, built in a park-like setting in suburban Bethesda, Md., the duplicating machines whirl endlessly, turning out copies of all the reports concerning the association between cigarette smoking and disease — particularly lung cancer and heart disease.

All the reproduced material represents the grist of 10 of the nation's most eminent medical scientists will mill into a final, conclusive report on the extent of the relationship between smoking, disease, and death. That such a relationship exists, few medical men will deny today. Whether or not the relationship — in light of all the other factors causing disease in the modern world — justifies action is another matter.

President Kennedy ordered the United States Public Health Service to conduct this authoritative review of the literature in response to growing public confusion. The report will be ready by the end of the year.

But there are widespread indications that many are not willing to wait for the government report before taking official action to brand smoking a health menace. Just an incomplete sampling of the actions taken this summer in the United States alone reveals:

—Two New England hospitals have ordered the removal of cigarette vending machines and a third has placed a sign near its machine noting the danger of smoking.

—The State of Kansas has approved the sale of a life insurance policy which pays higher benefits on death of non-smokers than smokers. The policy is written by the Great American Reserve Insurance Co. of Dallas, Tex., whose chairman, Travis T. Wallace, is also chairman of the American Cancer Society, the leader in the anti-smoking campaign.

—The California State Board of Health has adopted a four-point program to cut down on cigarette smoking, which it brands "a severe hazard to health." The report says, "The evidence now indicates that cigarette smoking has such a profoundly harmful effect on health that it should be abandoned."

—The tobacco industry, which has consistently fought the validity of the evidence, suddenly showed signs of softening its attitude. Early in the summer the Tobacco Institute adopted voluntary restrictions on advertising that, in effect, cut out the industry's pitch at the youth of the nation. Tobacco companies will no longer advertise in college publications. They will no longer advertise on TV programs aimed primarily at teenagers, and they will drop all athletic heroes from commercials.

The tobacco industry earns over $7 billion a year selling smokes to more than 63 million Americans, and if there ever was an industry that advertising built, this is it. The industry will spend an estimated $200 million on advertising in newspapers, magazines, and on television during 1963, or an average of about six cents for every carton of cigarettes produced.

The Public Health Service Commitee, over which Surgeon General Luther L. Terry himself presides, will ignore the economic factors involved in reaching conclusions as it writes its report. The committee has 10 members, and each member has assumed responsibility for a section of the document.

The sections will cover such topics as the chemistry of tobacco smoke, the pathology of smoking, the pharmacology of habit-forming drugs, cancer biology, genetics, the statistics of the cigarette smoke-lung cancer relationship, the physiology of cardiopulmonary disease, and similar topics.

Each one of the 10 men has organized a subcommittee to help him evaluate the medical literature pertaining to his subject. (In the past two decades, there have been thousands of scientific studies done relating to the smoking question.)

The committee so far has held four meetings in Bethesda. At their last session, in May, the members discovered the volume of material would be far greater than they expected. But they are working along in an atmosphere undisturbed by the growing interest in the problem.

The committeemen have decided not to talk to the public about the problem while they are writing their report. And the public has shown curiously little interest in the report. A staff spokesman at Bethesda reported the other day that the volume of mail inquiring about the study was very light.

A while back there was a spate of form letters written by members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and later there were a few inquiries as a result of a magazine article.

But if the interest is light now, all that is bound to change when the report comes out by the end of the year. It will draw some conclusions about the evidence. Then, based on those conclusions, the Public Health Service will formulate a plan of action for dealing with the smoking question. That plan could affect millions of people — those who smoke cigarettes and those who produce them. The other side of the health problem involves an economic question of major importance. If smoking is sharply curtailed, how will the economic slack resulting from a major dislocation, ranging from farmers who grow tobacco to producers making cigarettes to governments that collect taxes on them, be taken up?

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

'MONA LISA' FREE — If anyone in government today can afford to have a "Mona Lisa" hanging on his office wall, it's Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy. Yet, Kennedy's "Mona Lisa" didn't cost him a cent.

Admittedly, it isn't the original, which is back in the Louvre after a huge success in its display in Washington and New York. In fact, one has to be told the picture is a copy of the "Mona Lisa" before it is recognized as such.

But that doesn't bother Bobby. The picture fits well into the decor of his office and is of a piece with the other "art" works decorating his hall-like office in the Department of Justice.

The artist who made the copy was inspired by his visit to a Washington Art Gallery when the original "Mona Lisa" was on display there. As a result, David Kennedy, who enters the third grade this fall, decided he'd do a copy of the famed work of art for his father.

The proud father promptly hung his son's inspired work on his office wall, along with similar efforts by numerous of his other children. And the attorney general values it more highly than the original.

After all, how many fathers can point to a work of art done by his own child that is literally priceless?

Summer Nights

By Lee Pogostin

(John Crosby's guest columnist today is Lee Pogostin, screen writer).

We are speaking now of summer nights in Torremolinos, Spain, where I am so successfully disguised to myself as a professional sidewalk cafe sitter; I sip pernod at Pedro's on the Carretera de Cadiz, study Europe's beautiful women and some of Asia's, listen to conversations in French, Italian, Swedish, Spanish, German, Danish, Norwegian, Japanese, and English. Though I do not know any of these languages, I know what everybody is saying and why, because I am a professional sidewalk cafe sitter.

I know who was with who last night and who will be with who tonight and why a dark-haired English girl was crying on the beach this morning. I know who will win and who will lose. I know everything by eyes, by elbows, by tight-fitting dresses and long tan legs, and each laugh holds a different meaning (millions of meanings!) and I know what every last laugh means, and I am never wrong, because I am a professional sidewalk cafe sitter.

It is not easy to be one. You must possess the ruthless, profound insight of a genius and the behind of a totally talentless human being. A young woman, lazy-legged and liking herself, strolls out of the Calle San Miquel and onto our High Road to Cadiz—allowing herself to be stared at by the Spanish laborers who've gathered there to wonder. I have never seen her, but immediately I know she's 18, broke, American, just arrived from Tangier, and nicely high on the excellent kif she's brought with her. Sitting at the table to my left is a young man, 20, American, broke, and he's probably seen her in Tangier, but they never said hello, somehow. He's a little high too, for the same reason she is.

She walks past his table, but he looks down at the damp sand still on his feet and in his sandals, and mumbles to himself brilliantly. She stops. "You shouldn't talk to yourself so loud—very bad manners." He looks up and studies her. "Manners? I didn't see you. I can't even see you now, and I maintain that a man may talk to himself to his heart's content, if alone."

"Are you alone?" she asks, imitating kindness. "Is your heart content?" He ponders for a moment. "No and Not-Quite, respectively." She exhales in a bored manner. "Well," she says, "if you're still in the Not-Quite stage, I suggest you go away and be alone. Do you wanna be alone?" "No," he says. "Whataya wanna be?" "A fireman—once." "Really! Why, that's a coincidence! I wanted to be a fire! Why didn't you?" She sits down next to him. "Didn't I what?" he asks. "Become a fireman!" "I dunno—" he makes a face that physicists make when considering an especially colossal equation—"I guess it was as I grew older I bought the standard Spanish fear of getting involved with foreign elements or being burned."

Now he turns to her and smiles youngly, and raises an eyebrow the way you do when you listen to Mozart. "But believe me, lady, if I'duh known you was gonna be a fire—" "I changed my mind," she says. "Why?" "Was afraid of being put out. Besides, I've an aversion for smoke." "Smoke!" he says, "I like it! I like the smell of it better than the taste! You sorta like to flirt with me for a while? I'm a real easy guy to be flirted with. My mother was a very progressive woman."

The girl crosses her legs and stares at the mountains across the street and wonders when and if a moon will happen tonight and stares at the damp on the boy's feet and in his sandals, and makes a decision. "My mother, who comes from Jersey City, New Jersey, would hate your mother, but I'll flirt with you for a while." There is a pause. They both get more comfortable in their chairs and begin to watch the other people. They'll hardly ever look at each other again.

"Whatiya do?" she asks. "I'm a writer." (Deeply) "What do you write? Poems?" He shakes his head. "No. Prose in rhyme." "What's the difference between poetry and prose in rhyme?" she asks. "Prose in rhyme is like Christmas cards. Poetry is like Christmas," he says. "Oh," she nods, and scratches a mosquito bite on her arm. "I'm also writing a short story called 'Secks Plowrong, the Son of Funny Parents.' I'm gonna send it to Esquire—" he lifts his foot to the chair and begins to take the sand out of his toes—"when I finish it."

New Test For Finding Borderline Diabetes

By Theodore R. Van Dellen

A new oral test for diabetes utilizes a tolbutamide tablet. It is reported to be easy to perform, safe, and most important — accurate. This gives us three different procedures to make the diagnosis of diabetes and it is difficult to say which will be preferred.

The diabetic suspect is asked to fast overnight and report to the physician in the morning. A blood specimen is obtained and tablets containing sodium tolbutamide (Oriase) and sodium bicarbonate are swallowed. Blood tests for sugar are made every 10 minutes for 60 minutes. Tolbutamide is an antidiabetic pill and lowers the blood sugar levels. Diabetics have higher readings over a longer period of time than do nondiabetics.

The glucose tolerance test has been the old standby for many years. The man or woman is given a sugar solution to drink and samples of blood and urine are studied before and for several hours thereafter. In reality this is a determination of how the body handles this type of carbohydrate.

The nondiabetic responds in the normal way — the blood sugar level rises rapidly as the solution is absorbed from the stomach. It may go fairly high but begins to fall within an hour as the body utilizes the sugar. The same thing happens in the diabetic except that the sugar level remains high for a longer period because the body lacks insulin and cannot utilize the sugar.

These tests are used mainly to diagnose borderline cases of diabetes. They are seldom needed when the blood sugar is elevated and large amounts are noted in the urine. In addition, many diabetics are overweight when the disease is noted originally. Some are aware that something is amiss because excess thirst makes them drink more and more water, and they pass large volumes of urine.

The tests are suggested most often when a routine urinalysis is positive for sugar. This is the start of any diabetes detection drive and a blood test for sugar is suggested as the next step. If the diagnosis still is questioned, the oral or intravenous tolbutamide test is done or the older glucose tolerance test.

Dresses made of Philippine hemp are soon to get a market tryout in the United States. If the stuff catches on, can we expect a new fashion idea — the Homespun Look?

A record 109.8 degrees below zero was registered recently in Antarctica. And that's a cold fact.

A British coal miner, who thoughtlessly parked his false teeth on a conveyor belt, is still looking for them. Afraid that's going to remain a dark secret!

A bluefin tuna, tagged in 1958 off the coast of Mexico has just turned up in Japanese waters 6,000 miles away. That big one not only got away but, apparently, it kept right on going.

A chicken with four legs has been hatched on a midwestern poultry farm. That's two steps in the right direction.

Graduates Who Cannot Write

"We hire 20 outstanding graduates each year at Ford," said William Bourke of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada, addressing a secondary school educators' convention at McMaster University, "and find they cannot write a simple report in basic English."

Comments of this type have become disturbingly familiar in the U.S. in recent years. University professors have frequently complained of first-year students being unable to write a sentence or express a thought coherently. The question is frequently asked whether the costly education system is bringing results proportionate to the sacrifices made to provide it.

If "educated" illiterates are being produced, then obviously something is wrong. Can it be that the curriculum has been cluttered with too many "projects" and "visual aids" at the expense of hard core teaching of the English language? Are children allowed to give full expression to imagination and to develop original thought? There are good reasons to doubt both.

Essay-writing has declined in importance and the time that was once spent upon it is now devoted to new methods of testing. Reading of "great" books seems almost to have gone out of fashion. Compared with their counterparts a generation ago, many students seem to have but a smattering of knowledge of the great literature of the past.

Writing "paragraphs" and taking notes is not conducive to development of skill in the use of English. In such circumstances it is not surprising that students often lack fluency in their mother tongue. Like students, teachers have a curriculum to follow.

It is true that there is more to learn today, that the field of knowledge changes more rapidly than would have been dreamed 20 years ago. But the key to learning is still the same as it always has been — good understanding of language.

These Days

To Ease The Gold Drain

Creative ideas come few and far between. Maybe Bernard L. Lamb, a non-professional student of international monetary affairs from Ho-Ho-Kus, New Jersey, has one.

Like other Americans, Mr. Lamb is concerned about the behavior of Kennedy's advisers—the "Rover Boys from Cambridge," as he calls them — when it comes to prescribing a policy for halting the drain of U.S. gold into foreign lands. In the first quarter of 1963 the deficit in our balance of payments was running at the annual rate of $3.2 billion as compared with the deficit of $2.2 billion for the whole of 1962. The second quarter of the year threatened, when the figures were in, to push the deficit to a rate of $3.5 billion. The fault was not due to our exporters, who took in a surplus of $4.5 billion over the cost of imports for 1962, and who are not doing badly this year. What produces the adverse balance of payments is a combination of spending for military defense abroad and for foreign aid, plus investment in wholly or partially U.S.-owned foreign plants.

To Mr. Lamb, it seems crazy that an adverse balance of international payments should bother a rich nation like the United States. After all, this country has lots of long-term debts that are owed to it. To begin, there is upwards of $19 billion carried on the U.S. Treasury's books as World War I indebtedness. Finland has paid us on the World War I debt, but other countries seem to have forgotten all about the financing of the first Armageddon. The U.S. will probably never see the money that our World War I Allies "hired."

There are, however, long-term debts of some $13 billion that are owed to us because of foreign-assistance programs since World War II. A Morgan-Guaranty survey breaks the outstanding "live" debt down into $3.7 billion lent by the Export-Import Bank, $3.3 billion remaining from a special loan to the United Kingdom in 1946; $3 billion in other aid loans; $1.8 billion for surplus-property and lend-lease settlements; $1.5 billion for sales of farm products, plus interest and commissions that are still due.

What Mr. Lamb proposes is that we offer France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, and the United Kingdom a ten percent discount for accelerated payment of these loans in their own currencies—francs, pounds, lire, marks, yen, and so on. Then, quoting Mr. Lamb, "we should organize an American Bankers consortium to draw on these currencies for travelers' checks and travelers' letters of credit." American citizens would pay at home in dollars for their travelers' checks, but when the checks were cashed in Europe they would be balanced off against the accelerated payment offerings in francs, pounds, etc., of the nations that owe us long-term money.

Foreign travel might be restricted in certain countries to the use of the foreign currencies. The tourist might be allowed, in Mr. Lamb's plan, a discount on the understanding that the "blocked" funds would be used for travel expense and for gifts purchased in foreign countries.

Maybe Mr. Lamb's idea is not practicable. After all, nobody can be compelled legally to pay off on a long-term debt unless it is so stipulated in the bond. And there might be internal difficulties in kicking up the pounds and lire. But I remember the time I was traveling on a magazine expense account in Europe in 1946. My home office told me to use all the francs I needed—after all, it was only "blocked" money. So I spent freely, building up good will—and sources—for my boss. Maybe Mr. Lamb has an idea that would impel lots of Americans to travel. And maybe he has an idea that would be welcomed by Germany, France, etc., as a way of reducing their long-term debt at favorable discount rates without putting up any gold.

Mr. Lamb is an amateur—and this columnist is an amateur in passing the suggestion along. But something has to be done about that drain of gold. Assisted tourism, paid for in foreign currencies carved out of debts that are due us in the future, might possibly be the complement to economist Eliot Janeway's suggestion for tax rebates to exporters. If all this is impracticable, so be it. But all avenues to international solvency seem to this columnist to be worth exploring.

Bulgarian Prime Minister's Retreat Resembles Tito's, Khrushchev's

By Drew Pearson

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Continuing his survey of the Cold War and its thaw, Drew Pearson today interviews the Prime Minister of Bulgaria.)

VARNA, Bulgaria—Communist leaders do not object to living in capitalistic surroundings, and Todor Zhivkov, secretary of the Communist Party of Bulgaria and Premier of that country, has a summer place on the Black Sea which compares with Tito's private island in the Adriatic and Khrushchev's summer resting spot on the Black Sea.

All three, however, share these private estates with other Communist leaders. Anyone high up in the party is welcome.

Tito's island is the resort of over a hundred wives, children, and top echelon of Yugoslavia, has an attractive swimming beach wired for sharks, and a series of beautiful macadam roads winding through lanes of olive trees and fields full of deer and pheasants.

Khrushchev's Black Sea resort has two guest houses for friends and is surrounded by pine trees. If anything, it is more rugged than Tito's island. Zhivkov of Bulgaria has taken over a palace, once occupied by the kings of Bulgaria which stretches in beautiful lawns and well-kept terraces down to the Black Sea. Its sweep to the sea is reminiscent of the home with gold bathroom fixtures once occupied by Joseph P. Kennedy, father of the President, which swept down to the Potomac just outside Washington.

At the bottom of the rolling lawn are two bathing beaches, used by both the servants and party leaders who vacation at the one-time royal palace.

Zhivkov does not live in the palace himself, but in an apartment house to one side, apparently the one-time servants' quarters for the Bulgarian royal family. Other vacationing officials live there too.

Another Khrushchev

The Bulgarian Prime Minister is a man of 52, with twinkling eyes and a contagious smile that reminds you somewhat of Nikita Khrushchev. He speaks with the same frankness as Khrushchev and has been his firm supporter in the policy of co-existence.

This policy was not fixed without considerable debate inside the ranks of the Bulgarian Communist Party, and for some time—up until 1957—Bulgaria clung to the No. 1 disciple of Stalin, Vulko Chervenkov made a personal visit to Bulgaria in May 1962, to give his personal endorsement to Zhivkov, the latter emerged as the undisputed leader of Bulgaria.

He has followed a thorough de-Stalinization program, elevated new and younger party leaders, and lined up 100 per cent with Khrushchev against Red China. Even recently, the Communist Party was shown not to be the monolithic organization the West considers it to be. When Russia and Yugoslavia patched up their relations in December 1962, Premier Zhivkov followed with a trip to see Tito in January. This was supposed to mark a friendly rapprochement between these two Communist neighbors, long bitter enemies.

But no Bulgarian statement of friendship followed. The Bulgarian Communists were bitterly divided. Finally the Yugoslav ambassador called at the foreign office to ask why the delay. Only then was the statement of friendship issued.

Revolutionary By Profession

When I asked Premier Zhivkov what he had done before he got into politics, he replied: "For twelve years I was a printer. Then in 1938 I took up revolution as a profession. I was most unreliable and dangerous.

"I was imprisoned by the then Prime Minister, Georgiev, and severely tortured. Later, however, we became good friends and he came around to our way of thinking. In 1945 he even signed the order expropriating private property, including his own private property.

This and other questions, especially the problem of peace or war with Red China, the United States, and Russia were discussed quite frankly by the head of this energetic Communist country, as will be set forth in a subsequent column.

Forthcoming Report On Smoking And Disease

By Stuart H. Loory

WASHINGTON

In a suite of borrowed offices at the National Library of Medicine, built in a park-like setting in suburban Bethesda, Md., the duplicating machines whirl endlessly, turning out copies of all the reports concerning the association between cigarette smoking and disease — particularly lung cancer and heart disease.

All the reproduced material represents the grist of 10 of the nation's most eminent medical scientists will mill into a final, conclusive report on the extent of the relationship between smoking, disease, and death. That such a relationship exists, few medical men will deny today. Whether or not the relationship — in light of all the other factors causing disease in the modern world — justifies action is another matter.

President Kennedy ordered the United States Public Health Service to conduct this authoritative review of the literature in response to growing public confusion. The report will be ready by the end of the year.

But there are widespread indications that many are not willing to wait for the government report before taking official action to brand smoking a health menace. Just an incomplete sampling of the actions taken this summer in the United States alone reveals:

—Two New England hospitals have ordered the removal of cigarette vending machines and a third has placed a sign near its machine noting the danger of smoking.

—The State of Kansas has approved the sale of a life insurance policy which pays higher benefits on death of non-smokers than smokers. The policy is written by the Great American Reserve Insurance Co. of Dallas, Tex., whose chairman, Travis T. Wallace, is also chairman of the American Cancer Society, the leader in the anti-smoking campaign.

—The California State Board of Health has adopted a four-point program to cut down on cigarette smoking, which it brands "a severe hazard to health." The report says, "The evidence now indicates that cigarette smoking has such a profoundly harmful effect on health that it should be abandoned."

—The tobacco industry, which has consistently fought the validity of the evidence, suddenly showed signs of softening its attitude. Early in the summer the Tobacco Institute adopted voluntary restrictions on advertising that, in effect, cut out the industry's pitch at the youth of the nation. Tobacco companies will no longer advertise in college publications. They will no longer advertise on TV programs aimed primarily at teenagers, and they will drop all athletic heroes from commercials.

The tobacco industry earns over $7 billion a year selling smokes to more than 63 million Americans, and if there ever was an industry that advertising built, this is it. The industry will spend an estimated $200 million on advertising in newspapers, magazines, and on television during 1963, or an average of about six cents for every carton of cigarettes produced.

The Public Health Service Commitee, over which Surgeon General Luther L. Terry himself presides, will ignore the economic factors involved in reaching conclusions as it writes its report. The committee has 10 members, and each member has assumed responsibility for a section of the document.

The sections will cover such topics as the chemistry of tobacco smoke, the pathology of smoking, the pharmacology of habit-forming drugs, cancer biology, genetics, the statistics of the cigarette smoke-lung cancer relationship, the physiology of cardiopulmonary disease, and similar topics.

Each one of the 10 men has organized a subcommittee to help him evaluate the medical literature pertaining to his subject. (In the past two decades, there have been thousands of scientific studies done relating to the smoking question.)

The committee so far has held four meetings in Bethesda. At their last session, in May, the members discovered the volume of material would be far greater than they expected. But they are working along in an atmosphere undisturbed by the growing interest in the problem.

The committeemen have decided not to talk to the public about the problem while they are writing their report. And the public has shown curiously little interest in the report. A staff spokesman at Bethesda reported the other day that the volume of mail inquiring about the study was very light.

A while back there was a spate of form letters written by members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and later there were a few inquiries as a result of a magazine article.

But if the interest is light now, all that is bound to change when the report comes out by the end of the year. It will draw some conclusions about the evidence. Then, based on those conclusions, the Public Health Service will formulate a plan of action for dealing with the smoking question. That plan could affect millions of people — those who smoke cigarettes and those who produce them. The other side of the health problem involves an economic question of major importance. If smoking is sharply curtailed, how will the economic slack resulting from a major dislocation, ranging from farmers who grow tobacco to producers making cigarettes to governments that collect taxes on them, be taken up?

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

'MONA LISA' FREE — If anyone in government today can afford to have a "Mona Lisa" hanging on his office wall, it's Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy. Yet, Kennedy's "Mona Lisa" didn't cost him a cent.

Admittedly, it isn't the original, which is back in the Louvre after a huge success in its display in Washington and New York. In fact, one has to be told the picture is a copy of the "Mona Lisa" before it is recognized as such.

But that doesn't bother Bobby. The picture fits well into the decor of his office and is of a piece with the other "art" works decorating his hall-like office in the Department of Justice.

The artist who made the copy was inspired by his visit to a Washington Art Gallery when the original "Mona Lisa" was on display there. As a result, David Kennedy, who enters the third grade this fall, decided he'd do a copy of the famed work of art for his father.

The proud father promptly hung his son's inspired work on his office wall, along with similar efforts by numerous of his other children. And the attorney general values it more highly than the original.

After all, how many fathers can point to a work of art done by his own child that is literally priceless?

Summer Nights

By Lee Pogostin

(John Crosby's guest columnist today is Lee Pogostin, screen writer).

We are speaking now of summer nights in Torremolinos, Spain, where I am so successfully disguised to myself as a professional sidewalk cafe sitter; I sip pernod at Pedro's on the Carretera de Cadiz, study Europe's beautiful women and some of Asia's, listen to conversations in French, Italian, Swedish, Spanish, German, Danish, Norwegian, Japanese, and English. Though I do not know any of these languages, I know what everybody is saying and why, because I am a professional sidewalk cafe sitter.

I know who was with who last night and who will be with who tonight and why a dark-haired English girl was crying on the beach this morning. I know who will win and who will lose. I know everything by eyes, by elbows, by tight-fitting dresses and long tan legs, and each laugh holds a different meaning (millions of meanings!) and I know what every last laugh means, and I am never wrong, because I am a professional sidewalk cafe sitter.

It is not easy to be one. You must possess the ruthless, profound insight of a genius and the behind of a totally talentless human being. A young woman, lazy-legged and liking herself, strolls out of the Calle San Miquel and onto our High Road to Cadiz—allowing herself to be stared at by the Spanish laborers who've gathered there to wonder. I have never seen her, but immediately I know she's 18, broke, American, just arrived from Tangier, and nicely high on the excellent kif she's brought with her. Sitting at the table to my left is a young man, 20, American, broke, and he's probably seen her in Tangier, but they never said hello, somehow. He's a little high too, for the same reason she is.

She walks past his table, but he looks down at the damp sand still on his feet and in his sandals, and mumbles to himself brilliantly. She stops. "You shouldn't talk to yourself so loud—very bad manners." He looks up and studies her. "Manners? I didn't see you. I can't even see you now, and I maintain that a man may talk to himself to his heart's content, if alone."

"Are you alone?" she asks, imitating kindness. "Is your heart content?" He ponders for a moment. "No and Not-Quite, respectively." She exhales in a bored manner. "Well," she says, "if you're still in the Not-Quite stage, I suggest you go away and be alone. Do you wanna be alone?" "No," he says. "Whataya wanna be?" "A fireman—once." "Really! Why, that's a coincidence! I wanted to be a fire! Why didn't you?" She sits down next to him. "Didn't I what?" he asks. "Become a fireman!' "I dunno—" he makes a face that physicists make when considering an especially colossal equation—"I guess it was as I grew older I bought the standard Spanish fear of getting involved with foreign elements or being burned."

Now he turns to her and smiles youngly, and raises an eyebrow the way you do when you listen to Mozart. "But believe me, lady, if I'duh known you was gonna be a fire—" "I changed my mind," she says. "Why?" "Was afraid of being put out. Besides, I've an aversion for smoke." "Smoke!" he says, "I like it! I like the smell of it better than the taste! You sorta like to flirt with me for a while? I'm a real easy guy to be flirted with. My mother was a very progressive woman."

The girl crosses her legs and stares at the mountains across the street and wonders when and if a moon will happen tonight and stares at the damp on the boy's feet and in his sandals, and makes a decision. "My mother, who comes from Jersey City, New Jersey, would hate your mother, but I'll flirt with you for a while." There is a pause. They both get more comfortable in their chairs and begin to watch the other people. They'll hardly ever look at each other again.

"Whatiya do?" she asks. "I'm a writer." (Deeply) "What do you write? Poems?" He shakes his head. "No. Prose in rhyme." "What's the difference between poetry and prose in rhyme?" she asks. "Prose in rhyme is like Christmas cards. Poetry is like Christmas," he says. "Oh," she nods, and scratches a mosquito bite on her arm. "I'm also writing a short story called 'Secks Plowrong, the Son of Funny Parents.' I'm gonna send it to Esquire—" he lifts his foot to the chair and begins to take the sand out of his toes—"when I finish it."

Corn Fills The Bill For Labor Day

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

WHEN I was young, Labor Day weekend meant feasts of fresh corn and watermelon. We children would have felt cheated if there hadn't been plenty on hand so that we could eat our fill.

But my mother, like many other cooks, knew that corn and watermelon had a special virtue. In those days lots of drop-in company was the rule — and always welcome. These two foods could be served on short order.

I can still hear my mother calling, "Add a few dozen more ears of corn to the boiler! Slice the other half of the watermelon!" Everyone who had come to spend the day—or weekend—at our country house had a wonderful time, everyone remembered and loved my mother's ready largesse.

Should you want to use fresh corn in creamy style, do try this recipe. It's a great old-fashioned "side dish" to serve with poultry, meat, fish or eggs.

CREAMY FRESH CORN

6 to 8 ears fresh corn
3 strips bacon (halved crosswise)
⅔ cup water
1 teaspoon salt or to taste
½ teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons flour
¼ cup milk
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Husk corn and cut the kernels from the cob. Scrape cob well with a tablespoon to remove all the pulp and milk — there should be 3 cups. Cook bacon slowly until crisp in an 8-inch skillet; remove and drain on paper towel. Stir corn into hot bacon fat and then add water, salt and sugar. Stir and cook 5 minutes, uncovered. Stir milk gradually into flour, keeping smooth. Add to corn and cook and stir constantly for a few minutes or until thickened. Mix in pepper and butter. Serve hot garnished with bacon. Makes 6 servings.

LABOR DAY TREAT—Serve fresh corn on the cob or prepare it cream-style flavored with bacon.

Week's Food Economies

As you plan food purchases for the summer's last long weekend you will find produce in liberal supply with very attractive price tags, says Virginia L. McLuckie, food economist in the Baltimore office of the department of markets, University of Maryland.

This time of year, fruit counters are most attractive, with best buys in peaches, cantaloupes, watermelon and bananas. Supplies of local peaches are increasing. Now is the time to select your favorite varieties for canning and freezing. J. H. Hales and Elbertas are two popular varieties on the market.

Maryland cantaloupe supplies are heavy, and the shipped-in melons are mostly from California. Cantaloupe prices are low. Most of the cantaloupe is pink or salmon colored meat, however, some white or green meat melons are to be found.

Watermelon and bananas are carrying attractive price tags. At moderate to higher prices you will find honeydew, cranshaw, Persian and Casaba melons.

Vegetables are in generous supply. The best buys are in green beans, peppers, squash and pascal celery. Fresh sweet peppers add color and flavor to many dishes served boiled, pan fried, or baked, in salads, sandwiches, casseroles or soups, or as a garnish. Celery is coming from New York and California and is the Pascal type. In buying, look for firm, brittle stalks and fresh-looking leaves. Green beans and squash are Maryland-grown vegetables of very good quality and attractive prices.

Usually Labor Day weekend means the last of the picnic season, and many families will plan an outdoor meal. There are good buys in red meats and quick-cooking items. Recommended best buys in meats include sales on pork and turkey. The supply of turkey is large and prices very attractive. For an easy weekend a turkey will supply meat for several meals indoors or outdoors, according to your family activities.

Mandarin Orange Flavors Dessert

This gelatin dessert is such a pretty clear color, you'll enjoy serving it.

Golden Glow

1 can (11 ounces) mandarin oranges
1 package (3 ounces) peach-flavored gelatin

Drain oranges thoroughly; add enough water to the syrup to make 2 cups; heat until almost boiling. Add hot syrup mixture to gelatin; stir until gelatin is dissolved; cool.

Add drained oranges; turn into a 3-cup bowl or similar container; chill until set. Loosen sides of gelatin from bowl; dip bowl in hot water; unmold.

Makes four or five servings.

Put Vegetables In Oven With Main Dish

Many vegetables can be baked casserole-style along with the main dish in the oven. This not only makes thrifty use of the oven, but at the same time turns everyday vegetables into a delightfully different treat.

In this recipe for a Green Bean and Mushroom casserole, the green beans, subtly flavored with garlic salt, are submerged in a rich, creamy mushroom sauce. The surprising thing about the sauce is that it is made in a jiffy with a handy envelope of mushroom soup mix.

You can top casserole with soft bread crumbs mixed with Parmesan cheese or, for something different, eliminate the cheese and substitute two tablespoons of chopped nut meats. Either way, you will find this vegetable course will draw paeans of praise from your family.

Green Bean-Mushroom Casserole

Ingredients—2 packages frozen green beans, French cut or, 3 cups cooked fresh green beans; 1 (1½-oz.) envelope mushrooms soup mix; 2 cups milk; dash of garlic salt; ⅓ cup soft bread crumbs; 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese; 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine. (2 tablespoons chopped nuts may be substituted for cheese.)

Prepare beans according to package directions; drain well. Empty soup mix into saucepan and gradually stir in milk. Heat and continue stirring until sauce thickens. Add beans and garlic salt. Mix well; turn into a 1½ quart casserole.

Sprinkle with bread crumbs and cheese or nuts which have been tossed with butter or margarine. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Place under broiler for 1 minute or until topping is lightly browned. Makes eight servings.

French Bread Baked With Sliced Onion

Be different — serve French bread, onion style!

Slice a loaf of French bread down to (not through) the bottom crust in slices about 1 inch thick. Butter each slice generously, and slip very thin slices of sweet, mild onions in each celt.

Sprinkle loaf with salt and pepper. Place loaf on cookie sheet, bake ten to fifteen minutes at 400-degree Fahrenheit.

KITCHEN NOTES

By MARIAN KEMP, Home Economist

STRAWBERRIES, because of modern growing and marketing methods, are available every month of the year. California has a winter and summer crop. These berries reach the east coast in excellent condition. Florida berries are in the markets from the middle of December until the first of May. There are also berries from North Carolina and Louisiana during part of April and May.

Those who love strawberries can no longer say that the season for fresh berries is too short.

CREAM PUFFS

1 cup water
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sifted enriched flour
Dash salt
4 eggs
Strawberry Filling

Bring water to boiling. Add butter or margarine, stirring until melted. Add flour and salt all at once. Stir very well until mixture is smooth and forms a soft ball that does not separate. Cool 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Drop batter by spoonfuls on lightly greased baking sheet to make 12 puffs. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 15 minutes. Reduce heat and bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about 25 minutes longer. When cool, split and fill with Strawberry Filling. Garnish with whole strawberries. Makes 12 Cream Puffs.

Strawberry Filling

3 tablespoons enriched flour
⅓ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup sliced, sweetened strawberries
½ cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon sugar
Whole strawberries for garnish

Mix flour, ⅓ cup sugar and salt in saucepan. Add milk gradually and cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture comes to a boil. Slowly add hot mixture to beaten egg and return again to heat. Bring to boiling. Cool mixture slightly. Blend in vanilla extract. Chill. Fold in strawberries. Whip cream until frothy. Add 1 tablespoon sugar and beat until stiff. Blend into strawberry mixture.

FRESH STRAWBERRIES AND CREAM

Combine 2 cups sliced fresh strawberries and 1 tablespoon sugar. Let stand 10 minutes. Fold into ¼ pound diced marshmallows and 1 cup sour cream. Refrigerate at least one hour before serving. Serve in sherbet glasses topped with a whole strawberry. Yield: 6 servings.

COOK'S TOUR

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bread has been used for many things, from taxes to tablecloths.

It has been blamed for revolutions, its color regarded as a status symbol, its production and sale severely regulated. The "staff of life" we take for granted at meals and snacktime is fascinating historically.

Americans ate nearly 14.5 billion pounds of bread in 1958, says of Agriculture (USDA) Marketing Service. Most of it was white, wheat or rye, but USDA figures also indicate that such specialty breads as raisin, diet and protein and bread-type rolls are gaining slowly in popularity.

Symbolizes High Rank

Historians say white bread has symbolized high rank from early Roman days. The working class had to settle for dark bread made from coarse grains such as barley and millet.

Historians also say that bread was the daily wage of ancient Egyptians for centuries. Laborers were paid three loaves of bread and two jugs of beer daily during the 20 years it took to build the great pyramid of Pharaoh Cheops. Even the beer was a by-product, made by fermiting water-soaked bread.

Taxes and tribute to officials and priests also were paid in bread in thos days, and loaves were placed in tombs to placate the spirits of the dead.

Quen Marie Antoinette is remembered largely for her suggestion that starving Frenchmen eat cake when bread was lacking. Four centuries earlier, hungry French subjects had begged cast-off tablecloths at court because thin layers of bread dough were used when linen wasn't available.

Shortages Spell Disaster

In succeeding cnturies, bread shortages were blamed for such disasters as the fall of Rome, the French Revolution and, as recently as 1917, the Russian Revolution.

The origin of bread is unknown, but the National Geographic Society says a baking industry existed 10 - thousand years ago, among the Swiss Lake Dwellers.

Laws and regulations governing brad production have always been stringent. Early punishments for infractions included putting bakers into their own ovens or dragging them through the streets with short-weight or poor quality loaves tied around their necks.

For A Special Flavor Touch

For many a long year gelatin desserts have been among the most popular. One of the reasons for this is that they are easy to prepare. You probably have noticed how much improved the flavored gelatins are and how many flavors are available.

Recently two new combinatio have been launched: mixed fruit, which is a combination of several, and lemon-lime, which is also delicious. Often these are made into small molds which are attractive when turned out at dessert time. They may be served with whipped cream or a custard sauce.

These products may be used for salad as well as for dessert. The latter may be given a special touch of flavor by replacing a small amount of the water with wine or rum.

Two of our favorite jellied desserts, coffee jelly and wine jelly, must be entirely homemade.

Cofffee Jelly

2 tablespoons granulated gelatin
½ cup red wine
3 cups freshly made coffee
½ cup sugar

Soften gelatin in wine about 5 minutes. Add hot coffee and sugar, and stir until dissolved. Pour in mold and chill until set. Unmold and serve with plain or whipped cream. Yield: Six servings. (Instant coffee may be used.)

White Wine Jelly

2 tablespoons granulated gelatin
¾ cup cold water
1½ cups boiling water
⅓ cup sugar
½ cup orange juice
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup white wine

Soften gelatin in cold water about 5 minutes. Add boiling water and sugar, and stir until dissolved. Add remaining ingredients, straining fruit juices if a clear jelly is desired. Pour in mold and chill until set. Unmold on serving platter and serve with plain or whipped cream. Yield: Six servings.

Vacuum Bottle

Contents of a vacuum bottle will stay hot longer, if you preheat the bottle with scalding water and let it stand until ready to pour in the contents.

Cover With Foil

When preparing shirred eggs, cover the dishes with aluminum foil and the eggs won't harden over the top.

Way To Thin Frosting

If you want cake, cookies or rolls to have a thin layer of frosting, add the frosting while the baked product is still warm.

Corn Fills The Bill For Labor Day

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

WHEN I was young, Labor Day weekend meant feasts of fresh corn and watermelon. We children would have felt cheated if there hadn't been plenty on hand so that we could eat our fill.

But my mother, like many other cooks, knew that corn and watermelon had a special virtue. In those days lots of drop-in company was the rule — and always welcome. These two foods could be served on short order.

I can still hear my mother calling, "Add a few dozen more ears of corn to the boiler! Slice the other half of the watermelon!" Everyone who had come to spend the day—or weekend—at our country house had a wonderful time, everyone remembered and loved my mother's ready largesse.

Should you want to use fresh corn in creamy style, do try this recipe. It's a great old-fashioned "side dish" to serve with poultry, meat, fish or eggs.

CREAMY FRESH CORN

6 to 8 ears fresh corn
3 strips bacon (halved crosswise)
⅔ cup water
1 teaspoon salt or to taste
½ teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons flour
¼ cup milk
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Husk corn and cut the kernels from the cob. Scrape cob well with a tablespoon to remove all the pulp and milk — there should be 3 cups. Cook bacon slowly until crisp in an 8-inch skillet; remove and drain on paper towel. Stir corn into hot bacon fat and then add water, salt and sugar. Stir and cook 5 minutes, uncovered. Stir milk gradually into flour, keeping smooth. Add to corn and cook and stir constantly for a few minutes or until thickened. Mix in pepper and butter. Serve hot garnished with bacon. Makes 6 servings.

LABOR DAY TREAT—Serve fresh corn on the cob or prepare it cream-style flavored with bacon.

Week's Food Economies

As you plan food purchases for the summer's last long weekend you will find produce in liberal supply with very attractive price tags, says Virginia L. McLuckie, food economist in the Baltimore office of the department of markets, University of Maryland.

This time of year, fruit counters are most attractive, with best buys in peaches, cantaloupes, watermelon and bananas. Supplies of local peaches are increasing. Now is the time to select your favorite varieties for canning and freezing. J. H. Hales and Elbertas are two popular varieties on the market.

Maryland cantaloupe supplies are heavy, and the shipped-in melons are mostly from California. Cantaloupe prices are low. Most of the cantaloupe is pink or salmon colored meat, however, some white or green meat melons are to be found.

Watermelon and bananas are carrying attractive price tags. At moderate to higher prices you will find honeydew, cranshaw, Persian and Casaba melons.

Vegetables are in generous supply. The best buys are in green beans, peppers, squash and pascal celery. Fresh sweet peppers add color and flavor to many dishes served boiled, pan fried, or baked, in salads, sandwiches, casseroles or soups, or as a garnish. Celery is coming from New York and California and is the Pascal type. In buying, look for firm, brittle stalks and fresh-looking leaves.

Green beans and squash are Maryland-grown vegetables of very good quality and attractive prices.

Usually Labor Day weekend means the last of the picnic season, and many families will plan an outdoor meal. There are good buys in red meats and quick-cooking items. Recommended best buys in meats include sales on pork and turkey. The supply of turkey is large and prices very attractive. For an easy weekend a turkey will supply meat for several meals indoors or outdoors, according to your family activities.

Mandarin Orange Flavors Dessert

This gelatin dessert is such a pretty clear color, you'll enjoy serving it.

Golden Glow

1 can (11 ounces) mandarin oranges
1 package (3 ounces) peach-flavored gelatin

Drain oranges thoroughly; add enough water to the syrup to make 2 cups; heat until almost boiling. Add hot syrup mixture to gelatin; stir until gelatin is dissolved; cool.

Add drained oranges; turn into a 3-cup bowl or similar container; chill until set. Loosen sides of gelatin from bowl; dip bowl in hot water; unmold.

Makes four or five servings.

Put Vegetables In Oven With Main Dish

Many vegetables can be baked casserole-style along with the main dish in the oven. This not only makes thrifty use of the oven, but at the same time turns everyday vegetables into a delightfully different treat.

In this recipe for a Green Bean and Mushroom casserole, the green beans, subtly flavored with garlic salt, are submerged in a rich, creamy mushroom sauce. The surprising thing about the sauce is that it is made in a jiffy with a handy envelope of mushroom soup mix.

You can top casserole with soft bread crumbs mixed with Parmesan cheese or, for something different, eliminate the cheese and substitute two tablespoons of chopped nut meats. Either way, you will find this vegetable course will draw paeans of praise from your family.

Green Bean-Mushroom Casserole

Ingredients—2 packages frozen green beans, French cut or, 3 cups cooked fresh green beans; 1 (1½-oz.) envelope mushrooms soup mix; 2 cups milk; dash of garlic salt; ⅓ cup soft bread crumbs; 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese; 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine. (2 tablespoons chopped nuts may be substituted for cheese.)

Prepare beans according to package directions; drain well. Empty soup mix into saucepan and gradually stir in milk. Heat and continue stirring until sauce thickens. Add beans and garlic salt. Mix well; turn into a 1½ quart casserole.

Sprinkle with bread crumbs and cheese or nuts which have been tossed with butter or margarine. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Place under broiler for 1 minute or until topping is lightly browned. Makes eight servings.

French Bread Baked With Sliced Onion

Be different — serve French bread, onion style!

Slice a loaf of French bread down to (not through) the bottom crust in slices about 1 inch thick. Butter each slice generously, and slip very thin slices of sweet, mild onions in each celt.

Sprinkle loaf with salt and pepper. Place loaf on cookie sheet, bake ten to fifteen minutes at 400-degree Fahrenheit.

KITCHEN NOTES

By MARIAN KEMP, Home Economist

STRAWBERRIES, because of modern growing and marketing methods, are available every month of the year. California has a winter and summer crop. These berries reach the east coast in excellent condition. Florida berries are in the markets from the middle of December until the first of May. There are also berries from North Carolina and Louisiana during part of April and May.

Those who love strawberries can no longer say that the season for fresh berries is too short.

CREAM PUFFS

1 cup water
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sifted enriched flour
Dash salt
4 eggs

Strawberry Filling

Bring water to boiling. Add butter or margarine, stirring until melted. Add flour and salt all at once. Stir very well until mixture is smooth and forms a soft ball that does not separate. Cool 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Drop batter by spoonfuls on lightly greased baking sheet to make 12 puffs. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 15 minutes. Reduce heat and bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about 25 minutes longer. When cool, split and fill with Strawberry Filling. Garnish with whole strawberries. Makes 12 Cream Puffs.

Strawberry Filling

3 tablespoons enriched flour
⅓ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup sliced, sweetened strawberries
½ cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon sugar

Whole strawberries for garnish

Mix flour, ⅓ cup sugar and salt in saucepan. Add milk gradually and cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture comes to a boil. Slowly add hot mixture to beaten egg and return again to heat. Bring to boiling. Cool mixture slightly. Blend in vanilla extract. Chill. Fold in strawberries. Whip cream until frothy. Add 1 tablespoon sugar and beat until stiff. Blend into strawberry mixture.

FRESH STRAWBERRIES AND CREAM

Combine 2 cups sliced fresh strawberries and 1 tablespoon sugar. Let stand 10 minutes. Fold into ¼ pound diced marshmallows and 1 cup sour cream. Refrigerate at least one hour before serving. Serve in sherbet glasses topped with a whole strawberry. Yield: 6 servings.

Cover With Foil

When preparing shirred eggs, cover the dishes with aluminum foil and the eggs won't harden over the top.

Way To Thin Frosting

If you want cake, cookies or rolls to have a thin layer of frosting, add the frosting while the baked product is still warm.

COOK'S TOUR

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bread has been used for many things, from taxes to tablecloths.

It has been blamed for revolutions, its color regarded as a status symbol, its production and sale severely regulated. The "staff of life" we take for granted at meals and snacktime is fascinating historically.

Americans ate nearly 14.5 billion pounds of bread in 1958, says of Agriculture (USDA) Marketing Service. Most of it was white, wheat or rye, but USDA figures also indicate that such specialty breads as raisin, diet and protein and bread-type rolls are gaining slowly in popularity.

Symbolizes High Rank

Historians say white bread has symbolized high rank from early Roman days. The working class had to settle for dark bread made from coarse grains such as barley and millet.

Historians also say that bread was the daily wage of ancient Egyptians for centuries. Laborers were paid three loaves of bread and two jugs of beer daily during the 20 years it took to build the great pyramid of Pharaoh Cheops. Even the beer was a by-product, made by fermiting water-soaked bread.

Taxes and tribute to officials and priests also were paid in bread in thos days, and loaves were placed in tombs to placate the spirits of the dead.

Quen Marie Antoinette is remembered largely for her suggestion that starving Frenchmen eat cake when bread was lacking. Four centuries earlier, hungry French subjects had begged cast-off tablecloths at court because thin layers of bread dough were used when linen wasn't available.

Shortages Spell Disaster

In succeeding cnturies, bread shortages were blamed for such disasters as the fall of Rome, the French Revolution and, as recently as 1917, the Russian Revolution.

The origin of bread is unknown, but the National Geographic Society says a baking industry existed 10 - thousand years ago, among the Swiss Lake Dwellers.

Laws and regulations governing brad production have always been stringent. Early punishments for infractions included putting bakers into their own ovens or dragging them through the streets with short-weight or poor quality loaves tied around their necks.

For A Special Flavor Touch

For many a long year gelatin desserts have been among the most popular. One of the reasons for this is that they are easy to prepare. You probably have noticed how much improved the flavored gelatins are and how many flavors are available.

Recently two new combinatio have been launched: mixed fruit, which is a combination of several, and lemon-lime, which is also delicious. Often these are made into small molds which are attractive when turned out at dessert time. They may be served with whipped cream or a custard sauce.

These products may be used for salad as well as for dessert. The latter may be given a special touch of flavor by replacing a small amount of the water with wine or rum.

Two of our favorite jellied desserts, coffee jelly and wine jelly, must be entirely homemade.

Cofffee Jelly

2 tablespoons granulated gelatin
½ cup red wine
3 cups freshly made coffee
½ cup sugar

Soften gelatin in wine about 5 minutes. Add hot coffee and sugar, and stir until dissolved. Pour in mold and chill until set. Unmold and serve with plain or whipped cream. Yield: Six servings. (Instant coffee may be used.)

White Wine Jelly

2 tablespoons granulated gelatin
¾ cup cold water
1½ cups boiling water
⅓ cup sugar
½ cup orange juice
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup white wine

Soften gelatin in cold water about 5 minutes. Add boiling water and sugar, and stir until dissolved. Add remaining ingredients, straining fruit juices if a clear jelly is desired. Pour in mold and chill until set. Unmold on serving platter and serve with plain or whipped cream. Yield: Six servings.

Vacuum Bottle

Contents of a vacuum bottle will stay hot longer, if you preheat the bottle with scalding water and let it stand until ready to pour in the contents.

A garden-fresh vegetable salad will stay cold and crisp if you take it to the picnic in a big thermos jug.

Save your empty egg cartons for packing stuffed fresh plums and apricots so they won't bruise. To stuff plums and apricots, cut in half; remove pits; fill with cream cheese and nuts whipped with honey. Put halves together again before packing.

For those who like their fried chicken hot, bring along a roll of aluminum foil. Each person can wrap his favorite pieces and guard them over the coals.

Avoid confusion at picnic time by packing cooking utensils and supplies in waxed bags with tag lists. The same bags will come in handy for disposing of coffee grounds and even carrying wet swim suits home.

Everyone's happy at a make-your-own picnic. Along with cold cuts, cheese and relishes, include two or three very special sandwich fillings and an assortment of breads and spreads.

Take along a few pretty wicker paper baskets and line them with paper napkins for serving hot rolls, potatoes, corn on the cob.

A garden-fresh vegetable salad will stay cold and crisp if you take it to the picnic in a big thermos jug.

Save your empty egg cartons for packing stuffed fresh plums and apricots so they won't bruise. To stuff plums and apricots, cut in half; remove pits; fill with cream cheese and nuts whipped with honey. Put halves together again before packing.

For those who like their fried chicken hot, bring along a roll of aluminum foil. Each person can wrap his favorite pieces and guard them over the coals.

Avoid confusion at picnic time by packing cooking utensils and supplies in waxed bags with tag lists. The same bags will come in handy for disposing of coffee grounds and even carrying wet swim suits home.

Everyone's happy at a make-your-own picnic. Along with cold cuts, cheese and relishes, include two or three very special sandwich fillings and an assortment of breads and spreads.

Take along a few pretty wicker paper baskets and line them with paper napkins for serving hot rolls, potatoes, corn on the cob.

New Salad Calls For Seconds

Macaroni salads are very substantial and they can be delicious.

Use French dressing—any favorite brand—to give the macaroni flavor. Pour the dressing over hot cooked macaroni and allow it to marinate until will chilled. Then add your sea food, diced cooked poultry, diced luncheon loaf or ham and crisp raw vegetables and you will have a salad that will call for second helpings.

In this recipe we have used only vegetables and plan to use the salad with cold cuts, a sea food cold plate or a cold broiled half chicken or rock cornish hen.

For A Patio Supper

For a patio supper you could add French bread sliced and heated with dill butter—butter creamed with dill seeds—or one of the wide variety of ready to bake hot breads in the refrigerator cases of your supermarket.

For dessert you might use a bowl of fruit as a centerpiece for the table—and for those with a sweet tooth, why not offer a rich chocolate layer cake?

Vegetable Macaroni Salad

1 package (7 or 8 ounces) elbow macaroni
1 can (6 ounces) chopped broiled mushrooms
1 tablespoon finely diced onion
¼ cup well-seasoned French dressing
¼ cup commercial sour cream
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 cup coarsely shredded raw carrot
¼ cup finely diced green pepper

Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until just tender. Drain, rinse under cold water and drain thoroughly. Drain mushrooms reserving broth for future use. Combine macaroni and mushrooms in suitable container. Add onion and French dressing tossing lightly but well. Cover and chill for several hours.

Blend together sour cream, mayonnaise, mustard, salt and pepper. Drain excess French dressing from macaroni. Add carrot, green pepper and the mayonnaise mixture. Toss lightly until well mixed. Serve with salad greens. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Lemon, Honey Jelly Is Tasty

Here's a jelly that is as delicious with hot biscuits as it is with meat.

LEMON-HONEY JELLY

2½ c. honey
¾ c. strained fresh lemon juice
½ c. liquid fruit pectin

Blend honey and lemon juice in large saucepan. Bring to full, rolling boil and add pectin, stirring constantly.

Heat to full boil, then boil for one minute.

WHEN JELLY flakes from mixing spoon, remove from heat.

Curried Spareribs Are On The Menu

A tropical menu features curried barbecued spareribs. Cook on the grill and baste with a tempting curry sauce that has a can of condensed tomato soup as its base. Accompany this tasty main dish with a cabbage and pineapple salad.

Next time you entertain make it a party "flavored with island fun." Give it all the tropical touches you can, let the setting be on your patio or terrace. Much of the entertaining in the magical islands is done under the blue skies . . . on the "lanai" . . . the porch, open-air living room.

For the menu, select foods that are typical. Curried barbecued spareribs are perfect. While the ribs themselves involve more preparation than most meat for barbecuing, their flavor is well worth the effort. Actually the basting sauce is an easy-do. It uses canned condensed tomato soup as its base with simple additions of lemon juice, onion, chutney, and curry powder. A really "souper" one!

To go along with the succulent ribs, toss together a salad of pineapple chunks and shredded cabbage. For desert serve ice cream balls and candied ginger.

CURRIED BARBECUED SAUCE

1 can (10½ ounces) condensed tomato soup
⅓ cup water
3 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup minced onion
¼ cup chopped chutney
1 tablespoon curry powder

In saucepan, combine all ingredients. Cook over low heat for 10 minutes, stirring now and then.

Spareribs (Outdoor Method): Cut 3 pounds spareribs into serving-size pieces; place in large pot of boiling water. Cover; simmer 1 hour. Meanwhile, prepare sauce. Drain spareribs; place on grill 6 inches above glowing coals. Cook for 30 minutes or until tender, basting with sauce and turning every few minutes. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

Wheat Germ In Biscuits

These hearty but bite-size biscuits may steal the show!

Drop Biscuits

2 cups biscuit mix (bought or homemade)
⅓ cup wheat germ
½ to ¾ cup milk

Stir together biscuit mix and wheat germ. With a fork stir in enough milk to make mixture a little softer than regular biscuit dough.

Drop into greased small muffin pans filling cups almost to top. Bake in a hot (425 degrees) oven 10 to 12 minutes or until lightly browned. If muffin-pan cups each hold 2 tablespoons, recipe will make 18 biscuits.

Bread Facts

Flavorful, nutritous uses for specialty breads are many. Wheat and raisin breads make delicious puddings. Cheese bread is a natural for apple betty. Croutons of oatmeal, protein or rye bread are especially good as salad and soup garnishes. And in home baking, you can make a 1-loaf recipe of white bread into a specialty product by adding ¼ to ½ cup of wheat germ to the dry ingredients without further recipe changes. The triple benefits are a nutty flavor, crisp texture and extra vitamins and minerals, notably iron.

Special Meat Served For Big Occasions

What are the big days for your family this spring? A graduation? A birthday? Whatever it is, keep in mind handsome beef roasts and sizzling broiled steaks for the special occasion.

For fussless cooking, both standing or rolled rib roasts and broiling steaks (club, sirloin, T-bone and porterhouse) rate gold stars. For a two, three or foursome, choose individual club steaks and cook according to each person's liking for rare, medium or well done, suggests the American Meat Institute.

Molded Beef Salad Tasty

Molded beef salad is hot weather fare.

In a saucepan, sprinkle 2 envelopes of unflavored gelatin on 1 (10½ ounce) can of condensed beef broth to soften. Place over low heat. Stir until gelatin dissolves completely.

Remove from heat. Add 1½ cups of tomato juice, ¼ cup of water, 2 tablespoons of lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon of celery seed.

Chill to consistency of unbeaten egg white. Fold in 1 cup of finely diced cooked beef, ¼ cup of chopped green pepper, and 2 tablespoons of chopped green onion.

Pour into 1 quart mold. Chill 4 hours or until firm. Unmold on lettuce. Serve with dairy sour cream.

Serves 4 to 6.

Heat Measuring Cup

Before measuring shortening into a cup, fill the cup with hot water and let stand until it is warm. Pour out the water, and then you'll find your shortening will slide out of the cup easily.

Peel Potatoes Over Paper To Catch Parings

Peeling a batch of potatoes to cook before making potato salad?

Spread some paper on the kitchen counter and let the paring from the spuds fall on it, then scoop up pairings and paper and put into the garbage can.

If you use a sink strainer, of course you can peel the potatoes over it.

New Salad Calls For Seconds

Macaroni salads are very substantial and they can be delicious.

Use French dressing—any favorite brand—to give the macaroni flavor. Pour the dressing over hot cooked macaroni and allow it to marinate until will chilled. Then add your sea food, diced cooked poultry, diced luncheon loaf or ham and crisp raw vegetables and you will have a salad that will call for second helpings.

In this recipe we have used only vegetables and plan to use the salad with cold cuts, a sea food cold plate or a cold broiled half chicken or rock cornish hen.

For A Patio Supper

For a patio supper you could add French bread sliced and heated with dill butter—butter creamed with dill seeds—or one of the wide variety of ready to bake hot breads in the refrigerator cases of your supermarket.

For dessert you might use a bowl of fruit as a centerpiece for the table—and for those with a sweet tooth, why not offer a rich chocolate layer cake?

Vegetable Macaroni Salad

- 1 package (7 or 8 ounces) elbow macaroni
- 1 can (6 ounces) chopped broiled mushrooms
- 1 tablespoon finely diced onion
- ¼ cup well-seasoned French dressing
- ¾ cup commercial sour cream
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup coarsely shredded raw carrot
- ¼ cup finely diced green pepper

Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until just tender. Drain, rinse under cold water and drain thoroughly. Drain mushrooms reserving broth for future use. Combine macaroni and mushrooms in suitable container. Add onion and French dressing tossing lightly but well. Cover and chill for several hours.

Blend together sour cream, mayonnaise, mustard, salt and pepper. Drain excess French dressing from macaroni. Add carrot, green pepper and the mayonnaise mixture. Toss lightly until well mixed. Serve with salad greens. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Lemon, Honey Jelly Is Tasty

Here's a jelly that is as delicious with hot biscuits as it is with meat.

LEMON-HONEY JELLY

- 2½ c. honey
- ¾ c. strained fresh lemon juice
- ½ c. liquid fruit pectin

Blend honey and lemon juice in large saucepan. Bring to full, rolling boil and add pectin, stirring constantly.

Heat to full boil, then boil for one minute.

WHEN JELLY flakes from mixing spoon, remove from heat. Skim and pour into hot, sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin.

Makes 5 glasses.

Largest Diamond Never Leaves Bank

By JOHN MARLOW

TAOS, N.M. (AP)—Mrs. Winifred Parker is a successful rock hound.

Seven years ago she discovered the largest diamond ever unearthed in this country, "The Star of Arkansas," on a spur-of-the-moment rock hunt which was planned for southeastern Texas but ended up in Arkansas.

Contrary to the popular song, Mrs. Parker does not feel the diamond is her best friend, hasn't seen it for several years and is not particularly impressed with it.

She seems to be prouder of her large collection of rocks and semiprecious stones.

The boat-shape inch-and-a-half-long diamond rests in a vault at the Republic National Bank in Dallas.

"I've no particular desire to take it out," Mrs. Parker said. "Actually, it's been years since we've seen it."

One of the first problems the Parkers had with the stone was the nationwide publicity the discovery received. It was first strongly intimated that the whole thing was a hoax and a publicity stunt. Arthur Parker, an independent oil operator, and his wife were questioned intensively on how many leases Parker had in Arkansas.

Next came the Internal Revenue Service, which sought to tax the stone.

It was a test case, Mrs. Parker said, and set a precedent. The courts finally ruled that there can be no tax on the stone until a gain is taken.

"And, we don't intend to sell it, just now," Parker added.

"It's a one of a kind stone. It's the only diamond of that size that's ever been cut that has been graceful," Mrs. Parker said.

Her husband said the stone was cut by Harold Branch of New York City. Many diamond cutters in the country were just sitting back waiting for Branch to make a mistake, Parker said.

"It's one of the most brilliant diamonds in the world," Mrs. Parker said of the stone. "It's so brilliant that you can't photograph it from the top. You have to get the light up from underneath.

"It's eight times harder than any known diamond in the world."

The unusual stone intrigued the scientists as well as the just plain curious.

The couple loaned the stone to Columbia University and researchers studied it for three months with an electron microscope, Mrs. Parker said.

Another problem with the "Star" has been the insurance.

"It's a very beautiful stone, but I don't wear jewelry and I don't have any use for it," Mrs. Parker said. A minimum insurance policy, for three months, would cost $400, she said.

The Parkers have been rock hounds for about 15 years and have collected stones from all over the world.

One of the units in their sprawling, three-unit home is a workshop, jammed with rocks, cut and uncut.

Parker said it was a trip after petrified wood which turned out to be the excursion on which Mrs. Parker found "The Star of Arkansas."

They were living in Dallas in March 1956. Parker said their two children were sick and he was staying home with them. Mrs. Parker and some friends had planned to look for petrified wood near Trinity, Tex. When they got to the turnoff outside Dallas, one road led to Trinity and the other to Arkansas.

"Let's go to Murfreesboro," one of the friends said, and off they went.

Parker recalls, "That night, one of the friends called and said Winnie had found the biggest diamond in the country.

"You know how rock hounds are. Sometimes they like to kid a little.

" 'Oh, sure,' I said. I thought he was pulling my leg."

Spry 70-Year-Old Logger Still Trims Tree Tops

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — Spry 70-year-old Swante Kyllonen scrambled 130 feet up a big fir tree, sawed off the dead tip towering 50 feet above him and then, standing on tthe blunt platform left by the saw cut, hollered, "I'd like to have a drink!"

His climb wasn't just for kicks —it was for $75. He trimmed off the top so visitors in the state park below wouldn't get hit if it snapped off in a high wind.

"I've topped maybe a thousand trees," Kyllonen grinned. "About 20 of them were as big as this one."

The monster he had just trimmed measured eight feet across at the butt. At the top, where he perched after the chore was done, his platform was 38 inches in diameter.

Kyllonen, who performed at the Seattle World's Fair last year, started his three-hour job carrying two climbing ropes and wearing steel spikes strapped to his feet, like utility linemen use.

He looped one rope around the tree and fastened the ends to his belt. Then he flipped the rope up on the opposite side of the tree, jammed in his climbing irons and scrambled up a couple of steps. He flipped the rope up again and climbed a little farther. He repeated this until he come to a branch. Then he threw the other rope over the branch and around the tree, fastened it to his belt, loosed the first rope and continued to another branch.

When he reached 130 feet, he lifted the saw hanging from his belt and started lopping off the potential man-killer.

Kyllonen is one of the few loggers left who can climb a tree by the springboard method. This is the trick he demonstrated on a towering pole at the World's Fair. His tools were a double-bitted ax and two boards about five feet long.

He's cut a deep, narrow notch and insert the end of one of the boards, which hung from his belt by ropes. Then he's climb from the board he stood on to the one he just inserted. Then he'd cut another notch, pull up the bottom board and insert it, repeating this until he reached the top. He reversed the procedure to get to the ground again.

Kyllonen shrugs off the idea of danger. He's been at this risky work a long time.

"I've been in the woods ever since I was born," he said. "When I was only 5 or 6 years old, I think, I was helping my father fell trees."

As for this monster fir:

"It was one of the hardest," he said. "A leaner, which made it hard when I swung my climbing rope around."

How'd he feel after tthe chore?

"For today," he laughed, "I guess I'm a little bit tired."

AMC Saves $252 Million In First Year

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U.S. Army Materiel Command, which provides the Army with its fighting hardware, completed its first year of operation August 1, with cost reduction type savings of $252 million. It begins its second year with six per cent less personnel and a seven per cent increase in workload as measured by the Annual Funding Program.

In a year-end report of its major accomplishments, the Army Materiel Command under Lt. Gen. Frank S. Besson, Jr., was credited with exceeding by $25 million the $227 goal assigned by the Department of Defense Cost Reduction Program Cost reductions were effected by (1) buying only what was needed, (2) buying at the lowest sound price, and (3) reducing operating costs by increasing efficiency.

The number of civilian and military personnel authorized for AMC was reduced from approximately 191,000 to 179,000 by the consolidation of activities, streamlining of operations, reductions in overhead, and the realignment of operating headquarters.

Two critical tests of AMC's ability to react under pressure were successfully met during the first few months of operation — accelerated support of logistical operations in Southeast Asia and the emergency buildup during the Cuban crisis.

Population of the United States increased by 19 per cent in the decade between 1950 and 1960. There was an increase of 35 per cent during that time of people 65 and over.

Another problem with the "Star" has been the insurance.

"It's a very beautiful stone, but I don't wear jewelry and I don't have any use for it," Mrs. Parker said. A minimum insurance policy, for three months, would cost $400, she said.

The Parkers have been rock hounds for about 15 years and have collected stones from all over the world.

One of the units in their sprawling, three-unit home is a workshop, jammed with rocks, cut and uncut.

Parker said it was a trip after petrified wood which turned out to be the excursion on which Mrs. Parker found "The Star of Arkansas."

They were living in Dallas in March 1956. Parker said their two children were sick and he was staying home with them. Mrs. Parker and some friends had planned to look for petrified wood near Trinity, Tex. When they got to the turnoff outside Dallas, one road led to Trinity and the other to Arkansas.

"Let's go to Murfreesboro," one of the friends said, and off they went.

Parker recalls, "That night, one of the friends called and said Winnie had found the biggest diamond in the country.

"You know how rock hounds are. Sometimes they like to kid a little.

"'Oh, sure,' I said. I thought he was pulling my leg."

Spry 70-Year-Old Logger Still Trims Tree Tops

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — Spry 70-year-old Swante Kyllonen scrambled 130 feet up a big fir tree, sawed off the dead tip towering 50 feet above him and then, standing on tthe blunt platform left by the saw cut, hollered, "I'd like to have a drink!"

His climb wasn't just for kicks —it was for $75. He trimmed off the top so visitors in the state park below wouldn't get hit if it snapped off in a high wind.

"I've topped maybe a thousand trees," Kyllonen grinned. "About 20 of them were as big as this one."

The monster he had just trimmed measured eight feet across at the butt. At the top, where he perched after the chore was done, his platform was 38 inches in diameter.

Kyllonen, who performed at the Seattle World's Fair last year, started his three-hour job carrying two climbing ropes and wearing steel spikes strapped to his feet, like utility linemen use.

He looped one rope around the tree and fastened the ends to his belt. Then he flipped the rope up on the opposite side of the tree, jammed in his climbing irons and scrambled up a couple of steps. He flipped the rope up again and climbed a little farther. He repeated this until he come to a branch. Then he threw the other rope over the branch and around the tree, fastened it to his belt, loosed the first rope and continued to another branch.

When he reached 130 feet, he lifted the saw hanging from his belt and started lopping off the potential man-killer.

Kyllonen is one of the few loggers left who can climb a tree by the springboard method. This is the trick he demonstrated on a towering pole at the World's Fair. His tools were a double-bitted ax and two boards about five feet long.

He's cut a deep, narrow notch and insert the end of one of the boards, which hung from his belt by ropes. Then he's climb from the board he stood on to the one he just inserted. Then he'd cut another notch, pull up the bottom board and insert it, repeating this until he reached the top. He reversed the procedure to get to the ground again.

Kyllonen shrugs off the idea of danger. He's been at this risky work a long time.

"I've been in the woods ever since I was born," he said. "When I was only 5 or 6 years old, I think, I was helping my father fell trees."

As for this monster fir:

"It was one of the hardest," he said. "A leaner, which made it hard when I swung my climbing rope around."

How'd he feel after tthe chore?

AMC Saves $252 Million In First Year

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U.S. Army Materiel Command, which provides the Army with its fighting hardware, completed its first year of operation August 1, with cost reduction type savings of $252 million. It begins its second year with six per cent less personnel and a seven per cent increase in workload as measured by the Annual Funding Program.

In a year-end report of its major accomplishments, the Army Materiel Command under Lt. Gen. Frank S. Besson, Jr., was credited with exceeding by $25 million the $227 goal assigned by the Department of Defense Cost Reduction Program Cost reductions were effected by (1) buying only what was needed, (2) buying at the lowest sound price, and (3) reducing operating costs by increasing efficiency.

The number of civilian and military personnel authorized for AMC was reduced from approximately 191,000 to 179,000 by the consolidation of activities, streamlining of operations, reductions in overhead, and the realignment of operating headquarters.

Two critical tests of AMC's ability to react under pressure were successfully met during the first few months of operation — accelerated support of logistical operations in Southeast Asia and the emergency buildup during the Cuban crisis.

Population of the United States increased by 19 per cent in the decade between 1950 and 1960. There was an increase of 35 per cent during that time of people 65 and over.

W. Va. Commerce Unit Opens 28th Annual Meet

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. (UPI) — The 28th annual meeting of the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce opens Thursday with 250 members, wives and guests expected to attend.

The four-day meeting will open with meetings of various standing committees. A panel discussion on "Human Resources—Their Application to the Recreation and Tourist Business" is set for Friday morning.

A report by the committee nominating new directors will be presented during a business session Saturday morning. W. A. Smith, Parkersburg, moved up as president of the chamber following the traffic death of Hardin H. Harmer, Clarksburg, about two months ago.

State Road Commissioner Burl Sawyers and George F. Fenton of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads will appear before the chamber's standing committee on highways Thursday morning.

Chamber Managing director Earle L. Elmore said the committee is expected to lay the groundwork for steps to be taken by the chamber in promoting the $200 million bond issue which will be on the ballot in the 1964 general election.

W. Va. Agencies Get $150 Million

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—Executive secretary Eugene H. Brown of the Associated General Contractors of West Virginia said the State Road Commission is well on its way to finishing its portion of the Interstate highway system under its planned 10-year program.

Brown said the SRC accounts for more than half the total construction expenditure by the state during the year.

The industrial spokesman said the U. S. government has pumped more than $150 million into state construction during 1963.

He said government construction funds this year totaled more than half of all monies spent on state construction during 1962.

Brown listed the Bureau of Public Roads, the Area Redevelopment Administration, Corps of Engineers, State Board of Education, Hill-Burton Hospital funds, the National Guard Bureau, the Post Office Dept., the Forest Service and the Accelerated Public Works Program as other agencies spending large sums of money in West Virginia.

Rocks Pelt Marchers' Buses In Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP)—Three buses, homeward bound with demonstrators from the civil rights march on Washington Wednesday, were pelted with rocks just before they went through the Baltimore Harbor Tunnel.

Harbor Tunnel police said that all the buses were from Connecticut.

One of the rocks crashed through the windshield of one bus and the other two buses were dented slightly, police said.

No one was injured in the incident, police said, and the buses continued on their way.

W. Va. Releases Surplus Funds To Institutions

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—A total of $1,691,550 was released from surplus funds by the State Board of Public Works Wednesday, including $630,000 for recreational improvements and $153,000 for two state colleges.

The second highest amount released for any one state agency was $600,000 to the Industrial Development Fund of the State Commerce Department.

West Virginia State College was given $123,000 for land purchase and relocation of its athletic field and Concord College received $30,000 to purchase land.

Other allocations included $140,000 for completion of a cell-block at Moundsville Penitentiary; $108,000 for work at Pinecrest Sanitarium, the West Virginia Children's Home at Elkins, Denmar State Hospital and Andrew S. Rowan Memorial Home; $40,000 for the purchase of kitchen equipment at the West Virginia Training School at St. Marys and $20,000 for improvements at the West Virginia Forestry Camp for Boys.

The money came from $5.2 million in surplus funds budgeted by the 1963 Legislature. Thus far more than half the surplus has been released.

The breakdown of money released to the Natural Resources Department for recreation improvement projects showed the largest amounts earmarked for the Chief Logan Recreation Area and Big Ditch Run Watershed in Webster County, $60,000 each, followed by $55,000 for Plum Orchard Lake, Fayette County; $50,000 for Laurel Creek Lake in Mingo County; $40,000 for the Chief Cornstalk Public Hunting Area in Mason County; $20,000 for Kanawha State Forest and $20,000 for Cabwaylingo State Forest.

In other action the board approved Marshall University's expenditure schedules for branch colleges at Logan and Williamson and an expenditure of $211,000 in federal funds for preliminary work on improvements at Grandview State Park near Beckley.

The board refused to release $150,000 to West Virginia Tech until the State Board of Education submits additional information on the planned use of the money in land acquisition and construction.

Speedy Scot Winner Of Hambletonian Trotting Classic

Favored Colt Rallies To Win Last Two Heats

Florlis Scores Head Victory In First Heat

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP) — Speedy Scot, the 2-5 unofficial favorite, rallied after a first-heat loss to Florlis and captured the Hambletonian for 3-year-old trotters Wednesday by sweeping the second and third heats.

In taking the decisive third mile, the Castleton Farm's powerful colt, driven by Ralph Baldwin to his first Hambletonian triumph in 13 starts, was timed in 1:58 2-5.

Florlis, owned by Arden Homestead Stable and piloted by 60-year-old Harry Downall, was second after a vain attempt to overhaul the heavily favored Speedy Scot.

Speedy Scot won the second heat in 1:58.0 and Florlis was second by three-fourths of a length.

Smashes Record

Florlis nipped Speedy Scot by a head in the record-smashing first heat with a blazing time of 1:57 3-5—fastest by any 3-year-old trotter either in competition or against the clock only.

The fastest field in Hambletonian history proved itself in the first two heats when 10 of the 14 starters were clocked under two minutes.

The combined winning times of 5:54 established a world record for a divided three-heat aggregate. The old record was 5:58 1-5 set in 1948 at Du Quoin.

Three horses were scratched from the 14-horse field for the third heat — Diggs Dell, Cheer Honey and Careless Hanover. Third place in the final heat went to Buff Hanover, followed in order by Glidden Hanover, Elma, Dorado, B. F. Coaltown, Captain's Boy, Filter, Choir Boy and Star Act.

Florlis' brilliant first heat which not only shattered the Hambletonian record of 1:58 2-5, but also the world competitive mark for 3-year-old trotters of 1:58 1-5 by Caleb at Lexington, Ky., in 1961, ranked as high as Speedy Scot's triumph in the 38th blue ribbon event for 3-year-old trotters.

23,000 In Stands

About 23,000 were in the stands to watch the sizzling afternoon of record-breaking in 90 - degree temperature. Milling around inside the fairgrounds were 19,000 more, providing a total record fair attendance.

Speedy Scot, boosting his career record to 20 victories in 26 starts, including six out of seven this year, ran his earnings to $238,710. The Hambletonian first prize was $56,619.

Florlis (1-2-2) took second money of $28,309. It was only the second victory in nine outings this season for the son of Florican.

Third place and $13,588 went to the filly, Elma (8-3-5), owned by Mrs. Charlotte N. and L. B. Sheppard and driven by Johnny Simpson.

Relko's Owner Confident After Doping Probe

LONDON (UPI) — Mme. Anne Dupre, owner of French race horse Relko, left the Jockey Club's headquarters Wednesday night smiling confidently after a 4½ hour interview with officials investigating the alleged doping of the 1963 Epsom Derby winner.

Wednesday's deliberations, attended also by Relko's trainer Francois Mathet and two of his stable hands, N. Lotte and J. Piquet, were the highlight of dramatic inquiries by stewards of the Jockey Club into a rash of alleged doping cases which has swept British racing this season.

Eric Cousins, English trainer of Tudor Treasure, one of six horses concerned in the present investigation who have shown a positive result in tests for dope, was told the findings in his case.

He said afterwards that the "stewards found the horse was given a stimulant other than a normal nutrient but the stewards are not satisfied that this was given with evil intent by any known person."

Other owners or trainers refused to comment on their cases.

The Jockey Club stewards were expected to issue a statement Thursday reporting the findings and results of Wednesday's investigations.

FLORIDA RACING

MIAMI (UPI) — Florida's horse tracks will offer a record of more than $6 million in purses during the 1963-64 season with $2,340,000 at Hialeah Park, $1,800,000 at Gulfstream Park, $1,360,000 at Tropitcal Park and $575,000 at Sunshine Park.

Chisox Sweep Doubleheader From Indians

Pizarro, Fisher Victors, 8-3, 3-1

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Juan Pizarro and Eddie Fisher, with the aid of Jim Brosnan, hurled the Chicago White Sox to an 8-3 and 3-1 doubleheader sweep over the Cleveland Indians Wednesday night.

The victories enabled the White Sox to take a one game lead over the Minnesota Twins in their battle for second place.

Fisher pitched the nightcap and gave up three hits, including a solo homer by losing pitcher Dick Donovan before being removed for a pinch hitter in the ninth. Brosnan came on and blanked the Indians on one hit to preserve Fisher's seventh victory against eight losses.

Donovan's homer in the third tied the score at 1-all but Fisher then retired 14 men in a row while the White Sox scored the winning run in the sixth.

Tom McCraw, who extended his hitting streak to nine games, singled to start the sixth. He moved to third on a single by Pete Ward and scored on Nellie Fox' double. Ward stopped at third on Fox' hit but came home on Charley Maxwell's sacrifice fly.

Donovan, now 10-11, was beaten after hurling four straight victories, all of which were complete games.

Pizarro, working with only two days rest in the first game, struck out 10 as he recorded his 16th victory against eight losses. He blanked the Indians on two singles until the White Sox had built a 6-0 lead with the aid of homers by McCraw and Fox.

Pizarro lost his shutout in the eighth when Willie Tasby hit a solo homer and the Indians scored twice more in the ninth.

Water Shortage Forces Steelers To Break Camp

WEST LIBERTY, W. Va. (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Steelers announced Wednesday they would break training camp four days early because of a water shortage at West Liberty State College.

The National Football League club will leave camp Thursday and fly to Detroit where the Steelers will play the Lions in an exhibition game Friday night. Pittsburgh had planned to break camp here Monday.

Quarterback Bobby Layne, who retired at the end of the 1962 season, will be honored Friday night before the game at a banquet. His No. 20 uniform will be retired. He played for the Lions and later the Steelers.

Doris Mullan Wins Girls' Tennis Title

Eight matches in the Allegany County Open Tennis Tournament were played at the Cumberland Tennis Club yesterday, including the finals in the girls' singles, the quarter-finals in the men's doubles, and two third round matches in the men's singles.

Doris Mullan defeated Joy Pence, 7-5, 3-6, 7-5, in a two-and-a-half hour marathon to cop the girl's singles title.

Jim Twigg and Bob Williams beat Oberlin and John Chaney, 6-1, 8-6, on their way to the men's doubles semi-finals.

Two close matches were decided in men's singles, with Shinya Ochiai winning over Bill Davis, 7-5, 4-6, 7-5, and Jim Twigg beating Wesley Neville, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

In the senior mixed doubles, Fred Wiemer and Mrs. Robert Roberts defeated John Klosterman and Mrs. Francis Connelley, 6-4, 1-6, 6-0, and in the junior division, Rocky Klosterman and Mrs. Connelley beat Ed Mullaney and Marty Milbrada, 6-1, 6-1.

Eve Ann Hershberger won over Mrs. Connelley, 6-4, 6-2, in ladies' singles, while in boys' singles, Rocky Klosteman blanked Randy Wiemer, 6-0, 6-0.

Two Americans, South African Star At Forest Hills

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Hugh Sweeney, a rugged individualist who plays in long white flannels, a University of Pennsylvania sophomore and a young South African with a sparkling style were the stars of the opening qualifying matches Wednesday in the National Tennis Championships.

Sweeney, a suave, mustachioed advertising executive from Houston, crushed Manuel Valasco of Bolivia 6-0, 6-2, 6-4. Only Bailey Brown, a Penn student from Bronxville, N.Y., did a quicker job, beating T. Gursoy of Turkey in 43 minutes, 6-0, 6-0, 6-0.

Their performances were matched by 21-year-old Terry Ryan of Johannesburg who, after a shaky start, smashed down John Mangan of Larchmont, N.Y., in a center court match 3-6, 6-2, 6-0, 6-2.

Wednesday's matches plus another qualifying round Thursday will determine 16 players to be placed in the 128-man men's championship starting Friday at the West Side Tennis Club.

Moose Down VFW, 6-1, Can Win Crown Today

Phillips Tosses Six-Hitter, Gets 13-Safety Support

Bombarding VFW ace Tom McLuckie for 13 hits yesterday, the Moose scored a 6-1 triumph over the Vets at Stitcher Field to take a 2-1 edge in the championship finals of the Rocking Chair Softball League.

The Moose gets a chance to take all the marbles today in the fourth game of the series, set for Stitcher Field beginning at 6:15 p. m. The Moose won Monday's opener, 4-1, and VFW came back with an 8-0 triumph Tuesday.

Righthander Hayden Phillips scored his 11th victory against three losses, stopping the Vets on six singles. VFW scored its only run on an error in the bottom of the sixth.

Phillips also drove in his team's first run in the second. The Moose picked up another tally on Herman Lewis' hit in the fourth, then exploded for four runs and five safeties in the seventh.

Lewis opened the big seventh with a single, and Mickey Cunningham followed with a base rap. Donnie Madden singled both runners home. Pete Cecil doubled to drive in the last two Moose tallies.

Madden, Fradiska, Lewis and Cunningham collected two hits each for the winners, while Harry Widdows tripled and Cecil came through with his timely two-bagger.

Jimmy Eckard and Butch Johnson shared four of VFW's six safeties.

Bucs Bop Mets, Cardwell Cops Sixth Straight

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Righthander Don Cardwell, with an assist from ElRoy Face, registered his sixth consecutive victory Wednesday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Mets, 7-2.

Cardwell, who recorded his 13th victory against 12 defeats, was breezing along on a five-hitter going into the ninth when three singles scored a run and brought in Face. The victory moved Cardwell over the .500 mark for the first time this year.

Roberto Clemente got the Pirates their first two runs with his 14th homer in the third inning off Mets' starter and loser Alvin Jackson.

The Mets' inept fielding gave Pittsburgh three more runs in the fifth. With one out Cardwell was safe on Jim Hickman's error. Ron Brand bunted for a single and both he and Cardwell moved up a base when catcher Choo Choo Coleman threw into right field. After Manny Mota walked, Clemente grounded out to score Cardwell and Bill Mazeroski singled to drive in Brand and Mota.

The Pirates got two more in the eighth when Ron Hunt threw wild past first on Bill Virdon's grounder with the bases loaded.

The Mets scored in the sixth on a hit batsman, Duke Snider's double and Frank Thomas' infield out.

Pappas Pitches Orioles To 3-1 Win Over A's

Brandt And Adair Homer For Birds

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Home runs by Jackie Brandt and Jerry Adair backed Milt Pappas' three-hit pitching Wednesday night to give the Baltimore Orioles a 3-1 victory over the Kansas City Athletics.

The Orioles scored all their runs in the second inning after two were out and nobody on off loser Dave Wickersham (10-12). First Brandt hit his 11th homer, then Brooks Robinson walked and Adair cracked his sixth homer.

Pappas, who is now 13-8, pitched his third three-hitter of the year and had a no-hitter until Manny Jiminez led off the fifth with a solid double. Charley Lau's second home run of the year in the sixth accounted for the only Kansas City run.

Except for Lau's homer, Pappas permitted only one Athletic runner to get as far as third base.

Speedy Scot Winner Of Hambletonian Trotting Classic

Favored Colt Rallies To Win Last Two Heats

Florlis Scores Head Victory In First Heat

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP) — Speedy Scot, the 2-5 unofficial favorite, rallied after a first-heat loss to Florlis and captured the Hambletonian for 3-year-old trotters Wednesday by sweeping the second and third heats.

In taking the decisive third mile, the Castleton Farm's powerful colt, driven by Ralph Baldwin to his first Hambletonian triumph in 13 starts, was timed in 1:58 2-5.

Florlis, owned by Arden Homestead Stable and piloted by 60-year-old Harry Downall, was second after a vain attempt to overhaul the heavily favored Speedy Scot.

Speedy Scot won the second heat in 1:58.0 and Florlis was second by three-fourths of a length.

Smashes Record

Florlis nipped Speedy Scot by a head in the record-smashing first heat with a blazing time of 1:57 3-5—fastest by any 3-year-old trotter either in competition or against the clock only.

The fastest field in Hambletonian history proved itself in the first two heats when 10 of the 14 starters were clocked under two minutes.

The combined winning times of 5:54 established a world record for a divided three-heat aggregate. The old record was 5:58 1-5 set in 1948 at Du Quoin.

Three horses were scratched from the 14-horse field for the third heat — Diggs Dell, Cheer Honey and Careless Hanover. Third place in the final heat went to Buff Hanover, followed in order by Glidden Hanover, Elma, Dorado, B. F. Coaltown, Captain's Boy, Filter, Choir Boy and Star Act.

Florlis' brilliant first heat which not only shattered the Hambletonian record of 1:58 2-5, but also the world competitive mark for 3-year-old trotters of 1:58 1-5 by Caleb at Lexington, Ky., in 1961, ranked as high as Speedy Scot's triumph in the 38th blue ribbon event for 3-year-old trotters.

23,000 In Stands

About 23,000 were in the stands to watch the sizzling afternoon of record-breaking in 90 - degree temperature. Milling around inside the fairgrounds were 19,000 more, providing a total record fair attendance.

Speedy Scot, boosting his career record to 20 victories in 26 starts, including six out of seven this year, ran his earnings to $238,710. The Hambletonian first prize was $56,619.

Florlis (1-2-2) took second money of $28,309. It was only the second victory in nine outings this season for the son of Florican.

Third place and $13,588 went to the filly, Elma (8-3-5), owned by Mrs. Charlotte N. and L. B. Sheppard and driven by Johnny Simpson.

Relko's Owner Confident After Doping Probe

LONDON (UPI) — Mme. Anne Dupre, owner of French race horse Relko, left the Jockey Club's headquarters Wednesday night smiling confidently after a 4½ hour interview with officials investigating the alleged doping of the 1963 Epsom Derby winner.

Wednesday's deliberations, attended also by Relko's trainer Francois Mathet and two of his stable hands, N. Lotte and J. Piquet, were the highlight of dramatic inquiries by stewards of the Jockey Club into a rash of alleged doping cases which has swept British racing this season.

Eric Cousins, English trainer of Tudor Treasure, one of six horses concerned in the present investigation who have shown a positive result in tests for dope, was told the findings in his case.

He said afterwards that the "stewards found the horse was given a stimulant other than a normal nutrient but the stewards are not satisfied that this was given with evil intent by any known person."

Other owners or trainers refused to comment on their cases.

The Jockey Club stewards were expected to issue a statement Thursday reporting the findings and results of Wednesday's investigations.

FLORIDA RACING

MIAMI (UPI) — Florida's horse tracks will offer a record of more than $6 million in purses during the 1963-64 season with $2,340,000 at Hialeah Park, $1,800,000 at Gulfstream Park, $1,360,000 at Tropical Park and $575,000 at Sunshine Park.

Chisox Sweep Doubleheader From Indians

Pizarro, Fisher Victors, 8-3, 3-1

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Juan Pizarro and Eddie Fisher, with the aid of Jim Brosnan, hurled the Chicago White Sox to an 8-3 and 3-1 doubleheader sweep over the Cleveland Indians Wednesday night.

The victories enabled the White Sox to take a one game lead over the Minnesota Twins in their battle for second place.

Fisher pitched the nightcap and gave up three hits, including a solo homer by losing pitcher Dick Donovan before being removed for a pinch hitter in the ninth. Brosnan came on and blanked the Indians on one hit to preserve Fisher's seventh victory against eight losses.

Donovan's homer in the third tied the score at 1-all but Fisher then retired 14 men in a row while the White Sox scored the winning run in the sixth.

Tom McCraw, who extended his hitting streak to nine games, singled to start the sixth. He moved to third on a single by Pete Ward and scored on Nellie Fox' double. Ward stopped at third on Fox' hit but came home on Charley Maxwell's sacrifice fly.

Donovan, now 10-11, was beaten after hurling four straight victories, all of which were complete games.

Pizarro, working with only two days rest in the first game, struck out 10 as he recorded his 16th victory against eight losses. He blanked the Indians on two singles until the White Sox had built a 6-0 lead with the aid of homers by McCraw and Fox.

Pizarro lost his shutout in the eighth when Willie Tasby hit a solo homer and the Indians scored twice more in the ninth.

Water Shortage Forces Steelers To Break Camp

WEST LIBERTY, W. Va. (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Steelers announced Wednesday they would break training camp four days early because of a water shortage at West Liberty State College.

The National Football League club will leave camp Thursday and fly to Detroit where the Steelers will play the Lions in an exhibition game Friday night. Pittsburgh had planned to break camp here Monday.

Quarterback Bobby Layne, who retired at the end of the 1962 season, will be honored Friday night before the game at a banquet. His No. 20 uniform will be retired. He played for the Lions and later the Steelers.

Doris Mullan Wins Girls' Tennis Title

Eight matches in the Allegany County Open Tennis Tournament were played at the Cumberland Tennis Club yesterday, including the finals in the girls' singles, the quarter-finals in the men's doubles, and two third round matches in the men's singles.

Doris Mullan defeated Joy Pence, 7-5, 3-6, 7-5, in a two-and-a-half hour marathon to cop the girl's singles title.

Jim Twigg and Bob Williams beat Oberlin and John Chaney, 6-1, 8-6, on their way to the men's doubles semi-finals.

Two close matches were decided in men's singles, with Shinya Ochiai winning over Bill Davis, 7-5, 4-6, 7-5, and Jim Twigg beating Wesley Neville, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

In the senior mixed doubles, Fred Wiemer and Mrs. Robert Roberts defeated John Klosterman and Mrs. Francis Connelley, 6-4, 1-6, 6-0, and in the junior division, Rocky Klosterman and Mrs. Connelley beat Ed Mullaney and Marty Milbrada, 6-1, 6-1.

Eve Ann Hershberger won over Mrs. Connelley, 6-4, 6-2, in ladies' singles, while in boys' singles, Rocky Klosteman blanked Randy Wiemer, 6-0, 6-0.

Two Americans, South African Star At Forest Hills

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Hugh Sweeney, a rugged individualist who plays in long white flannels, a University of Pennsylvania sophomore and a young South African with a sparkling style were the stars of the opening qualifying matches Wednesday in the National Tennis Championships.

Sweeney, a suave, mustachioed advertising executive from Houston, crushed Manuel Valasco of Bolivia 6-0, 6-2, 6-4. Only Bailey Brown, a Penn student from Bronxville, N.Y., did a quicker job, beating T. Gursoy of Turkey in 43 minutes, 6-0, 6-0, 6-0.

Their performances were matched by 21-year-old Terry Ryan of Johannesburg who, after a shaky start, smashed down John Mangan of Larchmont, N.Y., in a center court match 3-6, 6-2, 6-0, 6-2.

Wednesday's matches plus another qualifying round Thursday will determine 16 players to be placed in the 128-man men's championship starting Friday at the West Side Tennis Club.

Moose Down VFW, 6-1, Can Win Crown Today

Phillips Tosses Six-Hitter, Gets 13-Safety Support

Bombarding VFW ace Tom McLuckie for 13 hits yesterday, the Moose scored a 6-1 triumph over the Vets at Stitcher Field to take a 2-1 edge in the championship finals of the Rocking Chair Softball League.

The Moose gets a chance to take all the marbles today in the fourth game of the series, set for Stitcher Field beginning at 6:15 p. m. The Moose won Monday's opener, 4-1, and VFW came back with an 8-0 triumph Tuesday.

Righthander Hayden Phillips scored his 11th victory against three losses, stopping the Vets on six singles. VFW scored its only run on an error in the bottom of the sixth.

Phillips also drove in his team's first run in the second. The Moose picked up another tally on Herman Lewis' hit in the fourth, then exploded for four runs and five safeties in the seventh.

Lewis opened the big seventh with a single, and Mickey Cunningham followed with a base rap. Donnie Madden singled both runners home. Pete Cecil doubled to drive in the last two Moose tallies.

Madden, Fradiska, Lewis and Cunningham collected two hits each for the winners, while Harry Widdows tripled and Cecil came through with his timely two-bagger.

Jimmy Eckard and Butch Johnson shared four of VFW's six safeties.

Bucs Bop Mets, Cardwell Cops Sixth Straight

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Righthander Don Cardwell, with an assist from ElRoy Face, registered his sixth consecutive victory Wednesday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Mets, 7-2.

Cardwell, who recorded his 13th victory against 12 defeats, was breezing along on a five-hitter going into the ninth when three singles scored a run and brought in Face. The victory moved Cardwell over the .500 mark for the first time this year.

Roberto Clemente got the Pirates their first two runs with his 14th homer in the third inning off Mets' starter and loser Alvin Jackson.

The Mets' inept fielding gave Pittsburgh three more runs in the fifth. With one out Cardwell was safe on Jim Hickman's error. Ron Brand bunted for a single and both he and Cardwell moved up a base when catcher Choo Choo Coleman threw into right field. After Manny Mota walked, Clemente grounded out to score Cardwell and Bill Mazeroski singled to drive in Brand and Mota.

The Pirates got two more in the eighth when Ron Hunt threw wild past first on Bill Virdon's grounder with the bases loaded.

The Mets scored in the sixth on a hit batsman, Duke Snider's double and Frank Thomas' infield out.

Pappas Pitches Orioles To 3-1 Win Over A's

Brandt And Adair Homer For Birds

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Home runs by Jackie Brandt and Jerry Adair backed Milt Pappas' three-hit pitching Wednesday night to give the Baltimore Orioles a 3-1 victory over the Kansas City Athletics.

The Orioles scored all their runs in the second inning after two were out and nobody on off loser Dave Wickersham (10-12). First Brandt hit his 11th homer, then Brooks Robinson walked and Adair cracked his sixth homer.

Pappas, who is now 13-8, pitched his third three-hitter of the year and had a no-hitter until Manny Jiminez led off the fifth with a solid double. Charley Lau's second home run of the year in the sixth accounted for the only Kansas City run.

Except for Lau's homer, Pappas permitted only one Athletic runner to get as far as third base.

ABOUT THIS QUESTION:

"It took an auto accident to cure me on cut-rate insurance. That's when I discovered my policy didn't pay when I drove a borrowed car—it didn't cover my medical costs — it didn't have an adjuster within 100 miles. Can your agency insure me with a continent-wide company, giving full coverage at standard rates?"

Three Pro Grid Teams That Made 1962 Playoffs Picked To Repeat

Packers, New York And KC Are Choices, Buffalo Is Strong

By STEVE SNIDER
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three of the four teams that made the pro football championship playoffs last year are picked to repeat in 1963.

That means the Green Bay Packers and New York Giants in the National League and the Kansas City Chiefs, who won the American League crown last season as the Dallas Texans. Buffalo is the choice to fill the AFL playoff berth opposite the Chiefs.

Two additional categories probably are necessary in the NFL forecast:

1. Best darkhorse—Dallas Cowboys in the Eastern Division.

2. Shakiest pick—New York Giants in the East.

The Giants, who played the rugged Packers in an equally rugged, wind-swept finale last December, have a so-so exhibition record this summer—including a defeat by the Minnesota Vikings—and proved highly vulnerable to injuries among their ball-toters.

Giants Have Tittle

Still, when the chips are down, there's old Y. A. Tittle to fire 'em up and the opposition in the Eastern Division is such the Giants have to be counted in.

The Packers, even without the suspended Paul Hornung and the early exhibition loss to the Chicago College All-Stars, are beginning to pour it on in midseason style and seem to be loaded for a third straight National title.

A shot at the order of finish:

NFL, East—New York, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Dallas, Washington, St. Louis, Philadelphia.

NFL, West — Green Bay, Detroit, Chicago, Baltimore, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Minnesota.

AFL, East — Buffalo, Houston, Boston, New York.

AFL, West — Kansas City, San Diego, Denver, Oakland.

As the cynics say in the big town, that list of predictions (and 15 cents) will get you on a subway.

Tough Choice

In this era of high-style football, super-scouting, frequent leg injuries and, of course, the general levelling off in the NFL after so many years of the collegiate draft, pre-season form sheets aren't exactly as positive as a flier on the New York Yankees in baseball.

Detroit figures to make it a year-long tussle with the mighty Packers and there are close followers of the Bears who'll tell you George Halas is beefing up his monster defense to a point of presenting a major threat in the West. And unless the Giants find a few right answers before the openers, the race in the East will become a wild scramble.

Quarterback Len Dawson leads the transplanted Dallas Texans into Kansas City as defending AFL champs, but San Diego, floored by early injuries last season, is bound to be troublesome in the West. Buffalo, with Cookie Gilchrist, closed strongly last year and rates a shot in the East over Houston's division chaps of '62.

CUPID CALLED THIS PLAY—West Virginia's ace quarterback, Jerry Yost, is seen with his bride, the former Kay Cosgray, after marriage at Rogersville, Pa., his home town. Yost now will report to the Mountaineers' training camp to prepare for the 1963 season.

AMA Offers Safety Tips To Gridders

Five Basic Rules Can Cut Injuries

CHICAGO (UPI) — Youthful football players should wait on the sidelines and study a few safety rules before heading onto the sandlots for another football season.

This was the warning issued Wednesday by the American Medical Association (AMA). Parents also can help enforce safety, the AMA added.

"Injuries can be held to a minimum, often prevented," the Ama said, by following five basic rules of safety.

"Bumps and bruises are piling up on the practice fields and sandlots" already, but many of them are unnecessary, the AMA said.

The AMA offered these tips:

—Proper physical conditioning. "The body hardened by training will resist injury and will be less prone to fatigue."

—Careful coaching. "The athlete who knows how to block and tackle in the right way is much less likely to get hurt."

—Good officiating. "The referee who knows his job and knows how to control the game adds much to the fun and safety of the sport."

Liston Attracts 10,000 In Sweden

MALMOE, Sweden (UPI) — Heavyweight champion Sonny Liston attracted more than 10,000 fans to People's Park here Wednesday night for his second exhibition in Sweden.

Liston was presented from the stage by the Swedish promotor Edwin Ahlqvist, who questioned him about his training and future.

"As I have said many times before I would prefer to meet Ingemar Johansson instead of Cassius Clay," Liston said.

After shadow boxing, punching of the bag, and skipping rope, Liston boxed two rounds with sparmate Foneda Cox.

Tigers Roar To Seventh Win In Row

Angels Beaten By Lary, 2-1

DETROIT (UPI) —The surging Detroit Tigers took advantage of an unearned run to win their seventh straight game Wednesday, a 2-1 triumph over the Los Angeles Angels behind the seven-hit pitching of Frank Lary.

Detroit only got seven hits off loser Dean Chance but combined three of them along with an error in the fourth inning by first baseman Lee Thomas to push across two runs and extend its longest winning streak of the year.

Al Kaline reached first to lead off the fourth inning when Thomas dropped a throw from third baseman Frank Kostro. Rocky Colavito then singled Kaline to third and Norm Cash blasted a long double off the glove of centerfielder Albie Pearson to score Kaline. Bubba Phillips followed with a single scoring Cash for the winning run.

Lary, making a big comeback after being hampered by arm trouble, pitched his fourth straight complete game. Lary picked up his fourth win against six losses.

Jim Fregosi homered with one out in the fifth inning for the only run off Lary. He only gave up one hit the rest of the way after the homer.

Tiger-Giardello Fight In Works

NEW YORK (AP)—The Garden State Sports Corporation announced Wednesday it hoped to set up a middleweight championship fight between Dick Tiger of Nigeria, the titleholder, and Joey Giardello of Philadelphia, a leading contender. Neither a site nor a date has been determined.

Murray Goodman, representing the promoters, said that Joe Bonaccurso, a Philadelphia meat packer, and other friends of Giardello had raised $100,000 as a minimum guarantee for Tiger and that they were giving a check for $10,000 to Nat Fleischer of Ring Magazine to hold as an indication of good faith.

Goodman mentioned as possible sites for the fight Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Las Vegas, Bozeman, Mont., or a city in New Jersey.

There was $208,562 uncashed mutuel tickets at the New York race tracks last year.

Dodger Coaches Warned About Second-Guessing

Bavasi Holds Meeting Behind Closed Doors

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Herald-Examiner reported Wednesday that Los Angeles Dodger General Manager E. J. (Buzzie) Bavasi held a closed-door meeting with coaches in which he warned any public second-guessing of manager Walt Alston would lead to dismissal.

Alston was present, according to the newspaper report by Bob Hunter. The same story said a similar word of caution was extended to players.

Bavasi declined to confirm or deny the report.

The Dodgers currently lead the National League by 6½ games, despite a brief hitting slump which saw them lose four of their last six games.

The same Herald-Examiner report indicated there had been previous incidents of second-guessing that precipitated the general manager's asserted move.

But the story also reported morale appeared high Tuesday night.

The Dodger front office gave Alston a vote of confidence after the club lost the pennant in the final days of the 1962 season.

Bavasi at the start of this season personally gave what was described as a pep talk to the Dodgers before a game in Chicago to help ease tension left over from the 1962 debacle.

The Dodgers last season led by four games with a week to play, but ended in a tie with the San Francisco Giants. They lost the playoff to the Giants, who in turn bowed to the New York Yankees in the World Series.

Two Veterans Cut By NFL Giants

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — The New York Giants of the National Football League Wednesday released veteran two-way tackle Charlie Janerette and offensive end Jim Collier, reducing the squad to 42 men.

Janerette, who stands 6-3 and weighs 250 pounds, is a former Penn State star who was acquired by the Giants in a trade with the Minnesota Vikings in 1961. Collier, 6-2 and 195 pounds, played for the University of Arkansas. Janerette was starting his fourth year in the NFL and Collier his second.

Collier scored the Giants' only touchdown in last season's 16-7 playoff defeat at the hands of the Green Bay Packers when he recovered a blocked kick in the end zone.

The national championship drag races will be held in Indianapolis over the Labor Day weekend with $50,000 in prizes on tap.

Aguirre Fined $100

DETROIT (AP)—Hank Aguirre of the Detroit Tigers was notified Wednesday that he was fined $100 for a vehement argument with umpire Sam Carrigan.

A new booklet out by the Thailand Boxing Association reveals that fighters in that land must keep their toenails short because dexterous use of the hard-rock feet is part of the action.

Ford Hurls Yanks Over Boston, 4-1; Giants Overpower Cards, 5-3

Whitey Posts 19th Victory, Takes AL Lead

Three Runs Score On Wild Pitches; Stuart Raps 34th

NEW YORK (UPI) —Southpaw Whitey Ford breezed to his 19th victory with a five-hitter Wednesday when the New York Yankees took advantage of three wild pitches by Earl Wilson to beat the Boston Red Sox, 4-1.

Boston's only run resulted from Dick Stuart's 34th homer in the second inning.

Wilson's wildness allowed the Yankees to score three of their runs and Bobby Richardson's bases - loaded sacrifice fly accounted for the other.

Ford, meanwhile, struck out six batters as he took over the American League lead in victories. He now is only four strikeouts shy of the club's record of 1,530 set by Red Ruffing.

In handing Wilson his 15th defeat in 24 decisions, the Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the first when Phil Linz scored from third on a wild pitch after leading off with a single and moving to third on a walk and an outfield fly.

After Stuart's homer tied the score, Richardson's second-inning sacrifice fly made it 2-1 and the Yankees tallied their final two runs in the fourth as a result of two more wild pitches. On the second of these, Clete Boyer and Linz raced home from second and third.

Twins Recall 15 From Minor Leagues

MINNEAPOLIS St. PAUL (UPI) —The Minnesota Twins Wednesday announced they were recalling 15 minor league players to their roster, seven of which will report to the club next month.

The Twins also announced they would operate a winter instructional league team at St. Petersburgh, Fla. Del Wilber will manage the club and Pete Appleton will act as pitching coach.

CONFUSING, ISN'T IT?—It's plenty crowded along the third base line in the fourth inning of yesterday's game at Yankee Stadium as the Boston Red Sox close in on New York runner Hector Lopez (11). Already on third is Clete Boyer of the Yanks as Boston catcher Bob Tillman (10) chases Lopez back toward third. Guarding third is Boston shortstop Ed Bressoud, with Roman Mejias (rear) backing him up. During the rundown, Lopez made three slides before being called out. Boyer was safe on the advance from second. (AP Photofax)

Mays Playing Heart Out, But Giants Won't Respond

Wondrous Willie Doing Everything But Lead Prayers

By HAL WOOD
UPI Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Wonderful Willie Mays, the world's greatest baseball performer, is playing his heart out in an effort to carry the San Francisco Giants to their second straight National League pennant.

But the Giants just seem to refuse to be ignited by the sparks that fly from the most colorful and capable player in the game today.

Mays has done just about everything but lead pre - game prayers in an effort to get his teammates to join in a win streak. But the club can't seem to get going.

During the month of August, the team barely has been playing .500 ball. But during that time, Willie has:

—Hit in 25 of the last 26 games.

—Hit .417 with 37 hits in 89 times at bat for the month.

—Led the club in every offensive department except doubles and home runs.

"It's possible that Willie is playing the great baseball of his fantastic career," says Russ Hodges, the broadcaster who has seen just about every major league game Willie played.

Mays, in addition to his batting feats, which have raised his average well above the .300 mark has made unbelievable plays in other departments.

The other day against Milwaukee, Lee Mave hit a sinking liner between the outfielders. Willie took off, left his feet and caught the ball while flying through the air parallel to the ground.

Two weeks ago in Cincinnati, Willie raced back to the score board and leaped high for a ball that was going far over his head. The jump appeared to be too soon, but if you can believe the players, Willie just hung in the air until the ball reached his glove.

In Philadelphia, Ruben Amaro hit a double behind Matty Alou in right field. Mays ran behind Alou to pick up the ball and nailed Amaro going into the third. (The Philadelphia fans, instead of cheering Willie, booed Amaro.)

He hit a tape-masure home run over the centerfield fence at Candlestick Park on Sunday. It landed 430 feet from home plate—which isn't extraordinary. But the fact that the ball never appeared to get more than 20 feet high and that it was into a sidewind made it an impossible blow.

Twice in one night against St. Louis he shocked the Cardinal infield. He went from first to third on a routine infield out, shortstop to first. And he went from first to third another time on a short single over second when he caught the center fielder off guard with a throw to the wrong base.

Fans who used to come to Candlestick to boo Mays, now come to applaud—and they bring out-of-town visitors to show him off, much as they would the Golden Gate Bridge.

Haller Homers Twice: O'Dell Gets 12th Win

Cepeda And Hiller Also Rap Gibson For Four-Baggers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Tom Haller clouted two home runs and Orlando Cepeda and Chuck Hiller chipped in with one each Wednesday to power the San Francisco Giants to a 5-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

All of the San Francisco homers were hit off loser Bob Gibson, who went the distance and was charged with his eighth defeat against 14 wins.

Hiller hit his sixth homer of the year in the first after Harvey Kuenn had singled. Haller got his 11th in the second inning and 12th in the fourth, both with the bases empty. Cepeda got his 22nd after Haller in the fourth.

The Giants cracked St. Louis pitching for seven home runs in the last two games.

Billy O'Dell, going the distance, set the Cards down with 6 hits to capture his 12th victory against six losses. The Cardinals got two runs in the second inning on a single by George Altman, a walk to Julian Javier and Gibson's two-out double. They got their other tally in the seventh on a single by Javier, a walk to Gibson and Curt Flood's single.

Walston Released By AFL Patriots

ANDOVER, Mass. (UPI)—Bobby Walston, the second highest scorer in National Football League history, was given his release Wednesday by the Boston Patriots.

Patriots' coach Mike Holovak said the 34-year-old Walston requested the release.

Walston was signed by the Patriots in June as a free agent. He had asked for and received a retirement release from the Philadelphia Eagles following a brilliant 12-year career during which he served as a split end, tight end and one of the top field goal and point-after experts in NFL history.

He played 219 consecutive games for the Eagles.

Walston Released By AFL Patriots

ANDOVER, Mass. (UPI)—Bobby Walston, the second highest scorer in National Football League history, was given his release Wednesday by the Boston Patriots.

Patriots' coach Mike Holovak said the 34-year-old Walston requested the release.

Walston was signed by the Patriots in June as a free agent. He had asked for and received a retirement release from the Philadelphia Eagles following a brilliant 12-year career during which he served as a split end, tight end and one of the top field goal and point-after experts in NFL history.

He played 219 consecutive games for the Eagles.

Phillies Smash Three Homers, Top Cubs, 8-7

Reliefer Duren Shuts Off Rally

CHICAGO (UPI) —Home runs by Wes Covington, John Callison, Clay Dalrymple and Ryne Duren's clutch relief pitching Wednesday carried the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-7 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

It was the 12th win in the last 15 games for the Phils.

Covington lined a bases-empty shot over the left field wall with two outs in the first inning to put the Phils ahead to stay despite a three-run Chicago rally in the eighth, which cut the margin to 8-7.

Dalrymple also homered with the bases empty, and Callison, the club leader, belted his 20th to lead off the seventh inning against Tom Baker, fifth of six Chicago pitchers.

The Cubs routed Phils starter Chris Short with a two-run burst in the fifth, and chased Dallas Green in the eighth on a double by Billy Williams, three singles, an error and a wild pitch which brought home three runs after one out.

Duren came on, getting Andre Rodgers on an infield grounder which forced Lou Brock at the plate, and then struck out Nelson Mathews to end the threat. The victory went to Green, upping his record to 5-3.

Callison led the Phils' 15-hit assault with his home run, a triple and a single in five trips to the plate. Tony Gonzalez contributed two doubles and a single, and rookie Bobby Wine singled three times.

Bi-State Pony Finals To Open

The championship playoffs in the Bi-State Pony League get under way today at Westernport's Memorial Park, where Westernport will host the Frostburg Mounties at 5:30 p. m.

A protest filed by Lonaconing following its 13-7 loss to the Mounties in the final game of the semi-finals has been disallowed.

Westernport copped two straight games from Mt. Savage, 5-3 and 1-0, to advance to the finals. The Mounties won two of three games from Coney in their heated, protest-marred series.

The championship finals will be a best-of-three series. The second game is set for next Tuesday and the third, if necessary will be next Thursday.

Yanks At Baltimore

BALTIMORE — The current Oriole home stand concludes this weekend with the New York Yankees making their final Baltimore appearance of the 1963 season. The Yankees, who appear to have all but mathematically cinched another flag, are here for single night games on Friday and Saturday and a single afternoon game on Sunday.

David Baugh, son of Slingin' Sammy Baugh, will be a sophomore halfback candidate at Texas Tech this fall.

FAMILY AFFAIR—One-half of the Harold Connolly track and field "team," Mrs. Connolly, tugs at her sweat pants during an international meet in Stockholm, where both performed. She is the former Olga Fikitova, Olympic star from Czechoslovakia who met Connolly, the Olympic discus champ, during the 1956 Games in Australia and later married him.

Denver Open Begins Today

Two Handicaps Face Tourney

DENVER (UPI) — The $35,000 Denver Open golf tournament gets underway Thursday at the lush and narrow Denver Country Club with two old handicaps still around.

Last year, the Denver Open was held without golfdom's big three —Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player, who were playing in the World Series of Golf in Akron, Ohio.

Conflicts again will keep them from the tournament. Two other big winners, Julius Boros and Tony Lema, will be missing also.

Last year, low temperatures hampered golfers, and discouraged galleries. This year the air again is cool and drizzly.

Despite the lack of the five top money winners, Noble Chalfant, Denver Country Club pro and head of the sponsoring Golf Inc., is optimistic about a good and profitable tournament.

"We've got Bob Goalby, last year's champion, and a lot of real fine golfers here," Chalfant said. "We just broke even last year. I think we netted about $162, but I think we'll do better this year."

If not, Chalfant said, "this might be the last Denver Open."

Chalfant was upset at losing the big three for the second straight year. "Any gate is going to suffer when you don't have golfers of that caliber playing. But, there's just too many conflicts."

The Denver Country Club, situated in the heart of the mile high city, favors a long, straight hitter. The course will play 35-35—70 over 6,790 yards. Narrow fairways will offer the greatest challenge to the golfers.

Entered in the tournament are Dave Hill, Bob Duden, Jerry Barber, Jacky Cupit, Bob Rosburg, Tommy Jacobs, Billy Casper, George Bayer, Bob Charles and Art Wall Jr. Ten amateurs also will compete.

Giants' Fans Pay Musial Tribute

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Stan Musial, making his last visit to San Francisco as a player, was given a standing ovation of several minutes Wednesday when he appeared at home plate to receive a plaque.

The plaque was presented to him by Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, in recognition of Musial's outstanding contributions to baseball.

Musial was not in the starting lineup as the St. Louis Cardinals played the Giants.

Phillies Smash Three Homers, Top Cubs, 8-7

Reliefer Duren Shuts Off Rally

CHICAGO (UPI) —Home runs by Wes Covington, John Callison, Clay Dalrymple and Ryne Duren's clutch relief pitching Wednesday carried the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-7 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

It was the 12th win in the last 15 games for the Phils.

Covington lined a bases-empty shot over the left field wall with two outs in the first inning to put the Phils ahead to stay despite a three-run Chicago rally in the eighth, which cut the margin to 8-7.

Dalrymple also homered with the bases empty, and Callison, the club leader, belted his 20th to lead off the seventh inning against Tom Baker, fifth of six Chicago pitchers.

The Cubs routed Phils starter Chris Short with a two-run burst in the fifth, and chased Dallas Green in the eighth on a double by Billy Williams, three singles, an error and a wild pitch which brought home three runs after one out.

Duren came on, getting Andre Rodgers on an infield grounder which forced Lou Brock at the plate, and then struck out Nelson Mathews to end the threat. The victory went to Green, upping his record to 5-3.

Callison led the Phils' 15-hit assault with his home run, a triple and a single in five trips to the plate. Tony Gonzalez contributed two doubles and a single, and rookie Bobby Wine singled three times.

Hyndman Downs Corgs, 5-1, Ups Playoff Edge

Hyndman shot out to a 2-0 lead in the County Softball League's best-of-five championship finals yesterday by scoring a 5-1 home diamond triumph over Corriganville.

The series continues today at Corriganville, and Hyndman could snare the playoff title by winning. The game gets under way at 6:15 p.m.

Curt Hosselrode fired a four-hitter for Hyndman, yielding a run to the Corgs on a passed ball in the fourth inning.

Solly Emerick led Hyndman's 10-hit attack with a triple and single. Irvin Hosselrode and John Sager collected a pair of singles each for the winners.

Corriganville's four singles were shared by losing pitcher Lee Raygor, Bob Burkett, Jack Lowery and Bill Duckworth.

Bi-State Pony Finals To Open

The championship playoffs in the Bi-State Pony League get under way today at Westernport's Memorial Park, where Westernport will host the Frostburg Mounties at 5:30 p. m.

A protest filed by Lonaconing following its 13-7 loss to the Mounties in the final game of the semi-finals has been disallowed.

Westernport copped two straight games from Mt. Savage, 5-3 and 1-0, to advance to the finals. The Mounties won two of three games from Coney in their heated, protest-marred series.

The championship finals will be a best-of-three series. The second game is set for next Tuesday and the third, if necessary will be next Thursday.

Yanks At Baltimore

BALTIMORE — The current Oriole home stand concludes this weekend with the New York Yankees making their final Baltimore appearance of the 1963 season. The Yankees, who appear to have all but mathematically cinched another flag, are here for single night games on Friday and Saturday and a single afternoon game on Sunday.

David Baugh, son of Slingin' Sammy Baugh, will be a sophomore halfback candidate at Texas Tech this fall.

FAMILY AFFAIR—One-half of the Harold Connolly track and field "team," Mrs. Connolly, tugs at her sweat pants during an international meet in Stockholm, where both performed. She is the former Olga Fikitova, Olympic star from Czechoslovakia who met Connolly, the Olympic discus champ, during the 1956 Games in Australia and later married him.

Denver Open Begins Today

Two Handicaps Face Tourney

DENVER (UPI) — The $35,000 Denver Open golf tournament gets underway Thursday at the lush and narrow Denver Country Club with two old handicaps still around.

Last year, the Denver Open was held without golfdom's big three —Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player, who were playing in the World Series of Golf in Akron, Ohio.

Conflicts again will keep them from the tournament. Two other big winners, Julius Boros and Tony Lema, will be missing also.

Last year, low temperatures hampered golfers, and discouraged galleries. This year the air again is cool and drizzly.

Despite the lack of the five top money winners, Noble Chalfant, Denver Country Club pro and head of the sponsoring Golf Inc., is optimistic about a good and profitable tournament.

"We've got Bob Goalby, last year's champion, and a lot of real fine golfers here," Chalfant said. "We just broke even last year. I think we netted about $162, but I think we'll do better this year."

If not, Chalfant said, "this might be the last Denver Open."

Chalfant was upset at losing the big three for the second straight year. "Any gate is going to suffer when you don't have golfers of that caliber playing. But, there's just too many conflicts."

The Denver Country Club, situated in the heart of the mile high city, favors a long, straight hitter. The course will play 35-35—70 over 6,790 yards. Narrow fairways will offer the greatest challenge to the golfers.

Entered in the tournament are Dave Hill, Bob Duden, Jerry Barber, Jacky Cupit, Bob Rosburg, Tommy Jacobs, Billy Casper, George Bayer, Bob Charles and Art Wall Jr. Ten amateurs also will compete.

Giants' Fans Pay Musial Tribute

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Stan Musial, making his last visit to San Francisco as a player, was given a standing ovation of several minutes Wednesday when he appeared at home plate to receive a plaque.

The plaque was presented to him by Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, in recognition of Musial's outstanding contributions to baseball.

Musial was not in the starting lineup as the St. Louis Cardinals played the Giants.

Card Of Thanks

We wish to thank all our friends, neighbors and relatives who were so kind to us during the illness and following the death of our wife and mother, Mrs. Helen Phillips. We especially wish to thank the pallbearers, those who sent mass cards, floral tributes, contributions to the Cancer Society and those who donated the use of their cars or otherwise rendered assistance.

'Y' Rec Club Dances Popular

Over 13,000 teen-agers have attended Friday night Rec Club dances since September 1962 at Central YMCA.

During the previous year about 10,000 teen-agers participated in the program.

The dances will not be held tomorrow night or on September 6, as the YMCA gymnasium floor is being reconditioned.

With the beginning of the dancing season on September 13, new Rec Club membership cards will be issued. The card and a small admission fee are required of those attending the dances.

Teen-agers interested in application for the newly-formed Rec Club Council may ask at the Rec Club main desk.

Rec Club dances are directed by the YMCA under supervision of Benjamin Haines, "Y" secretary. Assisting him as supervisors are Mrs. Rubye Davis, Mrs. Margaret Enlow, Charles Miller Sr. and other members of the YMCA staff.

Final payments to farmers taking part in the 1963 wheat, stabilization program and the 1963 feed grain program for corn, grain sorghum and barley are in the process of being prepared and will be issued beginning September 16, Bradye H. Dolly, chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee, announced yesterday.

Advance payments were made to many producers at the time they signified their intention of participating in the programs as a means of helping them to meet their production expenses. These final payments include the special wheat and feed grain price-support payments which are a new feature of this year's diversion programs.

Expected total 1963 feed grain payments to participating farmers in Allegany County for diverting approximately 550 acres out of barley, corn and grain sorghums will be $14,422. In addition these producers will receive a price support payment based on the established normal yield for the crop for the farm times the acres of feed grain planted for harvest.

Mr. Dolly said that compliance with provisions of the wheat stabilization and feed grain programs does not end with receipt of the final program payments. The land retired from production is to be protected and may not be harvested throughout the calendar year 1963. It may be grazed after October 1, 1963. A violation of these or other program provisions could result in a substantial loss to the producer, Mr. Dolly said.

WVU Scientist Gets Grant To Study Boron

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (UPI)—Dr. Elon G. Scott, West Virginia University chairman of horticulture, has received a $10,400 grant from the National Science Foundation to investigate the part that boron plays in the growth and development of plants.

Boron, a non-metallic element, is one of the 12 mineral elements essential to plant health. For example, Scott said, "cork spot" in apples, a boron deficiency disease, occasionally ruins as much as 10 per cent of the West Virginia apple crop.

Scott currently is in Europe, consulting with scientists and observing horticultural research in Germany, Holland and England. The trip was financed by the Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation of Pittsburgh and West Virginia University Foundation Inc.

Shaffer Succeeds Todd H. Bullard

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. (UPI)—Dallas Shaffer, 30, will serve as acting director of West Virginia University's Parkersburg branch, succeeding Todd H. Bullard who was named dean of Potomac State College.

Shaffer is working on his doctorate at WVU. The McDowell County native was a history instructor at Fairmont State College before joining WVU branch faculty last year.

Since 1957, the number of visitors to national forests in this nation has nearly doubled.

Over 13,000 teen-agers have attended Friday night Rec Club dances since September 1962 at Central YMCA.

During the previous year about 10,000 teen-agers participated in the program.

The dances will not be held tomorrow night or on September 6, as the YMCA gymnasium floor is being reconditioned.

With the beginning of the dancing season on September 13, new Rec Club membership cards will be issued. The card and a small admission fee are required of those attending the dances.

Teen-agers interested in application for the newly-formed Rec Club Council may ask at the Rec Club main desk.

PE Heat Plant Abandonment Hearing Opens

Service Would End In September 1964

The Public Service Commission began hearings yesterday in Baltimore on a petition filed by the Potomac Edison Company to abandon its steam heat plant in Cumberland.

The PE in its original petition had asked to discontinue service to 20 of its customers on December 1, but yesterday it amended the petition so no service would be discontinued until September 1, 1964, and the PSC gave its approval.

George R. Hughes Jr., local attorney, at yesterday's hearing represented a group of downtown businessmen who oppose PE's petition.

He said last night PE presented its side of the case at yesterday's hearing and the PSC postponed the hearing indefinitely to allow the opposition to prepare its side of the case. Attorney Francis Gallgher of Baltimore also represents the local group.

Cites Business Losses

PE filed its original petition late in July, saying the steam heating business has been conducted at a loss and that these operating losses have increased sharply in recent years.

PE originally requested to discontinue service on December 1 to 20 of its customers "because of the extensive deterioration of the distribution facilities" serving these customers. However, this part of the petition was amended at yesterday's hearing.

The petition also requests that service to its 40 other customers would be ended on September 1, 1964.

Would Finance Conversion

PE's petition also offered an alternative plan of heating at the utility's expense. Each customer, under terms of the petition, would be given the choice of converting to an all-electric heating system, financed entirely by PE, or converting to some other type of heat.

If another heating is chosen, PE would pay the customer the necessary cost of conversion, with the understanding that in no case would this payment exceed the necessary cost of converting to electric heat.

Mr. Hughes said surveys are being conducted at present on the cost of various heating systems, but these will not be completed for some time.

Chief Warrant Officer John L. Byrd Sr. of Frostburg administers the oath of enlistment to his eldest son, John L. Jr., who joined Naval Reserve Division 5-9 (L). The father is a veteran Navy man, having served during World War II as an enlisted man. The son enters Frostburg State College next month to major in biology.

Naval Reserve Veteran Gives His Son Oath Here

Chief Warrant Officer John L. Byrd Sr. of Frostburg, a man with a colorful record of Navy service during World War II, had the pleasure last night of administering the oath of allegiance to his eldest son, John L. Byrd Jr., as the latter became a seaman recruit in United States Naval Reserve Surface Division 5-9 (L).

The ceremony took place during the regular weekly training session of the surface division at the Naval Reserve Armory on McKaig's Hill.

The new enlistee was graduated from LaSalle High School in June. He has enrolled for the fall semester at Frostburg State College, where he will major in biology.

As a Naval reservist attending college, the younger Byrd will be deferred from active duty until after college graduation, will attend weekly training sessions in Cumberland with pay, will perform two weeks of training duty each summer and will retain all promotions and retirement credits earned before going to active duty after completion of his education.

Eligible For Commission

Meanwhile, as a college student he becomes eligible to apply for one of several types of officer training, completion of which would earn him a cimmission at the time of graduation.

The elder Byrd enlisted as an apprentice seaman at Florence, S.C., September 21, 1939. After recruit training at Norfolk, Va., he was assigned to the USS Omaha (CA 6) on Atlantic escort duty and South Atlantic patrol.

The Omaha was one of three ships that captured a German cargo ship running the blockade into Hamburg with rubber and sulphur for Nazi Germany. The German crew attempted to scuttle the ship but quick action by the U.S. Navy boarding party prevented the sinking.

She was towed to San Juan, Puerto Rico, where the crew members were interned as prisoners of war and the ship turned over to the U. S. Maritime Commission. After the war the ship and cargo were sold to a private shipper for more than $1,000,000.

During the capture, Byrd was bowhook on a whaleboat that carried members of the boarding party from the Omaha to the German vessel. He and all crew members received a "bonus" of $700. Had he been taken aboard the stricken ship to save her his share of the prize would have been $3,000.

After two-and-one-half years on the Omaha and advancement to gunner's mate, third class, Byrd served for 18 months aboard the USS Brennan (DE 13) which was a subchaser school training ship based at Miami. From this duty he went to the USS Hornet (CVA 12), a new aircraft carrier. Following a shakedown cruise, his ship went to the Pacific area via the Panama Canal and served there for the remainder of World War II.

Tough Tomato Plant Has Fruit, Indoors Or Out

A Beall Street woman feels she has quite a faithful tomato plant since it produced outdoors during two growing seasons and also indoors last winter.

In the spring of 1962 Miss Mira S. Fuller of 404 Beall Street noticed a small tomato plant growing between bricks in the walkway alongside her house.

She gently pulled it and transplanted it among other tomato plants and flowers which were flourishing in a small area close to the house.

The plant burst into bloom and produced a couple of tomatoes last summer. As fall approached Miss Fuller placed the plant in a pot and took it indoors, where it bloomed and bore another tomato during the winter. The plant grew a little over two feet tall.

This spring she transplanted it outdoors, and this summer the plant produced four tomatoes. The plant now stands over five feet tall.

Miss Fuller said the plant has been so faithful she hates to destroy it, so she plans to re-pot it and take it into the house again.

Bowling Green Sewers Bids Sought Again

Successful Bidders Decline Contract

Because the low bidders did not accept the contract which was awarded to them earlier this month, the Allegany County Sanitary Commission is readvertising for bids on the collecting sewers for the Bowling Green Sanitary District.

New bids on Contract No. 1 will be received by the sanitary commission until 8 p. m. Monday, September 9, when they will be opened at the Court House.

Back on August 1, the Hout Construction Company and the John I. Vandegrift Company were awarded the contract by the sanitary commission on Contract No. 1 on their joint low bid of $473,057.50.

Documents necessary to the fulfillment of the contract were not returned to the commission by the designated time.

Higher Bids Rejected

When no action was taken to complete the documents, the sanitary commission on August 16 considered the low bidders in default on the contract. At the same time the three higher bids on this contract were rejected.

This contract calls for laying 17,420 feet of six-inch sanitary collecting sewers, 19,385 feet of eight-inch sanitary sewers and 8,620 feet of six-inch house connections. It also includes installation of 1,490 vertical feet of brick or precast concrete manholes on existing sewers and 233 manholes, frames and covers, along with excavation, refill, sheeting, shoring and related work.

Time Is Extended

The commission has extended the time for a decision on Contract No. 2, which calls for interceptor sewers, sewage treatment plant and sewage ejector station. J. Ernest Wilson, trading as Wilson Contracting Company, was the low bidder with a proposal of $444,444 when they were opened June 17.

Action on this second contract has been deferred pending the completion of a study on the possibility of bringing sewage from Cresaptown, Potomac Park, Bowling Green and Roberts Place to the Cumberland sewage treatment plant by way of the Western Maryland Railway tunnel through Knobley Mountain. The county commissioners on July 30 authorized expenditure of $1,000 for this feasibility study.

Police Arrest Local Man On Check Charges

A local man was arrested yesterday morning by city police in connection with the issuance of fraudulent checks in Virginia during May.

Billy E. Blevins, who told police he lived at 114 Bedford Street, was taken into custody at a local hospital by City Police Detective Capt. James E. Van and was held for action of the detective bureau.

A state warrant sworn to by Capt. Van charges that Blevins issued six fraudulent checks for various amounts in Virginia and now is a fugitive from Virginia Beach, Va., where six warrants have been issued for his arrest.

Capt. Van said last night that Virginia authorities notified him that they believed Blevins was in the Cumberland area.

Upon investigation, Van learned the man was in a local hospital, and he was taken into custody before being released from the institution.

Blevins is being sought on two felony charges and four misdemeanors, according to Van, who said Virginia authorities are expected to arrive here today to pick up the local man and return him to that state for prosecution.

Washingtonians Lease Lot Here

Two Washington business men have leased this city's newest downtown parking lot for $800 a month, according to a 12-year lease filed for record yesterday in the office of Joseph E. Boden, clerk of Allegany County Circuit Court.

This parking lot is on the north side of Baltimore Street at the west side of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad right-of-way. To make room for the parking lot the old building formerly known as the Revere House and more recently used as a wholesale grocery business was torn down.

The Downtown Parking Corporation leased the lot to Sergius Gambal and Thaddeus A. Lindner, partners, 2140 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington. The lease runs for 12 years, from August 1, 1963, until July 31, 1975.

The Liberty Trust Company joined as third party in the lease as holder of the mortgage on the lot.

Deadline Near For Discount On County Tax

$89,494 Collected During August

Allegany County Tax Collector Francis G. Philpot yesterday reminded taxpayers that time is running out for them to take advantage of the three per cent discount available on county and special taxing area real estate, personal property and corporation taxes.

The collector's office at the Court House will be open from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. today and tomorrow. However, taxpayers are being urged to mail their returns to the collector. Any mailed returns postmarked before midnight Saturday will be entitled to the three per cent discount.

In September the gross amount will be charged with neither discount nor interest. The interest, at one-half per cent per month, starts October 1.

August collections, including state, county and special taxing area real estate, personal property and corporation taxes have added up to $89,494.49 through yesterday. An upsurge is expected in these final days of August because this month's collections generally are on a par with those for July.

In July, county tax collections alone reached $137,057.84 when a four per cent discount was allowed. During June, the month for a five per cent discount, county tax collections were a whopping $3,322,755.22. The two-month county total was $3,459,813.06. That was more than 89 per cent of the total anticipated by the county commissioners in the entire fiscal year when they set the tax rate at $2.05 on each $100 of assessed valuation back in early April.

Bills were mailed out just before the first of June.

Strasburg is about 83 miles from Cumberland, while Frederick is 93 miles away.

The interstate meeting involving conservationists from Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia, will be held Thursday and Friday, October 3 and 4, at the General Wayne Motor Inn, Waynesboro, Va.

The October 3 sessions will be devoted to presentations dealing with the general theme, "Water Resources in the Economic Development of the Shenandoah Valley." The second day will be spent in a tour of present and projected water development projects in the valley.

Strike Averted; Railroaders Here To Work As Usual

Railroad workers of Cumberland will be on the job as usual today as the anticipated rail lines strike scheduled today at 12:01 a.m. was averted by legislation passed yesterday by Congress and signed by President Kennedy.

Herman A. Snoots, road foreman of engines on the B&O's Cumberland Division, said last night that work here will go on as usual today since the strike had been called off.

Yesterday Congress passed legislation requiring arbitartion of the dispute and the bill was signed by President Kennedy barely 90 minutes after the House passed it.

Police Arrest Local Man On Check Charges

A local man was arrested yesterday morning by city police in connection with the issuance of fraudulent checks in Virginia during May.

Billy E. Blevins, who told police he lived at 114 Bedford Street, was taken into custody at a local hospital by City Police Detective Capt. James E. Van and was held for action of the detective bureau.

A state warrant sworn to by Capt. Van charges that Blevins issued six fraudulent checks for various amounts in Virginia and now is a fugitive from Virginia Beach, Va., where six warrants have been issued for his arrest.

Capt. Van said last night that Virginia authorities notified him that they believed Blevins was in the Cumberland area.

Upon investigation, Van learned the man was in a local hospital, and he was taken into custody before being released from the institution.

Blevins is being sought on two felony charges and four misdemeanors, according to Van, who said Virginia authorities are expected to arrive here today to pick up the local man and return him to that state for prosecution.

Washingtonians Lease Lot Here

Two Washington business men have leased this city's newest downtown parking lot for $800 a month, according to a 12-year lease filed for record yesterday in the office of Joseph E. Boden, clerk of Allegany County Circuit Court.

This parking lot is on the north side of Baltimore Street at the west side of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad right-of-way. To make room for the parking lot the old building formerly known as the Revere House and more recently used as a wholesale grocery business was torn down.

The Downtown Parking Corporation leased the lot to Sergius Gambal and Thaddeus A. Lindner, partners, 2140 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington. The lease runs for 12 years, from August 1, 1963, until July 31, 1975.

The Liberty Trust Company joined as third party in the lease as holder of the mortgage on the lot.

Deadline Near For Discount On County Tax

$89,494 Collected During August

Allegany County Tax Collector Francis G. Philpot yesterday reminded taxpayers that time is running out for them to take advantage of the three per cent discount available on county and special taxing area real estate, personal property and corporation taxes.

The collector's office at the Court House will be open from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. today and tomorrow. However, taxpayers are being urged to mail their returns to the collector. Any mailed returns postmarked before midnight Saturday will be entitled to the three per cent discount.

In September the gross amount will be charged with neither discount nor interest. The interest, at one-half per cent per month, starts October 1.

August collections, including state, county and special taxing area real estate, personal property and corporation taxes have added up to $89,494.49 through yesterday. An upsurge is expected in these final days of August because this month's collections generally are on a par with those for July.

In July, county tax collections alone reached $137,057.84 when a four per cent discount was allowed. During June, the month for a five per cent discount, county tax collections were a whopping $3,322,755.22. The two-month county total was $3,459,813.06. That was more than 89 per cent of the total anticipated by the county commissioners in the entire fiscal year when they set the tax rate at $2.05 on each $100 of assessed valuation back in early April.

Bills were mailed out just before the first of June.

River Group Will Hear Va. Congressman

Rep. John O. Marsh Jr., Democrat from Virginia's Seventh Congressional District, has accepted an invitation to address the fall meeting of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin.

Rep. Marsh, a first-term Congressman from Strasburg, Va., said he would appear as banquet speaker provided the press of legislative matters did not detain him in Washington. The Virginia Congressman lives closer to Cumberland than does Rep. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., the Frederick Republican who represents this Western Maryland district. Strasburg is about 83 miles from Cumberland, while Frederick is 93 miles away.

The interstate meeting involving conservationists from Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia, will be held Thursday and Friday, October 3 and 4, at the General Wayne Motor Inn, Waynesboro, Va.

The October 3 sessions will be devoted to presentations dealing with the general theme, "Water Resources in the Economic Development of the Shenandoah Valley." The second day will be spent in a tour of present and projected water development projects in the valley.

Strike Averted; Railroaders Here To Work As Usual

Railroad workers of Cumberland will be on the job as usual today as the anticipated rail lines strike scheduled today at 12:01 a.m. was averted by legislation passed yesterday by Congress and signed by President Kennedy.

COLLECTION DAY TODAY

Tough Tomato Plant Has Fruit, Indoors Or Out

A Beall Street woman feels she has quite a faithful tomato plant since it produced outdoors during two growing seasons and also indoors last winter.

In the spring of 1962 Miss Mira S. Fuller of 404 Beall Street noticed a small tomato plant growing between bricks in the walkway alongside her house.

She gently pulled it and transplanted it among other tomato plants and flowers which were flourishing in a small area close to the house.

The plant burst into bloom and produced a couple of tomatoes last summer. As fall approached Miss Fuller placed the plant in a pot and took it indoors, where it bloomed and bore another tomato during the winter. The plant grew a little over two feet tall.

This spring she transplanted it outdoors, and this summer the plant produced four tomatoes. The plant now stands over five feet tall.

Miss Fuller said the plant has been so faithful she hates to destroy it, so she plans to re-pot it and take it into the house again.
